Dear Mr. Relander:

Pete Long, whose recent canonization has turned his disposition toward the better, tells me that you are an easy man to get on with at your worst; and that, at your best, you are capable of accepting the inequalities of life in the most amiable manner.

Now I realize that flattery will get me nowhere so I will come straight to the point which in this case is an "Iwanna."

I wanna copy of the Yakima Treaty Centennial pamphlet just like the one Pete has. There is, of course, one difference, I'm willing to pay for it. Unless you have already done so, I would like to place a copy in the Northwest Case of the Spokane Public Library. So if you have two, and feel you care to, send them both along with a statement of cost and I'll see that the job is done. My wife and I have recently taken up the study of Northwest history and have learned from trying to fill in the omitted moments of these relatively recent events, the importance of keeping a record; and that even those functions that we accept as commonplace through familiarity will be read as important by some future historian or student.

Should you ever get up this way please feel free to "sit at our board for a bite." We have no TT (telephone or television) but we are considered as authorities on listening and the latch-string is always out.

Sincerely,

Ed Foster
