Will James is doing the pencil pushing on the Republic during the absence of Mr. Sperry--Yakima Herald, January 12, 1893.

Newspapers

The Spokane (Spokesman) is no more.

On Sunday its last issue appeared and gave voice to the announcement that it had been consolidated with the Review and that on the following day the two papers would be merged and appear under the latter caption, the owners being Harvey Scott and H.L. Pittock of Portland and A.M. Cannon and W.H. Cowles of Spokane.

The fight between the two papers has been a long and bitter one and the only wonder is how they kept going for two years during which time they admit having lost $200,000 aside from money invested in the plant--Yakima Herald, Feb. 23, 1893.

It is rumored that a proposition to purchase the Republic has been made to C.M. Holton and that if accepted a stock company will be formed, composed of L.F. Sperry R.K. Nichols, A.B. Weed, George Donald, John Reed and a number of other republicans who will put up the money and conduct the paper under the management of Mr. Sperry--Yakima Herald, March 2, 1893.

The Olympian and Tribune of Olympia have followed in the footsteps of the Spokane Review and Spokesman and consolidated.

Newspapers of the northwest are beginning to realize that self preservation is a more potent law than local pride.

Many people do not appreciate what they owe to the newspapers.

They convince themselves that their duty is done if they subscribe for a local paper and pay their subscriptions.

They do not in many instances recognize that to the newspaper more than any other factor is due the upbuilding of the town and country. That the newspaper is the medium by which the outside world is informed of a vantage of soil, climate, school facilities, manufacturing openings, productions and business opportunities and is therefore the means of creating population and business, enhancing the values of property and enriching the values of property and enriching the individual. --

Yakima Herald, March 9, 1893.

Newspapers

The main shaft of The Republic newspaper press was broken on Tuesday and the paper will be printed on The Herald press until the necessary repairs can be made--Yakima Herald, April 13, 1893.

Editor Cowan of the Seattle Press-Times was a Yakima visitor last week and tried to work up a scheme for the purchase of The Republic or the starting of a new republican paper. He wanted local assistance but failed to get much encouragement--Yakima Herald, April 13, 1893.

Newspapers

B.B. White of North Yakima arrived in the city yesterday after an absence of several years.

Mr. White formerly owned the land on which the Review building now stands and could hardly believe his eyes on looking at the handsome buildings on which were vacant lots in his days. He says Spokane is the most wonderful as well as the most prosperous city in the state--Spokane Review, May, 1893.

Newspapers

The Yakima Herald has increased its size to an eight column paper and now uses water as the motive power to work its presses.

We are glad to see this evidence of prosperity on the part of our contemporary and hope it may continue . Brains and enterprize will always win the battle of life--The Dalles Times -Mountaineer, July, 1893.

William W. Watson, brother of Mrs. A.F. Snelling, is in the city and figuring on engaging in the newspaper business here.

Mr. Watson has had much experience as a publisher and editor at various points on the Sound and in Portland--Yakima Herald, August 3, 1893.

The proprietors of the Rosalia Rustler have been sued for $5,000 damages. A poem appeared in that paper some time since which he says reflects on the culinary excellence of his hostlery and has caused a large number of his patrons to shun the place.

Newspaper advertising may be of no benefit to business but how soon the effects are noticeable when ~~some~~ one gets a good roast--Yakima Herald, August 17, 1893.

Newspaper

The Herald would like a correspondent at each of the following postoffices:

Ahtanum, Tappico, Cowychee, Fort Simcoe, Yakima City, Prosser, Kiona and Ellah.

The current news of the day from all sections of the county is what The Herald is after--Yakima Herald, June 1, 1893.

Capt. C.M. Holton, proprietor of our neighbor, The Republic, and who now holds the distinguished position of commercial agent for Uncle Sam at Swansea, Wales, returned to this city on Wednesday morning on a leave of absence for sixty days.

It is now quite safe to assume that Mr. Holton will remain with us permanently of which his many friends and patrons will be glad to learn--Yakima Herald, August 17, 1893.

By a change of management W.W. Watson is now editor of The Yakima Herald and James R. Coe is business manager.

E.M. Reed, the retiring manager and editor has made a great success of the Herald and it is a credit to its town. It will without doubt continue to improve--Ellensburg Capital, August 31, 1893.

Newspapers

The Yakima Herald put in its appearance at the office last week with the name of W.W. Watson at the mast head.

Mr. Watson was at one time connected with the Oting Oracle, and is a writer of more than usual ability and force:

Not only that but he is gentlemanly and courteous to brother members of the profession which can not be said of all our editors in this state.

We enter The Herald upon our exchange list with pleasure and trust that Bro. Watson may derive as much pleasure and profit from pursuing our papers as we shall from his--~~Ooting Oracle~~ Auburn Argus--September, 1893.

H.N. Maguire of Spokane, a veteran newspaper man, formerly editor of the Colfax Advocate, the founder of the Western Prophet at Spokane and now a member of the editorial staff of the Northwest Rural Tribune is in the city.

He will address the people of North Yakima and vicinity on the subject of Populism and its tenets, purposes and plans--Yakima Herald, September 28 , 1893.

Newspapers

A stone building is being erected on First street between Yakima avenue and Chestnut street for the Yakima Republic.

It will be a neat and substantial structure and The Herald wishes it all the comfort a stone wall and a party platform can afford it.

We are exceedingly pleased to note the prosperity of our neighbor, for it deserves it; and the community will rejoice with us in the fact, because the thrifty newspaper reflects the business character of the community in which it has its tumultuous being--Yakima Herald, November 2, 1893.

Newspapers

Frank Dickson, recently one of the publishers of The Herald, but now general agent of the Evans-Smith Co., left this morning for San Francisco.

He will be absent probably all winter. His many friends in this community wish him abundant success and they have confidence that, being an 18 carat hustler, he will earn it. The Herald joins them in their prayer--^Yakima Herald, November 23, 1893.

An experienced newspaper man in Seattle writes The Herald that the plant of the Ballard News will probably be transferred to Prosser Falls and used in a weekly publication at that point.

Those who authorized the statement that they would establish a paper there a month ago have probably abandoned the proposition as nothing has been heard of it since--^Yakima Herald, December 14, 1893
