

SEATTLE WORLD'S FAIR

1962

APRIL 21 • OCTOBER 21

The 600-foot Space Needle, with its celestial observation deck and revolving restaurant.

Man seeks the future. In 20 prior centuries, his genius probed the unknown—discovering at an ever-quicken pace the new . . . the wondrous. In our time, his achievements appear daily . . . the magnitude of science touches the heights of imagination. This World's Fair seeks not to recount accomplishments, but rather to search out promises of the new age . . . the years ahead . . . the miles above.

The city: Seattle rises majestically from the water's edge, paying homage only to breathtaking nature, holding rapturous the million persons within a glance of its clean beauty . . . its vigorous youth.

The site: This $80,000,000 official international exposition is a mile from downtown . . . linked to the heart of the city by monorail, an arterial in the sky. The Space Needle restaurant and observation deck towers over the exciting United States Science Pavilion, the massive Coliseum Century 21 and dazzling exhibits from around the world. Enjoy the five worlds of tomorrow (clockwise, from upper right) The World of Science, The World of Century 21, The World of Commerce and Industry, The World of Art, The World of Entertainment. Background, Seattle and Mount Rainier.
