DRANK 17 BARRELS OF WHISKY

Wonderful Feat Performed by Four Men in Twelve Days.

Ex-Mayor H. S. Rowe of Portland, who was in Yakima this week accompanied by City Auditor Thomas Devlin of the Willamette metropolis, has a fine sense of humor and is a prince among story-tellers. In the parlors of the Commercial club Monday evening the genial ex-mayor regaled a party of friends with some of his humorous experiences, especially in pioneer days. The following true story, in particular, is worth retelling:

It was during the early eighties, very soon after the Northern Pacific railroad reached tidewater on Puget Sound, by way of Portland. Mr. Rowe, at that time, was holding an important position on the road, and General Anderson was chief engineer. At this particular time a party of three government inspectors representing the interior department was traveling over the road in company with Gen. Anderson in order to see whether the company had complied with the conditions of the government in the earning of the land grant. Orders had been sent from headquarters that these inspectors should be treated with the utmost consideration, and with this end in view they were turned over to Gen. Anderson, who was a man possessed of a most lovable disposition, and with all the characteristics of a good fellow.

It so happened that when the party reached the Cascade locks, on the Columbia, they became snow-bound and were laid up for several days in a lonely spot in Gen. Anderson's private car. Mindful of his instructions, the old general complained to Mr. Rowe, during the early part of the siege, that he was unable to entertain his guests suitably on account of his stock of drinkables having petered out. Mr. Rowe said he would see what could be done in the matter, and asked the local agent if he knew where a fresh stock could be had. That official replied that fortunately he had a car of liquor standing on the track and he guessed that under the circumstances it would be all right to use a little of it and let the company foot the bill; whereupon, Mr. Rowe informed the general and had him draw orders for the wet goods as he needed them, and turn the same over to his colored porter, and the agent would honor the requisition.

Now, Gen. Anderson was an easy-going gentleman of the old school, who had an abiding faith in the honesty and good intentions of all mankind. He was highly pleased at being able to get the liquid refreshments in this manner and carelessly signed all the orders passed up to him by the foxy porter to get more whisky. Thus the little party gaily whiled away the passing hours, until at the end of 12 days the snow blockade was raised and they went on their way rejoicing.

Some time afterward Mr. Rowe received a bill from a wholesale liquor house for the price of seventeen barrels of whisky that had been taken out of the car during the blockade. The magnitude of the bill staggered him, and he informed the wholesalers that he would first have to investigate. He went first to the local agent and demanded an explanation. That official replied: "Why, the old general got the whisky all right, and here is the file of his orders drawn on me for the goods, which I delivered to his 'coon porter.' And sure enough, the orders he had in the aggregate accounted for seventeen barrels.

Mr. Rowe was now sorely puzzled, but he determined to solve the mystery. At the first opportunity he questioned Gen. Anderson about the matter. The old man expressed surprise on being informed of the size of the bill, corresponding with the vouchers held by the agent, and said: "Well, that looks like a mighty sight of whisky for four men to drink in 10 or 12 days, but I guess we must have got away with it all right, as I don't see what else could have become of it."

Mr. Rowe was not satisfied with the general's explanation, so he determined to look farther. One day meeting one of the section bosses whom he knew had been in charge of a gang of snow-shovelers during the blockade, he questioned him very sharply about the whisky. Mike was at first very reluctant about giving out any information, but being closely pressed, said: "Well, sor, the b'ys did get mighty dry for a drop of the crater, sor; but soon they found out that that nager porter of General Anderson's had some for sale, sor, and they bought of it pretty freely, I tell ye. Why, that bum nager would stand there for an hour at a time passing out that whisky, sor, at a dollar a bottle, and that was too d— much, sor; otherwise I wouldn't be givin' the black haythen away, so I wouldn't."

Some Land Office Figures.
The annual report of W. J. Reed, register of the North Yakima land office, for the fiscal year ending July 1 last, shows that nearly 98,000 acres of land was filed on in this county under the homestead law during that time.

According to this report, there yet remains within the confines of Yakima county 181,166 acres of surveyed land, subject to entry. In addition to this, there are also 380,480 acres of unsurveyed lands in the county. There are 561,646 acres of both surveyed and unsurveyed lands unappropriated and 1,285,000 acres reserved, in which is included the Yakima Indian reservation and the Rainier forest reserve.

A FLOURISHING INDUSTRY.

A Visit to Garrett Bros'. Brick Yard and What We Saw There.

The DEMOCRAT scribe took a spin on his wheel Monday afternoon and visited Garrett Bros'. brick yard, situated about a mile north of town on a portion of the old Hathaway tract.

The site seems to be almost an ideal one for a brick yard and was selected two years ago by the proprietors on account of the superior quality of clay found there. This is the third season's output from this yard, and the splendid quality of the product is attested by all who have used it. Practically all the brick, except the front pressed article, that has been laid in the handsome buildings erected in North Yakima during recent years, has been manufactured by this enterprising firm.

The present output of the plant is 30,000 brick per day, employment being afforded to about thirty men in the manufacture and hauling of the product. Through the courtesy of the proprietors the scribe was shown over the plant and grounds, and marveled much at what he saw there. The system in vogue seems to be well nigh perfect, everything seeming to go as if by clock-work. The motive force is supplied by a 10-horse-power engine, and with every chug of the big press a moulding box, containing six brick, is filled. One man is thus kept busy in lifting the forms from the machine and placing them on the off bearing trucks and five men are required to wheel the green brick away and place them on the yard, where they are dried by the sun and two days later are placed in the kiln for burning.

The completeness of the plant is due largely to the inventive genius of Frank Garrett, the junior member of the firm, who constructed it after his own ideas. His automatic device for dumping the clay into the big machine and the method of tempering the mud are both as original as they appear to be excellent. His brother Harry, however, who is a brickmaker of several years experience, has entire charge of the yard. The output last year of this yard was something over two million brick, all required for home consumption. This year the demand so far is fully as good, and will probably exceed that of last year from this time on.

After the tour of inspection, the editor was invited to climb the cherry trees in the nearby orchard, and filled in some time very pleasantly in masticating delicious Royal Ann's and Black Republicans.

Raise the Salaries.

The school board at its meeting Monday night raised the salaries of several of the principal teachers for the ensuing year.

Mrs. Stair's salary was advanced from $90 to $100 per month; that of Prof. Plumb from $80 to $90, while Supt. Jolly received a raise of $100 per annum, making his salary now $1500.

The proposal to raise the salaries was carried by a vote of 12 to 1, R. K. Nichols, the holdover member voting no.

Mr. Nichols gives the following reasons for refusing to vote in favor of an increase in salaries:

First—For the reason that receipts of this school district as shown by statements rendered and a careful examination of all resources of revenue will not permit any general raising of salaries as seems to be contemplated.

Second—That the raising of the wages of one teacher $25 a month in two successive years is unjust and inequitable to others equally deserving.

Third—I believe that $90 per month, the present rate of wages for this position, will secure an equally competent and capable teacher for the duties of this principalship and one just as, if not more acceptable, to the taxpayers of the district.

Three new teachers were formally elected at Monday night's meeting, as follows: Miss Charlotte Pendergast of Walla Walla, Miss Ella Howland of Iowa, and Miss Patterson of Oregon. Grades will be assigned to them later.

Securing Right-of-Way.

Messrs. Splawn and Cull, who have for some time been hard at work in the effort to secure the right-of-way for the proposed electric road to Sunnyside, are quite pleased with the success they have so far met with. Mr. Splawn stated Friday that at the meeting at Parker Wednesday evening pledges were made of a free right-of-way for a distance of eight miles, all the owners in Parker, with the exception of three, having agreed to the proposition.

Mr. McNaught, at the meeting of the executive committee Monday night, stated that he was willing also to construct electric lines up both the Abitanum and Natchez valleys, provided free right-of-way can be secured. The committee unanimously agreed to accept his proposition and to go to work at once to secure the necessary concessions.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF NORTH YAKIMA.

THE evidence is fast accumulating, says the New York World, that there is to be a battle royal in 1904 between Roosevelt and Hanna for the republican presidential nomination. Hanna, as yet, denies that he will be a candidate, but this is given out only for public consumption and because it does not suit the purpose of the astute senator from Ohio to unmask his batteries at this time, as to do so would disarrange the careful plans he has already laid.

The Ohio man and his trusted lieutenants are now busily engaged in burrowing under the ground which the strenuous Teddy fancies is firm beneath his feet. Hanna, so far as surface indications go, is still on friendly terms with the president, although it is an open secret that the two men really distrust and fear each other. Later when Hanna will have secured what favors he desires from the hands of Roosevelt, he will not hesitate to show his teeth when the occasion offers.

If Hanna develops into a full-fledged candidate, continues the World, there is little but reason to doubt that he will be able to line up three powerful agencies in his behalf. First, Wall street and the great money interests generally. Second, the tariff barons and their long retinue of retainers. Third, the majority of senators and congressmen and the influence that this element can bring to bear. All of these are more or less dissatisfied with Roosevelt, although still too chary to omit the fact. Wall street regards Teddy as freakish and unsafe. The protected interests, which include most of the great trusts, regard him with suspicion and are openly rebellious with regard to the President's low tariff policy, and what they term his "reciprocity nonsense." Gradually the politicians, which class of course includes the senators and representatives, are getting sore on account of Roosevelt's high handed treatment of them and his evident purpose to attempt to control all legislation.

It will thus be seen that powerful elements are already at work to unhorse the rough rider and turn him down. To offset these great forces that are manifestly against him, Roosevelt has control of the vast governmental machine and a certain popularity among the people, more or less real, but probably greatly exaggerated.

All signs point to a great fight within the ranks of the republicans, and no man can accurately prophesy at this time what the result will be.

THAT Senator George Turner of this state has taken high rank in the senate of the United States is now a matter of almost common knowledge throughout the entire country. Even very many of those who are opposed to him politically admit that this is the case. That his great ability is best appreciated in the distinguished body of which he is a member is apparent from the following tribute paid him by a fellow member, Senator Heitfield of Idaho, who, in a recent interview in the Spokesman-Review, said: "The appropriation for the canal at The Dalles is due to George Turner more than to any other man. And while I am on the subject of Turner I want to say that the people of Washington may well be proud of their senior senator and the standing and influence he has attained at Washington. His transcendent ability is recognized by opponent and friend alike, and I say without hesitation that he is the ablest lawyer in the senate. On legal questions lawyers like Senator Hoar and Senator Spooner consult him, and defer to his judgment. He has taken high rank as a political leader on the democratic side. No republican senator has ever answered his arguments in support of the democratic position on national questions, and of late nobody has tried to do so. When the republicans did try to answer him they put Senator Spooner their ablest man, against him, and Turner was too much for him."

NO ONE puts Senator Turner forward as a saint, yet to compare him unfavorably in any sense with John L. Wilson, as does the Washingtonian, seems to border on absurdity. The people of this state have had a chance to judge between the two men by the records they have made in the U. S. senate. Turner is a man who, in that, the greatest deliberative body in the world, ranks with the greatest men there. Wilson was in that distinguished body, too, for four years, but what rank did he take? Will the Washingtonian undertake to assert that he was even a third-rater? Aside from his memorable fist-fight with another little man in the corridors of the capitol, what did Wilson do to immortalize himself while in the senate? Comparisons, it is said, are always odious, which is doubtless true. The Democrat would have refrained from making any in this instance if the Wilson organ had not first violated the time-honored injunction.

THE retirement of Lord Salisbury after his long service as prime minister of Great Britain marks the end of a long and remarkable career in the history of English politics. Salisbury has been the virtual ruler of the empire for a long period and while never rated as a brilliant statesman has earned the distinction of being safe and progressive according to the Tory idea of progressiveness.

Salisbury ranks high as a scientist as well as in statecraft and in late years is said to have taken a much deeper interest in scientific investigation than in the affairs of government. His resignation, however, seems to have been hastened somewhat by frequent disagreements with the king. Balfour, his successor and political legatee, is his nephew, who received his training in statecraft at the hands of the retiring premier.

Balfour is regarded as a yet stronger man than Salisbury in many respects. Besides being a well schooled statesman he is a very brilliant writer, being a very frequent contributor to current literature.

THERE is no reasonable excuse for a man living in a town if he doesn't like it. If you have no word of commendation to say for your town, its institutions or its people, emigrate. You won't stop the course of events by going away, neither will your carping criticism cut any figure if you remain. The church bells will have the same musical ring; the dogs will play just as briskly; the fish will bite just as well, and the pure air and bright sunshine will have the same health-giving properties. Speak a good word for your neighbors; if you can't, don't enlarge on their faults. If you have become thoroughly sour and disgusted and cannot see any good in your town, move away; go somewhere where things suit you.—Ex.

If nothing else will do the belligerent editor of the Washingtonian but to make sheep grazing on the Rainier reserve a political issue in this county, the democratic party will accommodate him. We opine, however, that Boyle, whose ways are inscrutable, is really more anxious for an issue on this question than are the shepherds whom he assumes to represent. That element has nothing to gain and everything to lose by going before the hustings with their alleged grievances. If they do they will discover that a goodly number of other people have grievances, too, and they won't be a bit backward about airing them, either.

JESSIE MORRISON, the young woman of Eldorado, Kansas, convicted of murdering her successful rival in love, has recently had her third trial. As the result of the first jury disagreed. In the second she got a sentence of five years, and was taken to the penitentiary. Her attorneys, however, succeeded in securing an order for a new trial from the supreme court. In this latter trial Miss Morrison was adjudged guilty of murder in the second degree, receiving a sentence of 25 years. This seems to be a case where it would have been better to have let well enough alone.

THE Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway company, according to a Chicago dispatch, is preparing to build its own line through to Puget Sound. This road it seems, made certain demands on Jim Hill and his merger system for a share of the northern business. Hill is said to have treated this demand with contempt, whereupon the Milwaukee people went to work at once and secured the necessary means, estimated at $20,000,000, to build the road, and state that if Hill don't come off his high horse they will surely build to this coast.

IN accordance with the forecast made by the Democrat last week John L. Wilson is the victor in the primaries held Tuesday in Spokane county, though the anti-gave him the hardest fight he ever had. If the Spokesman-Review's predictions come true now, the democrats will have no trouble in carrying Spokane this fall.

BOYLE's defense of John L. Wilson reminds one of Paul's defense before King Agrippa. It reads smoothly and is perhaps equally as brilliant, but unfortunately not so logical. According to Boyle, Wilson is a very great man—a perfect paragon of civic virtue. According to the Spokesman-Review, Wilson is a chronic office-seeker and street-corner loafer, who publicly damns the people who will not bend the pregnant hinges of the knee to him and acknowledge his rule.

THE wrangle that is on among the brethren in this city regarding the time for holding the primaries is just a trifle amusing to outsiders. In the interest of harmony, the Democrat would suggest that there is really no need of holding the primaries at all. The "big four," who run the affairs of the G. O. P. in this county, doubtless have all the nominees picked out by this time, anyway. So what's the use of all this fuss and feathers?

TEDDY ROOSEVELT has cashiered Gen. Smith, the military reactionary who is used the famous "kill and burn" order for the subjugation of Samar. Now, if the strenuous Roosevelt couldn't stand for the murderous policy of Smith, it must be the democrats have been telling the truth about him. The organs of imperialism, meanwhile, are trying to let themselves down easy.

TRACY is still as free as air or the little birds that sing in the trees. If he is now in the Gold Hill county, as reported, he might put in the balance of the season at prospecting.

THE discovery of Merrill's body vindicates the reputation of Tracy for truthfulness, at any rate, and settles a good many long-winded arguments as well.

County Division.

County division, or no county division—that's the question. Another session of the legislature is upon us, prior to which there will be an election, and those of us who are in favor of county division should declare ourselves. While we have no desire to make a political issue of county division, we think that the majority of fair-minded men will agree that to meet with success we must necessarily make of it a local issue; and to that end we suggest that a meeting be called of all those interested in county division. The meeting should be called at once without delay.—Prosper Record.

Don't Sell Infected Fruit.

Fruit Inspector Beck says that good results are being secured this season by spraying for the codling moth, and thinks that the work will show this fall in a larger proportion of the apple crop being more free of worms than last year. Mr. Beck has been circulating a printed notice this week among fruit shippers and fruit-stand people, warning them against selling fruit infected with the San Jose scale, oyster scale, codling moth or peach twig borer. The law, he says, against selling infected fruit, will be strictly enforced this year, according to the orders of the state commissioner.

The train will arrive at Tacoma Sunday afternoon, and a march to the camp ground will be made. Lieut. Col. Lamping of Seattle will be in command during the encampment. The pay of the soldiers during the encampment will be $1 per day, subsistence and transportation. Capt. Liggett says that 50 out of the 63 members of his company will attend.

The New Register.

H. V. Hinman, the newly-appointed register of the land office, was in the city Tuesday looking for a residence and familiarizing himself to some extent with the duties of the office. It will be several weeks before Mr. Hinman will be able to take charge of the office, as his official bond has not yet been made out. It is not likely that he can do so before Sept. 1, as the land department, like many other branches of the government, is proverbially slow in making such changes.

The new register has resided in this state since 1898, coming from Kansas. Previous to his removal to Ellensburg, he lived near Mission, in Chelan county. He is an old soldier.

Cupid in the Coal Strike.

Love waits not on sliding scales of wages, organized labor, combined capital or the question whether coal shall be weighed at the pit's mouth or elsewhere.

A coal and iron policeman fell in love at sight with a miner's daughter at Wilkesbarre. The girl saw nothing new in a reciprocity of affection. So there was a runaway wedding and at least one "special" on guard at the mines now regards the striking diggers of black diamonds with no hardness at his heart.

It is well for romance to cast this little glamour over the squalidness of the colliery surroundings. Of course it has no bearing on the issues involved in the strike. Yet one might wish that the "getting together" spirit which was in the air when the police Jack met his Jill would adapt itself soon to the conditions of the great interests at war among the mines.—N. WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, July 12, 1902.

While President Roosevelt's statement in regard to trusts, made at Pittsburgh, and the subsequent announcement that Representative Littlefield of Maine had been selected to draft a bill which would provide for federal supervision and control of these great monopolies, have received wide publicity in the press of the country, they are not regarded seriously by the leading democrats in Washington. Representative Griggs of Georgia, who returned from his home this week, pointed out, when I asked his opinion of Mr. Roosevelt's announcement, that the fact that the president had waited until after the adjournment of congress to expound his views on the subject, should be sufficient proof that he was not sincere in his protestations and that they were for political purposes only. "Had Mr. Roosevelt felt so strongly on the subject of trusts as he now pretends," he said, "it would have been his duty to present his views to congress and not wait a week after congress had adjourned and then present them to and for their effect on the people." In fact, the consensus of opinion is that the president is simply making an effort to placate that element of the party in the west, which has demanded tariff reduction as a remedy for the growing tyranny of trusts.

Representative Swanson of Virginia characterizes the president's utterances as a "sham and a fraud," and points out that even for the purpose of befriending Cuba, which Mr. Roosevelt declared was essential to the honor of the country, he was unwilling to use his influence to secure the passage of the Cuban reciprocity bill passed by the house and which would have placed the sugar trust in competition with the foreign refiners, or the great advantage of the American consumers. Mr. Roosevelt knew that he would have the unqualified support of the democrats in the senate, as well as the support of a number of senators of his own party, but he was unwilling to take the first step which would antagonize the sugar trust and kindred interests. "Can any one of these proceedings, place any faith in Mr. Roosevelt's protestations of antagonism to the trusts?" asked Mr. Swanson.

While doubting the president's sincerity, the democratic leaders consider that, in his desire for personal popularity and in his efforts to make certain his own nomination, he has materially aided them in their efforts to secure a great democratic victory in 1904, if not in the fall elections. His utterances have brought into that prominence which the democrats have been striving to give it, the enormity of the trust evil, and not only is it certain that there is no chance for securing from the republicans in congress, during the short session, anti-trust legislation which will satisfy the public, but it is equally certain that a disappointed public will turn to the democratic party for relief in 1904. By his selection of Mr. Littlefield of Maine Mr. Roosevelt has shown a disposition to ignore the leaders of his party but no one who understands the situation believes for a moment that he can either control the house without the help of those leaders or that he can produce any effect upon the trust-controlled republicans in the senate.

There is a growing belief in Washington that Senator Hanna is looking to his fences with an eye on the next presidential nomination, and some there are who suggest that even Mr. Roosevelt's attack upon the trusts is a trap into which he has been led by his wily friend from Ohio. The policy of those who support the senator from Ohio is to utter no word in public at all derogatory to the president—in fact, to kill his chances with damning praise. They will say that he is "frank, courageous, a good republican, fearless—possibly a little too much so, it is true; impulsive—to a fault, it may be, but still admirable," etc. But in private, to the great financial interests whose treasures are always open to the managers of the republican campaign fund, they will say: "He is all that is admirable, but hardly to be trusted—too radical, you know; too apt to prove headstrong—in a word, not quite a safe man." Mr. Hanna, on the other hand, has the implicit confidence of these interests, and he has the support of practically all the republicans in congress, and if the plans of the Ohio senator and his friends do not miscarry, at the eleventh hour Mr. Roosevelt will be found to be "too young," and Mr. Hanna will be the only available "older man."

General Fitzhugh Lee has just made public a statement in which he says that unless the next session of congress grants reciprocity to Cuba, anarchy will replace the present government and will undoubtedly be followed by annexation. General Lee's experience as consul general at Havana places him in a position to speak with authority, and he says that discontent is growing very rapidly among the negroes; that riots are likely to occur as the number of unemployed increases and that without tariff concessions from the United States it will be impossible for the planters to put in another sugar crop. Already, according to General Lee, one of the largest transportation companies doing business between Cuba and the United States has placed three of its largest steamers out of commission.

Chairman Griggs has gone to New York, where he will hold a conference with Ben T. Cable, chairman of the executive committee of the democratic congressional committee, Lewis Nixon and other members of the congressional committee. The question of funds for the coming campaign will be carefully considered and a general plan of campaign outlined. After the conference, Mr. Cable will go to Chicago, where he opens headquarters, and Mr. Griggs will return home and remain in charge of the Washington headquarters.

Representative Shafer of Colorado, who has been in Washington during the past week, speaks most encouragingly of democratic prospects in his state and says that the congressman-at-large who will be elected this fall will certainly be a democrat. He also predicts the gain of a democratic member from Idaho, one from Nebraska, and several from California.

THE YAKIMA DEMOCRAT.

The Fetching Fable of the Benevolent Gentleman Who Experienced a Very Sudden Change of Heart.

Quite by accident a Benevolent Gent happened to pass by just as a large Gazabo was about to conclude the finishing touches of Trouncing an Undersized Youth.

"Gently, gently!" murmured the Benevolent Gent. "Do not, I pray, become Brutal in your work."

"Aw, go chase yourself," was the insolent reply of the Large Gazabo.

"But why do you land so heavily upon the youth's jugular?" queried the Benevolent Gent.

Because he yearns to set up in Business for himself, and I need him to perform a few stunts for me," replied the Large Gazabo.

"Then," remarked the Benevolent Gent, "this is where I perform a service to Humanity."

So saying, the Benevolent Gent feinted with his left and landed heavily upon the Large Gazabo's solar plexus.

"Why do you thus Assault and Batter me?" queried the Large Gazabo, looking up from a Recumbent position.

"I am moved by a Generous Impulse," replied the Benevolent Gent, "and I would free the Undersized Youth from his Galling chains of Servitude."

So saying, the Benevolent Gent proceeded to perform various feats of Physical Prowess upon the person of the Large Gazabo.

"I will gladly allow the Youth to go free," gasped the Large Gazabo, after a short time.

But when the Undersized Youth would have set up in Business for himself the Benevolent Gent said:

"Not so. You will be better off by taking a place in my kitchen and doing odd jobs for me."

"But you mixed with the Large Gazabo because you were moved by a Generous Impulse," wailed the Youth.

"Quite true," replied the Benevolent Gent, "but during the last few moments it has occurred to me that my Generosity is entitled to about 6 Per Cent Interest."

Moral: Considerable Philanthropy is attached to the 5 Per Cent table.—The Commoner.

A Crow Story.

A farmer living near New Bedford planted 90 acres of corn, and the crows dug up so much of it that he tried soaking kernels in whisky and scattering them broadcast where the crows bothered the most, thinking he could thus keep them from digging up the planted kernels, and incidentally have a little fun at the expense of the crows. An hour after scattering the liquor-laden kernels he went to the field, where he heard an unearthly jabbering of crows. One big crow was perched on a log, where he had gathered all the whisky-soaked kernels and was retelling them one for two good ones, which the other crows were digging out of the field.—Ex.

J. M. Perry Elected Manager.
The Yakima County Fruit Growers' Union met again at the court house last Saturday and disposed of a considerable amount of unfinished business.
Secretary Brown read to the meeting the bids he had received from various manufacturers of fruit boxing material, all of which were identically the same, showing plainly the existence of a trust. Action on the bids was deferred until the next meeting.
The matter of electing a local manager, to have entire charge of the marketing of the fruit of members, was next taken up. Several candidates were proposed for the position, but the question was settled by the election of J. M. Perry to that position. Mr. Perry's proposition was to handle, sell and collect the marketable fruit product of all the members of the Union for a commission of five per cent. on the gross amount of sales. In consideration of receiving the appointment, Mr. Perry, it is understood, has agreed to discontinue his private business as a commission broker and to permit the free use of his warehouse by the union.

To Build New School House.
A slimly attended meeting of citizens was held at the Central school Wednesday evening to deliberate over the matter of building a new school house. The meeting having been called by the board to get an expression of opinion on the subject to guide its members.

Only about thirty people, in all, showed up, but in this small crowd considerable divergence of opinion was manifested as to the best course to pursue.
Director Barge was elected chairman of the meeting, and explained at some length the financial condition of district No. 7 and the necessity for supplying more school room. Several others expressed opinions on the subject, all agreeing that more room was needed. Health Officer Frank served notice that school could not be held again in the basement of the Columbia school building, as the place was unhealthy and would be condemned for school purposes. Several persons thought that a new school house ought to be built on or near Nob Hill, while others declared that a two-room addition to the Columbia building should be made.

The result was the passage of a resolution in favor of a fresh issue of bonds to the amount of $30,000, to run twenty years at 4 1/2 per cent. interest for the purpose of constructing an eight-room building on N. Natchez avenue, a $6000 new building on Nob Hill, and also the proposed two room addition to the Columbia school. It was the sense of the meeting, however, that the work should not be started this year on the new buildings, and that the board should have authority to select temporary quarters to accommodate an overflow during the coming school year.

Back From California.
James Stuart, the well known pioneer of Yakima county, arrived home last Sunday after an absence of several months in southern California. Mr. Stuart left for that country last October to take charge of the carpenter work in the construction of the great international irrigation canal which is being constructed through a portion of southern California, crossing the line into Mexico.

The water is taken from the Colorado river and is conducted for quite a long ways through the desert in two separate canals. Already 125 miles of main ditches have been constructed, with 275 miles of laterals, covering an area of 200,000 acres of land that proves highly productive under water. This vast undertaking is being put through by the California Development company. C. R. Rockwood, who at one time was chief engineer of the Sunnyside canal, is vice president and general manager of the corporation.
Mr. Stuart says that the thermometer ranged as high as 126 in the shade before he left there, which was a little too high for him. He does not expect to return there.

Emery Wheel Files to Pieces.
Tuesday morning a distressing accident occurred at the machine shop of Schichtl & Aikens, caused by the bursting of an emery wheel. W. R. Clarkson, an employee, was sharpening a tool on the stone at the time and sustained severe injuries, his collar bone being broken in two places and a gas cut in his throat by the flying particles. While the wounds are painful, they are not considered serious, and the patient, it is thought, will soon be able to be out again. Clarkson came here about four months ago with his family from Centralia.

Looking For Tracy.
Sheriff Tucker, with a posse of five men, left town early Thursday morning in a hack, taking also saddle horses, to begin a still hunt for the outlaw, Harry Tracy.

There is a great air of mystery about the sheriff's office regarding the expedition. Deputy Sindall is as dumb as an oyster on the subject, and says that he has been instructed to give out no information, although a local paper prints an interview with him this week on the subject. It is a matter of almost common knowledge about town, however, as to who the different individuals are that make up the party, their intentions and their objective point.

The sheriff's object is to guard the two mountain passes—the Natchez and the one leading to the Summit mining district—and intercept Tracy should he happen along. The latest news from Tracy indicates that he has donned back on his trail to the Sound, which, if the case, will give the sheriff and his posse a wild goose chase.

The marriage of Miss Ella, the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. Y. Heckman, to Edwin M. Smithers, of Roslyn, occurred at the family home on S. Third street, in this city, Monday evening, Rev. H. M. Bartlett officiating. The happy couple will make their home in Roslyn, and have the best wishes of a host of friends.

H. H. Lombard and bride returned home Wednesday night from their bridal tour to southern Alaska, having arrived at Seattle Sunday after a two days' stop-over at Victoria. The genial groom has been obliged to spend a goodly portion of his time in receiving the congratulations of his numerous friends and in handing out samples of pure Havanas.

Senator Warburton's Figures.
Regardless of the accuracy or the inaccuracy of the figures presented by Senator Warburton of Tacoma, his statements emphasize the need of a state railroad commission. It goes without saying that the railroads ought to bear their just share of taxation—that their properties ought to be assessed on the basis that other properties are assessed. If the railroads are escaping a part of this just burden, it follows that other taxpayers, in addition to bearing their own burden, are made to bear a portion of the burden which should be carried by the railroads.

A state railway commission, equipped with the taxing powers of the Indiana commission, would turn the searchlight upon this complicated problem. If the railroads are paying all the taxes they ought to pay, they should be willing to endure this official investigation. If they are dodging taxes in a degree that even approaches the startling assertions of Senator Warburton, the abuse is flagrant and the conditions scandalous.—Spokesman-Review.

The Hottest Place On Earth.
Two hundred miles south of Death Valley, in almost a straight line, is the famous Colorado Desert, which, if possible, is even more horrible than Death Valley itself, although, of course, this includes but a small portion of the area of California, which, as a whole, is one of the most fertile in the Union. It covers 9000 square miles, and in some parts its bottom is 230 feet below tide-water.

Reliable authorities assert that it is the most intensely hot spot on the face of the earth; the Sahara is nowhere compared with it. Its surface may fairly be said to be strewn with the bones of human being who have lost their lives there.

One might call this the ideal desert of the world; in no other of the earth's most fearful wastes can be found such natural conditions of horror. Even the mirage, tempter of the dying traveler's despair, reaches a more extraordinary development there than anywhere else. On any fine day—and in that region all days are fine, because there is no rain—one may behold in the Colorado Desert, where all is hopeless misery around, what appear to be beautiful lakes, tempting verdure, and even towns.—Saturday Evening Post.

Named It "Horse Heaven."

James Kinney, of this city, who enjoys the distinction of being one of the pioneers of the Yakima valley, says that he named Horse Heaven in 1881. Formerly it was called the Bedrock Springs country.

Mr. Kinney was going down the valley on the occasion of naming the country afore mentioned, and having camped one night below Prosser, awoke the next morning to find that his animals had strayed, and the tracks led up the mountain side and over into an upland plain beautiful to behold, and there he found the runaway horses cropping the succulent bunch grass with apparent great relish. "Surely this is Horse Heaven!" quoth Mr. Kinney to himself. The name sounded appropriate, and in spite of some efforts to call it "Columbia Plains," Mr. Kinney's name stuck, and thus it is known; and that is how the name Horse Heaven happened.—Prosser Falls Bulletin.

Ex-Mayor H. S. Rowe of Portland and City Auditor Thomas Devlin of the same place were in town Monday. Mr. Rowe, who was at one time president of the Yakima National bank, is a great believer in the future of Yakima and the surrounding country. This town, he says, in ten years ought to have 30,000 people. Since his retirement from the mayoralty, Mr. Rowe has been connected with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway in the capacity of Pacific coast agent.

Col. James Hamilton Lewis stopped off between trains Wednesday to confer with Whitson & Parker on some legal matters and incidentally to extend the glad hand, as he put it, to numerous old friends here. The colonel only recently emerged from a Chicago hospital, where he was laid up for several weeks as the result of having been accidentally trampled upon and knocked down by a wild horse in one of the leading streets of the "windy city" during the recent labor riots there. A sore foot is now the only visible reminder of the colonel's misfortune.

Wednesday's Times states that Miss Sadie Donovan, formerly of this city and a sister of Charles and Peter Donovan, has secured a verdict of $10,000 against Dr. Wilfred J. Lawrie, a Seattle physician, in her suit for breach of promise, instituted several months ago. The defendant made no appearance—pretty good evidence that he had no case.

The State Fair Premium List for 1902 has made its appearance from the press of the Denny-Coryell company of Seattle. It is a pamphlet of 66 pages, one half of which is advertising matter. It is a very neat production from a typographical standpoint, although so much advertising matter has the effect of cheapening its appearance. Copies may be had from the secretary at his office.

Justice Taggard on Saturday tied the nuptial knot for Wm. Meister, the well known horse buyer of Seattle, and Miss Hilda Laubach of this city. The groom is well known to a great many people in this section, while the fair bride, who is a step-daughter of A. Johnson, grew to womanhood in this city, and has a host of friends here. The happy couple will make their home in Seattle.
