Yakima, Wash.

Dear Mr. Reander —

We are very much interested in the history and historical landmarks in our state. We go to all parts of the Columbia River Country quite often. As a group of jillies we can't find anyone who can tell us anything about. We were told to write you and if anyone knows you would.

We're going to the Columbia River at Bicleton, just before you go down the canyon into Roosevelt. (on the left) on 2 ridges there are several rock jillies. Forget just how many. I think 6 on one ridge and 3 on the other. (I have slides of them).

They are man made and are jilled up in such a way they have withstood the elements for many, many years. Only 2 or 30 show any damage. Some of tem must be 12 ft. high.
Would sure like to know why and by whom they were made, who ever it might have been—they were very good rock piles.
The way you can see both way
for miles of the Columbia river country leads one to think it must have been the Indians
If you have the note etc. Would appreciate it very much if you could find out something if you don’t know.
Enjoyed your story in the Sunday paper. Answered some of our questions of recent country dates and etc.
Not much of a letter writer—
Yours.
