Mr. Click Relander
City Editor
Yakima Daily Republic
Yakima, Washington

Dear Click:

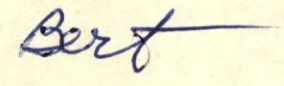

The special recognition given to you last Saturday at the dedication ceremonies for the Priest Rapids Dam was certainly well deserved. You have done more than any other person I know to tell the people of this region about the interesting and important aspects of Indian life.

It is certainly a credit to you and to the newspaper you represent that there has been a steady stream of material flowing from your typewriter into the columns of the Republic for the education and enlightenment of the people. The residents of the Northwest have a much better understanding of the Indian people because of the research you have done and because of the work you have put into your articles and book.

You have been blessed with many talents. It is good that you are sharing the fruits of your talents with so many people.

Best wishes for a long and productive life with continued success.

Sincerely

R. Bert Carter

Dear Mr. Robertson:

A recent article in your newspapers by Click Relander entitled "Twe Nigh E Co Takes Last Lone Journey" prompts me to write you about the special feature coverage you and Mr. Relander have given to Indian events and activities over the years.

Since we live in an area which takes even its name from the Indian culture of bygone days and since we have some 4,500 Indians living amongst us in the Yakima Valley, it appears important to know about these people and their heritage. You and your able staff have recognized the need for giving extensive news coverage to these people.

Mr. Relander has done an outstanding job in research and writing in preparing his articles. He finds some very interesting legends, customs and practices pertaining to the Indians which I enjoy reading in your newspapers. I certainly commend you and Mr. Relander and others of your staff who assist in presenting these excellent articles.

Sincerely yours,

R. Bert Carter
