Dear Mrs. Elliott:

During a little talk with Miss Shore, we concluded that it would be far easier for us to have separate manuscripts to work from in our literary projects. Unless we did, there would be much time lost, expense, calls etc. when we determine our procedure for making two books out of one.

Sorry that I may have inconvenienced you in this matter, but if you'll return the manuscript of The Lonesome Road, I will rebate your charges. You can return it via regular mail, express or whatever is easiest and most convenient.

A very considerable part of the college material originated at this end, thanks to my contacts with over half a dozen persons of both sexes, and much of it is definitely "pattern" material of individuals. Perhaps I shall see Miss Shore tomorrow or within the week, depending upon my schedule and I already have an outline of college material that will be helpful to her. My friends including a national officer of a top sorority have been very helpful and I am sure Miss Shore can take care of the rest.

Hope you and yours have a nice holiday

Sincerely Click Roland
