A YEAR OF MATERIAL GAIN

It Has Been a Notable One—Products Valued at Over $2,000,000.

From a material standpoint the year just closed has been the most notable one in the history of Yakima valley. There have been bounteous crops and extra good markets to take up the surplus, prices have been surprisingly good for almost everything that grows here, with a continuance of the conditions possible. There has been a great gain in the population of the county, hundreds of families have come from the east to make their homes here and commence anew the working out of their fortunes. There have been more residences constructed in the county than for any three years previous and from all indications this wave of building will continue to swell the population of the county. There has been a wonderful increase in the deposits of the people in the various banks of the growing county seat town, and the smaller institutions of neighboring cities have made a showing in this direction that tells the story of the material gain of every class. There are many other things also that go to swell the sum of good things that have come to a thrifty, industrious people.

The building operations in the city, as given in the REPUBLIC last week, were a surprise to everybody. The sixteen business blocks, the 184 other buildings within the city limits, and the manifold improvements in other lines does not tell of all the developments. The story dealt only with the city. In the surrounding country, in the Moxee, the Ahtatum, the Selah and Naches, there have been almost as many new buildings erected.

During the year the four lumber yards, to wit: St. Paul & Tacoma Lumber Co., A. E. Larson, W. M. Watt and D. L. Stone & Son, have received at their yards in this city 856 cars of building lumber. At an average of 22,000 feet to the car the total number of feet that has entered into the buildings of the city and vicinity would be 18,832,000, which at an average price of $22 a thousand feet would be valued at $413,640. This is an enormous sum when one comes to think of it for a small community like Yakima to expend in a year's time merely for the lumber that goes into new buildings.

The following is a conservative estimate of the value of the crops of the Yakima valley for the year 1902:

Hops	$600,000
Sheep	500,000
Creamery and dairy	400,000
Hay	200,000
Wheat	125,000
Cattle and horses	150,000
Potatoes at $7	140,000

Total $2,115,000
Up to the present time 700 car loads of hay, 270 of fruit, 180 of potatoes and 8000 bales of hops have been shipped from the North Yakima railway station. From the other stations in the county it can be safely said that the shipments, except hops, will be about half the above figures.

The wool crop of the county amounted to about 1,700,000 pounds, which at 12 cents would be worth $204,000. There are at present over 200,000 head of sheep in the county, which have an average value of $3 a head, or $600,000. In connection with this it may be said that Coffin Bros. sheared 60,000 sheep at their new shearing plant. They claim that by machine shearing they save 1 1/2 pounds of wool per sheep, which was enough to pay the cost of shearing.

During the year the Yakima Milling company manufactured 61,000 barrels of flour and 40,000 tons of milled feed and rolled oats. Of the flour about one-third was sent to China. This mill furnished a large part of the flour and feed used in the Yakima valley and has been a large purchaser of Washington wheat.

Lost on the Reservation.

J. L. Yantis was lost on the reservation Christmas night. He lives in the city but has a ranch on the reservation. He was bringing a load of hay to this place starting from the ranch before darkness set in. He was accompanied by his boy and drove two teams. One load was brought as far as Union gap, when they left it and went back to the place where the other wagon had been left. They lost the road and wandered around till midnight before the right track was struck that would bring them to civilization again. They got home in time to see Santa Claus going away from his house without leaving them a present.

Schools Open.

All the city schools opened on Monday after a two weeks vacation. There was very large attendance considering the time of the season, the enrollment being larger than at the same time last year. Two rooms were opened in the basement of the Columbia school building with Miss Gano and Miss Barns as teachers. The basement of that building has been fitted up in good condition for school purposes and it is thought this will relieve the crowded condition for a while.

THE FILINGS FOR THE YEAR

1902 Was a Record Breaker in the Land Office in this City.

The year 1902 in the North Yakima land office has been one of a record breaking nature. During the year there were more entries made for land than in the four years previous, there being 992. The total number for 1901 was 351. The entries by class were as follows: Homestead, 730; timber, stone and commuted homesteads, 164; desert, 100.

The homestead entries by the month for 1902 are as follows: January 55, February 26, March 61, April 123, May 146, June 14, July 111, August 46, September 30, October 47, November 44, December 59.

The total number during 1901 was 283, and for the month of December this year, 36. The greatest number of filings were made in May, while in June there were only 14. Final homestead proofs number 87 for 1902 while only 49 were made in 1901.

Masquerade Ball a Success.

The masquerade ball given by the members of the fire department in the armory on Christmas night was the most successful ever held by the company. About 500 people crowded into the large dancing hall to see the 125 masqueraders dressed in all kinds of frolicsome togger. After paying all the expenses, including the prizes amounting to $75, the company had $85 left to go into the treasury. The prizes were won by the following:

Finest costumes—First prize, P. R. Richardson and Miss Florence Kampeter, $20; second, Mr. and Mrs. George Burton, $7 50.

Waltzers—W. B. Young and Miss E. M. Higginbotham, $10.

Trial List Completed.

Judge Rudkin held a short session of court Monday and Tuesday to set the cases for trial at the January term of jury court, and to consider other matters that came before him. The docket will be the longest made up in several years past. There are 14 criminal cases and 25 civil cases set for trial commencing Monday, January 19.

The divorce case of Bert C. Bullock vs. Gertrude A. Bullock came up Monday morning for a hearing, but was continued till today. The principal claim for a divorce is incompatibility. Phoenix Bullock, who was a witness in this case was fined $10 for contempt by Judge Rudkin for smoking in the court room. Mr. Bullock was taken in charge by Deputy Sheriff Sindall for a short time and then sentence was suspended and the fine remitted.

Back Bone of the County.

"Dairying is the backbone of this county," said a prominent business man the other day. "It is better than a manufacturing plant. The sum paid in the valley to dairymen by the creameries and business houses amounts to twelve hundred dollars a day. Did you ever stop to think what this means to the Yakima valley? It means that there is a daily pay roll, which so many cities talk about having, of just that much among the agricultural classes. There is room in the valley for more dairy cattle. The state does not produce one-half enough butter to supply the demand; and but do you wonder that butter now sells at 65 cents for ranch and 75 cents for creamery."

Fire in Photograph Gallery.

A small blaze occurred in the photograph studio of F. W. Beck on First street at about 8 a. m. last Saturday. Some of the partition curtains caught fire and it was only by the quick work of parties who came to the rescue that the building was saved. While the curtains were burning some one tore them down and dragged them to the street. The fire alarm was sounded and in less than four minutes the driver was out with the chemical engine assisting in extinguishing the flames that had begun to burn the paper on the walls of the building. The damage will amount to about $700.

Sickler-Conrad.

J. R. Sickler and Miss Mae Conrad were united in marriage at the home of J. H. Conrad, in the Moxee valley on Christmas day. Rev. Arthur C. Vail performed the ceremony in the presence of a number of friends, following which a dinner was served. The bride is well known in the county having been a teacher in the public schools for several terms.

GOVERNING RURAL CARRIERS

Department Says it is Not Their Place to Make Paths Through the Snow.

The postoffice department has sent out the following notice relative to rural mail carriers which will be of interest to those who receive their mail through that medium:

The department looks to the patrons of the Rural Free Delivery service, who are receiving the benefits of the service, to use their utmost personal endeavors, and also to exert their influence with the road supervisors, or with those officials who are responsible for the condition of the highways; to the end that the roads traveled by rural carriers may be always kept open and in such passable shape that the service can be regularly and punctually performed.

Should the regularity of the service be needlessly destroyed as the result of inattention and lack of care bestowed on the highways, the permanent withdrawal of the delivery will very likely result.

Rural letter carriers are required to serve their routes regularly at all seasons of the year and in every kind of weather when it can be done without seriously impairing their lives or endangering their conveyance or the U. S. mail which is in their custody.

Patrons should clear away the snow drifts, so that carriers can drive up to and reach boxes from their vehicles without dismounting.

It is not a part of the carrier's duty to break out the roads after a severe snow storm.

Rural carriers are expected to energetically try to serve their routes even though the conditions may be extremely adverse, and any undue lack of zeal on their part should be promptly brought to the attention of this office for such action as the merits of the case require.

Fenton-Wilgus.

The wedding of Mr. Fay Fenton and Mrs. Alice M. Wilgus on Christmas eve was one of the prettiest of the season. It was a time of two-fold merriment. Wedding bells and Christmas bells blended their merry chimes. The home of the bride at which the wedding took place was beautifully decorated. Among the chief features of the decorations was a Christmas tree both loaded with and surrounded by presents for the happy couple. The marriage rite was solemnized by Rev. A. C. Vail in the presence of about 20 of the friends and relatives of the bride and groom. At the conclusion of the ceremony the guests were led to the dining room where they did ample justice to the good things with which the table was loaded.

On Friday evening the Women of Woodcraft gave a surprise party in honor of the couple. Music, games and lunch were a part of the evening's program. Mrs. D. L. Thacker in behalf of the lodge presented the best wishes of the circle.

The following were the guests: Nell McKivor, Ella Prentiss, Amy Erickson, Mrs. S. E. Swanson, Mrs. McKivor, Mrs. C. E. Mabry, Mrs. Tamaa Traitt, Estella Erickson, Mrs. A. E. Knerr, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Planing Mill Closed.

A. E. Howard's planing mill has been shut down for two weeks on account of the cold weather stopping building operations. At present there is no demand for mill work, but as soon as the weather breaks there is expected to be a rush. Mr. Howard has prepared for the rush by erecting a larger plant at the corner of D and Selah streets, which will be ready for use some time early this year. Mr. Howard's present place has been purchased by J. H. Hulse & Sons who will put some additions to it and establish a wagon and carriage shop. This firm will manufacture all kinds of vehicles suitable for the Yakima valley and will embrace the whole state if necessary.

Will Not Leave Federation.

J. F. Kunz, clerk of the First Congregational church organization of Sunnyside, has the following to say relative to the item published in the REPUBLIC last week about incorporating and building a church:

"While it is true we are incorporating, yet it is not for the purpose of withdrawing from the Sunnyside Federation, but simply to get the church in shape so that it can hold property, as the property now owned by the church is held in trust by one of its members."

HOPS IN THE YAKIMA VALLEY

The Crop of 1902 is Estimated to be Worth $600,000.

The Yakima crop for the year 1902 aggregates 12,000 bales, or 2,400,000 pounds, the value of which at the present time is $600,000. About 1800 acres is devoted to the culture of this crop in the Yakima valley, so that it will be seen that the average yield per acre is 1333 1/3 pounds. Thus the value of the crop per acre is, at the present high prices, $333. The average cost of production is about 8 cents per pound, or $166 per acre, leaving a net profit of $217 per acre. The expense of raising hops includes labor of the grower and his family, taxes, insurance and other incidentals.

Not all the hop growers of the Yakima valley realized this amount for their crop for the reason that many of them contracted their hops in advance at prices ranging from 9 cents to 16, many of them binding themselves up at 11 cents and 12 cents per pound with contracts running for three years. The grower who sold at 10 cents of course realized a profit, but it would be meager to what has been realized by those who did not make any contracts.

Probably one-half the hops were contracted for at an average of 12 cents per pound and the remainder sold at an average of about 24 cents. The advance in the price represents the profits made by the dealers. Those dealers who held contracts at 10 cents and sold at 25 cents would have a clear profit of 15 cents per pound, while the raiser who did not contract would get this profit. It may be said, however, that some buyers are local people and the profits they make on the hops are spent in the Yakima valley. If the grower who contracted early did not benefit by the raise in price the whole people of the valley have been to some extent the beneficiaries.

The figures given above show something of the importance of the hop industry in this valley. The rank of Yakima as a hopgrowing district is indicated by the relative production for 1902 in this state as follows:

Yakima.....	12,000
Pierce.....	8,000
King.....	3,552
Lewis.....	3,190
Skagit.....	974
Cowlitz.....	922
Chocoma.....	206
Snohomish.....	32
Whatcom.....	39

Total.....28,956

It will be seen by the above figures that Yakima has produced a little less than one-half the hops of the state of Washington. The crop in the state this year is over two thousand bales short of last year's production. This may be accounted for by the decrease in the acreage throughout the state. There was a decrease of nearly 100 acres in the Yakima valley and it is said to be larger in other counties. For the next year there will be an increase of 300 acres, and as the prospects are good for a continued high price in the product the acreage may increase from year to year. One thing that will make this possible is the great decrease in the acreage in New York state, where in some sections hundreds of hop yards have been done away with on account of the pest. There is decrease in the acreage in other parts of the east also.

The failure of a hop crop is unknown in the Yakima valley. Sometimes a crop has been injured by mould on account of inclemency of weather, but it is rarely such a thing happens to the grower of the Yakima valley. In other parts of the state where there is more rain the grower must spray to get rid of the mould and mildew.

The price of land suitable for hop growing, the certainty of a good yield and the low cost of production has given this valley a very decided advantage over other parts of the northwest and also over the eastern parts of the country, so that the acreage may increase year by year. In England the acreage has been decreasing for years, the loss being made up by the increase in this country. Notwithstanding England is the greatest hopgrowing country in the world the trend of things indicates that America will before very long take up the lead.

Land suitable for hop growing can be bought in the valley at an average of $75 per acre. To engage in the business in an ordinary way in the valley requires an initial investment as follows:

Average cost of land at $700 per acre, (20 acres).....$ 2,000

Cost of kiln with all appliances..... 1,500

Cost of hop poles..... 1,600

Hop roots, plowing and planting..... 600

Total investment.....$5,700

In this valley a yard can be planted in the fall and with proper care can be made to produce a small crop of hops the first year and after that the yard will come in full bearing every season. The expense of running a 20 acre yard up to hop picking time, where all the labor is hired, is about $700. The cost, beginning with the picking, varies with the size of the crop. Pickers are employed at the rate of $1 per box, and this, together with wages paid to other laborers of the yard and the cost of curing makes the total cost of production about 8 cents per pound. A grower with a large family can reduce the cost of production materially.

HORTICULTURAL UNION MEETS

Decides on Size of Box to be Used in the Future—New Proposition.

The Yakima Horticultural union met again last Saturday to continue the work of preparing to build a warehouse. The committee that has the matter in charge made the report that it had bought the lot and paid some earnest money on it and that some soliciting had been done for subscriptions. This work was going along smoothly and it was thought that there would not be the least trouble in raising the required sum to build the warehouse.

The committee appointed at a previous meeting to prepare plans and specifications for the proposed buildings made a report. A building 40x100 feet would cost not less than $1800 with a basement under the whole length. Some of the members are in favor of building a smaller warehouse at present and then enlarge on it as the business of the union would in the future require.

The committee on boxes also made a report. The chairman of this committee said he had seen the Cascade Lumber Co., as had been directed, and he did not get a satisfactory answer from the firm. This was owing to the plant of the company not being finished and the business not being in shape that bids could be given. Some dealers were seen relative to boxes and they reported that at present they were unable to give an answer. They had not heard from the mills yet on the price to be asked for boxes during 1902 and in consequence could give no answer. The committee recommended that the box to be used and one that will give the most general satisfaction among all the growers of the valley is the one now in use, which is 10-1-2x11-1-2x18-1-2 inches in dimension. This is the size the delegates who go to Spokane in January are to recommend to the Inland Fruit Growers' union convention.

In its report this committee on boxes said that a representative of the Pennington estate had approached him and asked that he bring before the union the question of buying the Pennington warehouse instead of building a new one. The price asked for the building and lot was fixed at $2500, and liberal terms would be given the union. Considerable discussion was had on this proposition, but nothing was done other than referring it to the present building committee to act on as it deems proper.

Some minor matters were also taken up and discussed and an adjournment was taken till next Saturday afternoon.

Breach of Promise Case Dismissed.

The breach of promise case against Thomas Lund, instituted by Mrs. Hattie Morgan, was dismissed last Monday morning by Judge Rudkin. At the opening of court the attorney for Mr. Lund made a motion that the case be dismissed on the ground that no one had appeared for the plaintiff within the prescribed time of 20 days since Whitson & Parke as her attorneys had withdrawn from the case. Without much argument the court dismissed the case.

Mrs. Morgan left here over two weeks ago and her whereabouts is unknown to her friends in this city. When she left she told no one the place of her destination, though it is thought she is in Seattle. This ends the case.

The subjects for the first week of protracted meeting at the Christian church commencing January 4, are: Sunday morning, "The Divine Nature;" evening, "How to Study the Bible;" Monday, "The Lamb of God;" Tuesday, "Christ, the Source of Life;" Wednesday, "The Divine Name;" Thursday, "What Must I Do?" Friday, "The Prodigal Son." These meetings will continue about three weeks and everybody is invited.

Writes About Christmas.

TOPPENISH, WASH., Dec. 26, 1902.
DEAR EDITOR:—I am going to write about our Indian Christmas dinner and Christmas tree at Satus Methodist church where I preach every Sunday, seven miles east of this town. People were crowded in church and we had some kind of exercises, speeches, dialogues and songs, which was very nice and happy. The people would shout for joy, Merry Christmas! The Christmas tree brings things for young people and Santa Claus. We had the Christmas lesson, "For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." All the people clapped their hands, "Merry Christmas!" I remain,

DRAINAGE EXPERT IS COMING

C. S. Elliot of the Agricultural Department to be Here Before Spring.

A dispatch from Washington says: Several days ago Congressman Jones took up with the secretary of agriculture the question of sending an irrigation or drainage expert to North Yakima to investigate and advise with the people there as to the best methods of drainage, the very serious problem of what to do with the seepage water from the irrigation ditches having arisen. Secretary Wilson has now informed Congressman Jones that C. G. Elliott, the chief drainage expert, had been directed to proceed to North Yakima for this purpose. It is understood by Mr. Jones and the department that Mr. Elliott will be prepared to make these investigations before the water is turned in the ditches in the spring.

Mr. Jones was not only successful in having the drainage expert ordered to North Yakima but he has also had the secretary agree to send Thomas H. Means, in charge of the western division of soil survey, to Yakima and take up a small area of forty acres of some land infected with alkali and seepage water and demonstrate to the people there the practical methods of reclamation.

The dispatch continues: They are having a very unenviable state of affairs at North Yakima on account of the liquor furnished to the Indians of the Yakima Indian reservation. Whisky peddlers have been exceedingly busy since the office of deputy marshal was abolished last year, in selling whisky to the Indians, in consequence of which there has been quite a little reign of terror in and around North Yakima and Tappanish. Ten were convicted of this offense at the September court at Spokane this year and fourteen more received sentences at Walla Walla last month. Recently they have been compelled to send to Tacoma, a distance of over 200 miles, to obtain a deputy marshal to take some late captures before the proper authorities.

To remedy this and to save time, trouble and expense, Congressman Jones has been endeavoring to have the office of deputy marshal for the Yakima district restored, and has called upon the commissioner of the Indian office and the department of justice in regard to the matter. The Indian commissioner is favorable to the restoration, but the attorney-general has not as yet made his decision still having the matter under advisement. Mr. Jones has not given up the matter, however, and is hopeful that ultimately he will succeed in having a deputy marshal stationed at North Yakima.

ABOUT RETIRING OFFICIALS

What Each One Will Do After the 12th of January—Assistants.

As the time approaches for the retiring county officials to go out into the world and knock about on private affairs it may be of interest to the public to know what each one will do in the future. They have all been in office four years and according to the law of the state could not succeed themselves. They have all served just long enough to become well acquainted with those who have business at the court house and many people will regret to see them leave. But in their stead will be officials who will no doubt be just as accommodating and pleasant in their dealings with the public.

Clerk George L. Allen will follow contracting as in former years. He will go into the business of grading more extensively than ever before and will devote his whole time to the business.

Auditor E. E. Kelso will take up his duties in the office of the Yakima Abstract & Title Co., in which he is a partner with J. T. Foster.

Treasurer W. B. Dudley will devote his attention to the Dudley Shoe Co. store, of which firm he is the head, and will devote all his time strictly to business.

Sheriff H. L. Tucker has a big livery business which will take up his entire time in the future. Besides this business he has a number of mail routes leading out from North Yakima which will give him as much as he wants to look after. His chief deputy has not decided what he will do.

Commissioners Frank Horsley and W. L. Dimmick have extensive businesses of their own that will require attention hereafter. L. Pace and Frank Kandle will take their places on the board of commissioners, W. L. Lince being the only hold over member. The new board will meet for the first time on Monday, January 12, to transact the business of the county.

Assessor Robert Scott is succeeded by his chief deputy, Harry Coonse, who has been in the office long enough to be thoroughly familiar with the work. Mr. Scott will take up contracting work and will devote all his time to it.

Of the assistants who are now in the county offices, all the deputies, with the exception of the sheriff's, succeed their chiefs. Miss Maud Knuppenburg will remain in the treasurer's office as bookkeeper and Frank Bond will be a cashier. Miss Kitty Ward, Miss Ada F. Friend and Lee C. Delle will be Auditor Newcomb's clerks.

Stuck in the Snow.

R. Strobach had an interesting experience while making a trip to the soda springs the first of the week to get a fresh supply of water for his trade. He started from here Saturday morning and it was Sunday before he reached his destination. The snow lay four feet on the ground and it was extremely difficult for the horses to get through it. For two miles this side of the springs the roadway was unbroken and an inch crust had frozen on the top. This cut the horses' legs till the blood flowed. The night was spent in the shed at the spring and after securing two hundred gallons of water the return trip was made with about as much difficulty as in going, two days being required to reach home. He was told by ranchers up that way that this was the deepest snow in six years.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF YAKIMA COUNTY

FRIDAY, JANUARY 2, 1933.

NOTICE TO PAIRONS.

Mr. E. L. Boardman, formerly manager and part owner of the Helena, Mont., Evening Herald, has purchased an interest in the REPUBLIC and he will hereafter be in charge of the business affairs of the paper.

Mr. Boardman is a newspaper man of experience and ability, and with his assistance the present publisher hopes to greatly improve the paper and add to its usefulness.

No change in the policy of the paper is contemplated.

The change in the ownership of the REPUBLIC is due to the fact that its business has grown to such a size that one man cannot handle it as it should be handled. The people of Yakima have been good to the REPUBLIC in the last four years.

For their uniform kindness and many favors extended the undersigned is grateful. His share of the task of making the paper a worthy exponent of the community will always be performed with pleasure, and he wants no greater satisfaction than that of knowing that the people believe he serves them faithfully to the best of his limited ability in his calling. A ST. JOHN'S DAY ADDRESS

Rev. Hamilton M. Bartlett of the Episcopal Church Speaks to Masons.

The members of the Masonic lodge of this city went in a body Sunday night to St. Michael's church to listen to an address by Rev. Mr. Bartlett. The minister spoke on the text: "Be strong and quit yourselves like men." He said:

"It is with very great pleasure that I welcome my brethren and fellow companions of the Masonic order to the services of this church. I meet you from day to day in the ordinary walks of life, and from time to time more intimately in the convales of our order, always with respect for the work you are doing in this community, and with affection for you as men. At such times I meet you as one citizen meets another, or as one brother meets another, on terms of perfect equality, under which conditions I could not, without presumption, assume the position of a counselor; but tonight I meet you as a priest of the Church, requested and appointed by your kindness to say to you the things which Masonry thinks it well to have said on St. John's day. In requiring you thus to attend divine service at stated times I think Masonry wishes to emphasize two things: First, the agreement between her teachings and those of the Church. We who know the secrets of our order, as well as all for which it publicly stands, know very well how far this agreement reaches. That in nothing does it contradict the teachings of Christianity, that so far as it goes it confirms and emphasizes the very same things. No atheist, not even an agnostic, could ever become a companion of our order, no chapter can ever be opened or closed without divine worship, most frequent and best loved prayer, 'Our Father, who art in heaven,' our patron saints are two of the holiest saints of the church, 'Holiness to the Lord' is the device upon our banners, the best part of our ritual is taken from the sacred scriptures and a portion of them is always read at the opening of our convocations, the names of some of the noblest men of old testament history are heard in our lodges often even, than in our churches, some of the highest virtues of Christianity are the standards of Masonic conduct, and finally, no one can go very high in our order without professing his belief in Jesus Christ. This rapid and incomplete summary shows, as I said, that the teachings of Masonry are, in nothing, contradictory to, but so far as they go, identical with the teachings of the Christian religion. I have reached the conclusion, therefore, which I think ought to be frankly admitted everywhere, that the Church may freely and safely recognize Masonry as one of the agencies which is really doing the Church's work, and welcome it as an ally, instead of oppose it as a foe.

By requiring you to attend divine service at stated times I think Masonry wishes, in the second place, frankly on its part to admit that it recognizes, not only that the source of its teachings is in the Church's Bible, but that the highest part of the impulse and inspiration for its members to be faithful to their vows is to be found in the Church. The command which you are obeying by your presence here tonight is, rightly interpreted, official Masonry bidding Masons look to the Church for inspiration. Obedient to this suggestion, I see before me tonight this large body of my brethren and companions, looking to me as the voice, for the moment, of the church, imparting help and inspiration and as I read my duty it is so to lead your devotions, and so to speak some word of wisdom, as to help you to be better Masons, better citizens, better and happier in all the relations of life. If I am successful in doing this, then you will feel that official Masonry is right when it suggests that even its own proud and ancient pillars lean, as all other institutions do also, upon the Church for support.

The Church and Masonry are both alike in bidding us be strong, and quit ourselves like men. Both set us great tasks, that only strong men can perform. Moreover, these are times when strong men are needed, and we live in a region, and surrounded by conditions, which call for strong men. The great west breeds strong men, sets them the high task of subduing its wild lands and of laying the foundation for a mighty future, and rewards them, if they continue in their strength, with wealth, honors, happiness and remembrance with gratitude and respect during generations to come. In our rapid life of struggle with hard conditions, during which we are hurried and worried, we are apt to forget the importance of what we are doing. We seem to be working for ourselves in friendly but serious competition with others, who unless we are vigilant will get our business or our place. But our lives are not really so selfish, the ultimate ends we are achieving are not so small. What we are really doing is to make the town, to lay its foundations securely, to establish institutions and nourish their small beginnings, knowing that other men after us will take up our work, enlarge it and complete it. Living at the beginning of these things, we live amid heroic conditions, which call, I say, for strong men. Let me tell you more in detail what we have to do. The time is coming, and coming rapidly, when every acre of fertile land around us will be under cultivation when the population of this valley will be ten times what it is now, when its products will be more varied and many times as valuable, when every year will add largely to our wealth, ultimately making this one of the richest portions of a rich state. If this city, with the star it has already attained, is not the metropolis of this region, the failure to remain so will probably lie with the men living here now. We cannot take anything for granted. We have to determine what ought to be, what we want should be, and then bend every energy to make it come. What we want to do is to make this town touch the imagination of the people of the whole county and valley, so that they will take pride in its growth and prosperity, and when they come here find something which inspires them to be strong men too. Good government, well-kept streets, healthy sanitary conditions, fine churches, libraries containing the best books, hospitals, gymnasiums, places of healthy amusements for young and old, above all business men of unimpeachable integrity, industry, foresight, and wisdom, men who are wise enough to sacrifice a little of the present good for the sake of realizing the larger good of the future. This is the ideal, which it will take a generation to realize, but the foundations of which are to be laid now, and which is committed to you men of Yakima to lay. The town will always retain the mark which we put upon it. Therefore, I think you will agree with me, that there is need of strong men here now, such men as Masonry and the Church both strive to develop.

What are the elements of strong manhood? First of all integrity, unassailable integrity, which will not sacrifice itself for present gain, which will not allow itself to be led into any sacrifice by flattery, or cajolery, or by some damnable making the worse appear the better cause. Justice, which does not want the dice loaded on any side, but absolute fairness to prevail always, reverence for that which is higher than ourselves, pity and compassion for that which is lower, and feeling of brotherhood towards all men, the spirit of sacrifice, which leads us to see that as all that makes life well with us is mainly the result of past sacrifices, which forgotten benefactors have made, so all that is well in the life of others to come must be made up of present sacrifices, to which we must add our share. Add to these elements of strong manhood the love of truth, which wants to see and know exactly how things are, whether they agree with our wishes or not; wisdom, which is the result of profiting by experience, so that we do not make the same mistake over and over again, or even twice; patience, which enables us to endure a great many delays and disappointments and succeed at last; faith, which enables us to live partly in a world that has not been realized yet. Add to these still further the Christian virtues of gentleness, tenderness, forbearance with weakness, infirmity and folly, forgiveness of injury, knowing that most injuries are committed in momentary anger or in misunderstanding, and usually avenge themselves. Add to these still further the culture which comes from reading some of the best books, from knowing how the world is going, the problems it is solving today and will have to solve tomorrow, how other cities are governed, how they control vice and safeguard innocence and virtue, how other men carry on business like our own, the culture which comes from keeping acquainted with the best that is being done elsewhere, all of which can be acquired by any one in the time which is usually wasted.

These are the qualities that make men strong. They have entered in varying degrees into the characters of all the strong men of history. They are what makes a town. It takes its tone and individuality from the kind of men and women it contains. The finest asset that this region owns lies in the possibilities that its men possess. The soil, the forests, the depths of the mountains, are full of unrealized wealth, but this prospective wealth is not one tenth as valuable as are those possibilities of manhood that lie in us. After all, a man is the greatest creation. Consider for a moment what was the finest thing that this country produced during the last century, the thing which will really last the longest and influence the future of this country the most? I think it was the character of Abraham Lincoln. Or go back still further, and ask what was the best thing that the first century of the Christian era produced? Its wealth has all disappeared. A few coins, preserved as curiosities in museums of antiquities, are all that remain of its standard of values. Its works of art have all disappeared. Its victories, mostly the temporary victories of unjust causes, have had to be reversed on other and bloodier battle fields. But the character of Jesus Christ remains, the imperishable heritage and blessing of ages yet to come. What is the finest legacy that you can leave to your children?

Andrew Carnegie says it is not wealth, and that it is better to begin life poor. Wealth is too uncertain, either of permanence or of being a blessing, except as it gives the culture and education needed to begin well; but character, made up of the judicious blending of the strong virtues, is imperishable, it inspires sons and daughters, and is the proudest possession you can leave them. What this town wants is not men who will be elsewhere, and the future of this valley will go where they are. Strong men are magnets; they attract prosperity, they influence and sometimes control destiny. Success in dazzling and astonishing degree goes with them. Our country has been full of them, and this is what is giving it its wondrous prosperity. It is the better manhood that is telling in competition with the men of other nations, manhood that is not better at the top than it is in the middle and at the bottom. The last war was not won by its generals on land and its captains on the sea; it was won by the men who made the ships and fired the guns. American manufactures are not displacing English and German goods merely because we have wiser direction on the part of managers, nor because a few great inventors have devised better machines, but because the American working man is more of a man. Again I say character tells, tells everywhere in every tool that we make, in every pound of steel that we produce, in every product of the soil. The man of strong character will get better results everywhere than his weaker brother, will raise more wheat to the acre in the long run, and sell it to better advantage. I am very proud of the resources of this country, but most of all I am proud of the men it is producing. How the Hebrew prophets loved to look back and tell of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, of Moses and the Judges of Israel; but with greater pride we may look back upon hundreds of men more justly eminent, and we can exult where the Hebrew prophet hung his head in shame; when the prophet looked upon the common people all he could say was that they were a stiff-necked and stubborn generation, not strong or good enough to safeguard their country's prosperity; but wherever we look now, over all the vast expanse of this country, we see strong men, making their country supreme among the nations of the earth.

I am glad to recognize this abundance of sound material among the men of this country, for while it has always been true that strong men were needed, it is especially true of our country now. There are plenty of signs that trying times are before us amid which we shall need all the wisdom, patience, forbearance and self-control that strength can give. There is a deep movement going on all over the world, nowhere faster than in this country, which has as its end in view the reorganization of society upon a socialistic basis. Such an observer as Herbert Spencer thinks it will be finally attended with civil war, immense bloodshed, and eventually end in despotism. I do not doubt the coming of the changes he foresees, which are going on all the time, but I do not fear any catastrophe because I believe in the wisdom, the patience, the forbearance, the self-control and good humor, the qualities that make for strength, of the American people. Be the issue as it may, be our only resource lies in our own manhood. Always, in everything, great and small alike, the problem narrows itself down to a question of character. whatever the task imposed upon him. But we must remember to keep in view the right definition of strength. In the earliest stages of society it was the physically fit man who was strong, the one who could wield his club with the most force and the greatest dexterity. Later it became the man who was intellectually the strongest, men like Alexander and Caesar. But that day too has passed away. Napoleon, the greatest intellectual and physical force of modern times, found that out when Europe, after incredible exertions, flung him out to die on St. Helena. There have been some attempts to prove that cunning, and greed, and unscrupulousness, by getting hold of great wealth, can make themselves strong. But wealth is learning to be afraid, and itself to distrust the permanence of strength acquired in that way. No strength is neither physical nor material, only, but is above all other things moral. It is made up of the old, old virtues, which are the cardinal things in every religion, and which are the discoveries of the human race about the way of life, the way that leads, not to heaven only, but to more abundant life here. It is these virtues which Masonry emphasizes, which all religions emphasize, which Christianity emphasizes most of all. Unless some practiced them society could not exist at all. Where only a few practice them there is barbarism; where many practice them there is civilization; when all practice them, then the time dreamed of by poet and prophet and philosopher, the Kingdom of Heaven, will have come. Then the vision of St. John, which he saw on the Isle of Patmos, will have been realized: And I, John, saw the holy city, the new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven, saying, "Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and He will dwell with them, and they shall be His people."

Another Beet Sugar Scheme.

There is another scheme on foot to encourage the farmers of the Yakima valley to enter into the business of raising sugar beets. John Heimrich, a capitalist of Seattle, is the promoter and his plan is to build a plant here for the manufacture of sugar beet syrup, a product that will find a ready sale in the markets of the northwest as well as in other parts of the country.

He has been here several days looking the field over and has been given encouragement by some of the solid and conservative business men of the city. He says he will not ask for a bonus, but will require the farmers to furnish sufficient beets to keep his plant running. He will pay $4.50 a ton without reference to the saccharine matter contained in the beets.

A New Division Scheme.

The Kennewick people have a division scheme of their own. They propose to divide the county on the following lines:

"Commencing on the Columbia river on the south between ranges 25 and 26, thence north to the Columbia river, then following the Columbia to the place of beginning. Or, some such modification of this line as by more careful investigation may be thought better."

The Kennewick Courier this week gave prominence to such a scheme. It claims that there are 2000 people within the lines described, and that a bill for such a division will "unquestionably be introduced in the legislature."

But notwithstanding the reporter missed one house that he knows of on Naches avenue. It was built by C. A. Niles at a cost of $600. There may be a few others overlooked and if so the REPUBLIC would like to have them reported.

REPORT OF YAKIMA MARKETS

Weekly Summary of Conditions in Principal Agricultural Lines.

HAY
"You can't get hay for love nor money," is the way one commission man expressed it this week.

A stockman who is feeding a great many head of sheep this winter said: "The cold snap has made the alfalfa seller crazy. There is no use talking, the price will drop and that hard very soon after the cold weather breaks, now you mind that."

Such were the expressions of a buyer and a feeder of alfalfa made to a REPUBLIC reporter when asked if anything was new in the hay situation. The farmer is saying nothing, but is waiting for the price to go higher, which according to all reports it will. One reason why they believe this is that there have been parties going the rounds for several weeks past and offering bigger prices than the commission men are paying. One farmer says that he was offered $10 in the stack last week, but would not sell. Baled hay is quoted at $10 by the buyers, but it is certain, so say the farmers, that $12 would be paid if they could get the hay.

Some hay is being sent out. Several cars were loaded here this week for the Sound market, but most of it had been contracted for. However, there will likely be very little of the present holdings shipped unless the buyers pay the high price asked. One cattle man the other day said that he bought 2500 tons of alfalfa last summer at $3.50 a ton. He still holds the hay in the fields of the raisers and will feed or ship according to his needs. Nearly all the cattle men and a great many sheep men had a sufficient supply bought early to last them through the season. Other stockmen, who were not so well prepared when the cold weather set in, had to skimp around to get a supply at any price.

Some of the sheep men are feeding small potatoes. They pay $3.50 per ton for them and feed them raw to the sheep. They claim that three tons of such potatoes equal two tons of hay and are much cheaper. They are claimed to be a good ration as an extra tuber that grows. Potatoes are cheap this year and the stockmen who have been caught without a good supply of feed now have the means of solving the problem of high priced hay.

HOPS
The Portland (Ore.) Evening Telegram sums up the hop situation in the following manner:

"Next year's hop crop will not fall below 18c. A few contracts for 1903 hops are being made at that price. This fact is proof enough that growers may at least depend upon another year of prosperity. It is doubtful if the price will ever again fall as low as 10c as the consumption keeps pace with the supply, more especially as the New York growers are going out of the business owing to adverse conditions."

"The market has been most peculiar this year. At the present time some of the dealers are selling at 2c. below the market price to make good orders which were not covered with contracts.

"The more conservative dealers hedge by covering each order they take in advance with a contract with the grower, so as not to be caught short. In this manner they have the supply when called upon and do not have to buy in the open market by filling their orders. Others, however, will take all they can get regardless of whether or not they can cover with contracts. When these latter have to sell short it has the effect of stimulating the market, the same as was done this year.

"It seems all the more remarkable that prices kept up so well in the face of the fact that very few of the large brewers, according to reliable information from trade sources, have bought of this year's crop. Most of the large brewers have cold storage plants where they keep hops in stock, and many of them have been using from the cold storage stock rather than pay present prices. It is their policy to wait until an off year so that they can stock up when hops are cheap. But the fact that they are drawing largely on their old stock this year ought to help in making good prices next year. Having exhausted their reserve stock, they will be forced to come into the market heavy for a new supply, therefore, dealers, it would seem, are justified in making contracts ahead for 1903 hops.

Locally there is nothing doing in hops. The conditions remain about the same with prices firm at 25 and 26 cents. There has not been a sale of hops reported for several weeks and both the buyers and sellers are becoming impatient. One big grower, who still has his 1902 crop, says that he has private information that the price will go up to at least 30 cents before the winter is half over. He argues that the scarcity in the east is bound to make such a price possible.
