THE BAPTIST ADJOURNED

A Very Successful Three Days' Session — Visiting Delegates Are Taken for a Drive on Nob Hill.

The Baptist state convention adjourned Thursday night after a very successful three days' session.

Thursday afternoon the visiting delegates were taken for a drive through some of the richest section of the Yakima valley. This was the first time a great many of the delegates ever had an opportunity to visit an irrigated country and they were wonderfully surprised with the evidences of development.

The principal event in Thursday's program was the interesting address of Dr. C. A. Woody of Portland on the "Problem of the Country Church." Before adjournment Thursday the following committees were appointed:

Resolutions—Rev. W. E. Powell, W. W. Adams and J. W. Cook.

Time place preacher—E. S. Clark, I. S. Leonard.

Obituaries—G. W. Griffin, A. F. Snell and John Bentzien.

Standing committees were named as follows:

Con. Missions—R. W. King, E. P. Lyon, E. T. Trimble.

Home Missions—G. W. Griffin, W. M. Jennings, A. H. Palmer.

Foreign Missions—W. A. McCall, F. A. Hill, C. H. Braden.

Sunday School—B. F. Barge, Mrs. J. D. Matthews, C. A. Lester.

Educational Society—O. W. Van Osdel, H. W. Thompson, D. W. Myers.

Women's Work—Mrs. W. A. Watson, Mrs. E. S. Clark, Mrs. W. H. Jennings.

Publication Society—F. H. Thompson.

The afternoon was devoted to the work of the women members of the church in its various departments.

Buying More Hops.

Isaac Pincus & Son of Tacoma bought yesterday through their representative H. A. Whitman, 100 bales of hops from Ernest Hill and 63 bales from Joe Slav-in. The price was not given out for personal reasons. It is safe to assume that not less than 30 cents, however, was paid.

RUSSIAN DEFEAT FORETOLD

War Correspondents Arriving at Victoria Are Sure that Russians Are no Match for Japs.

VICTORIA, B. C., Wednesday, Oct. 19.—When Frederick Palmer, of Collier's Weekly, and E. F. K. night of the London Morning Post were here last week, they made to the The Colonist interviewer a prophecy that has come true with somewhat ghastly force.

The two famous war correspondents, in reply to what they thought of Koropatin's southward move, said it was simply suicidal and that the man was rushing to certain defeat, perhaps to annihilation with his whole force, and that no matter what might be cabled about Russian successes, time would show as certainly and as cruelly as it had shown since the start of the war, that the Russian soldier and the Russian sailor are no match whatever for the Japanese, nor are the Russian commanders or officers for an instant to be compared with the Japanese. The events within the week have confirmed the statements of the correspondents in a most remarkable way.

Fred Palmer would not listen to any suggestions that the Russians might be using up poor material now and that their really good troops might be coming up as fast as the one-horse Siberian railway could fetch them along.

"No, no," he said emphatically, laughing at the eagerness of the interviewer to find one faint streak of hope for the Russians, "it's a sad fact, but the best troops that Russia can call up have been set up in front of the Japanese and the Japanese have knocked them down as quickly, as thoroughly and as easily as they did the Siberian bores. We know for a fact that those were choice European troops; picked men from the European frontier, carefully trained, members of famous regiments, the flower of the Russian army. The Japanese went through them with no trouble. Compared with the Japanese the Russians can't fight, and at the bayonet and sabre work they are mere clowns along side of the Japanese."

Another thing Palmer pointed out that is most useful in following the reports of the war, is that always where a Japanese retreat, or falling back is reported, and is actually a fact, it is always followed by the delivery of a murderously crushing blow on the pursuing Russians, showing that in all those retreats are cunningly planned traps. Fukushima is the man whose brain is evolving all those brilliant moves on the big checkerboard of Manchuria; he plans the campaigns and Oyama, Kuroki, Oku and Nodzu carry them out in the north and Nogi at Port Arthur, which, by the way, Palmer and Knight think no power on earth can now save.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

It has been reported to me that a certain party, or parties, in this city are canvassing the city, vicinity and county and sell, or offering to sell, coupons for photographs, and as one of the inducements for purchasing said coupons, are representing that the photographs are made and finished by the "New Studio" over the Orpheum theater.

As the Delle Studio is the only photographic studio over the Orpheum theater, I wish to notify the people that I do NOT sell or offer to sell coupons or any other kind of tickets, and that I have not, nor do not, employ or authorize any person or persons to canvass in the name of the Delle Studio for such purpose. That any person or persons making such statements or misrepresentations are prevaricators of the truth, and are a fraud upon the public, by trying to pawn off on them cheap pictures for a first-class article.

The Delle Studio is here to stay. It is the ONLY first-class and up-to-date studio in the city of North Yakima and Central Washington. It turns out nothing but the highest and very best finished platinum pictures that can be produced. It is my desire to protect my patrons, friends and the public at large from being imposed upon in my name, and for this purpose, a liberal reward will be paid to any one who will produce sufficient evidence upon which to base a prosecution and secure a conviction of the guilty parties.

DELLE STUDIO,

By Mrs. Lee C. Delle, Proprietor.

Rousing Meeting at Wapato.

Farmer Todd and a number of Yakima county democratic candidates for office were in Wapato Wednesday night and held a rousing democratic meeting. Enthusiasm was overflowing and indications for democratic success were strongly apparent. Both republicans and democrats are going down the line together solid for Senator Turner.

RUSSIANS ARE AGGRESSIVE

Are Shelling the Japanese Positions.

TOKYO, Wednesday, Oct. 19.—Manchurian headquarters, telegraphing yesterday afternoon, says:

"The conditions in front of the main strength of the right army show no considerable change. The forces of the enemy which have been driven from Bensiu mainly retreated toward Koatai Pass. The enemy's force in front of the right army appears to be diminishing, but the activity of his small forces continues."

There has been no considerable change in front of the center army. The enemy tried several attacks on the night of October 17, but was repulsed every time. Today only an artillery duel is in progress.

"The enemy in front of the left army is occasionally but indirectly shelling our positions. The enemy stopped immediately in front of our positions at a distance of from 600 to 1,000 metres and is fortifying his positions. The enemy that opposed the left detachment of our army has halted at a line embracing Mengtapao, Hanchiatzu and Hangebiatai and is fortifying his positions."

A Republican's Opinion.

Editor Democrat: Mr. Robertson of the Yakima Republic, remarks in a recent issue of his daily, that "no democrat will be elected in this county this fall except by republican votes." And further, that "every man on the republican ticket is worthy of support by republicans." Mr. Robertson's first statement is entirely proper, and I can only add that certain of the democratic nominees are just as sure of receiving sufficient republican votes to elect, as that the election is to occur Tuesday, November 8.

But the second statement of the editor of the Republic is of little consequence. It is not difficult to understand how such an appeal could be consistently made to republican voters, if there were no question in the public mind as to the genuineness of the republicanism of the gentlemen comprising the republican ticket; but with five or six of those worthies in the doubtful column—the candidate for superior judge an erstwhile Mississippi democrat whose sincerity as a republican should be weighed with his own admission that "to be in good society in the south it was necessary to be a democrat," and the nominee for prosecuting attorney a Cleveland democrat so hungry for office that he thought it not below his dignity professionally nor his honor as a man, in previous years, to work for the nomination before the conventions of both old parties in the same year—republicans for revenue only, if you please—it is hard to see how such an appeal can have much weight with the intelligent, free-thinking element of the republican party. When it comes to a choice, as it has in this campaign, between men, on the one hand, who are democrats from principle—who are fighting in the open and trusting only to their individual merits for success—and on the other, men who have forsaken their former party for no better reason than that it is the party of the minority in the county, and who are now masquerading their treason under a republican veneering or onion skin thickness, the writers faith in the Americanism of the man who casts the ballot justifies him in concluding that the preference will easily lie with the first named. It is about time to eliminate such aerobatism from both parties. The Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde type of politician and office seeker, the truckler and demagogue, should, and in the opinion of the writer will receive a mighty rebuff and condemnation at the hands of the people of this county on election day.

Of course Mr. Robertson is wholly consistent in his article above quoted. He has not been a resident of Yakima county many years, but it is a notorious fact that he changed his politics when he changed his residence, and has evolved from a ranting Clevelandite to ring-master of the republican party in our county. He attempts only his own justification.

A REPUBLICAN.

Must Build Good Fences.

Judge Taggard fined J. A. Breeding, a farmer, $25 and costs Thursday for refusing to comply with the law and build a lawful fence on his place. The judge wishes to give warning in matters of this kind and says that in the future he will impose the full penalty of the law in such cases. When a man puts up a fence on his place it must be a good one.

JAPS ARE CONCENTRATING

Russians Reconnoitering Capture Japanese Guns.

ST. PETERSBURG, Wednesday, Oct. 19.—Gen. Sakharoff telegraphs at mid-day today that the Japanese are concentrating at Lin Shimpu, west of the railroad.

A detachment of Russian cavalry reconnoitering last night in the vicinity of Shakhe captured two Japanese guns with no losses to themselves.

The general advises that last night passed quietly, with the exception of the exploits of the Russian cavalry, and says the Russian left flank has advanced slightly.

RANCHER CHOKES TO DEATH.

TACOMA, Wednesday, Oct. 19.—Jas. Allen, a rancher of Summer, was choked to death at the Puyallup Hotel last evening by a large piece of meat which he undertook to swallow.

Breckner-Chadwick.

At 12 o'clock Thursday, October 20, in the Episcopal church, Rev. Collins joined in marriage Mr. Walter Breckner of Brainard, Minn., and Miss Blanche Chadwick, a recent arrival in this city.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of a few friends. The bride was given away by her mother.

Mrs. Chadwick and daughter, Miss Blanche, came here last summer from Minnesota. They have made a great many friends and Miss Chadwick's charming manner and fascinating personality won for her a host of admirers. She was engaged to Mr. Breckner six months in Minnesota and he arrived here Wednesday to take his bride back with him. The wedding was kept secret until its performance. Amid a shower of rice and old shoes the couple boarded Thursday afternoon's train for their future home in Brainard, Minn.

Died at Advanced Age.

Mrs. Catherine McCarty, who was the oldest woman in the state and a resident of Chehalis, Washington, died in that city Tuesday, October 18, at the advanced age of 106 years. The deceased was the mother-in-law of Timothy J. Lynch. Mr. Lynch and his son Attorney John H. Lynch, left here Thursday morning to attend the funeral. Mrs. Catherine Lynch of the Abtanum and her two children, John and Mary, also went to Chehalis. Mrs. Lynch, daughter of the deceased, on account of sickness, was unable to attend the funeral.

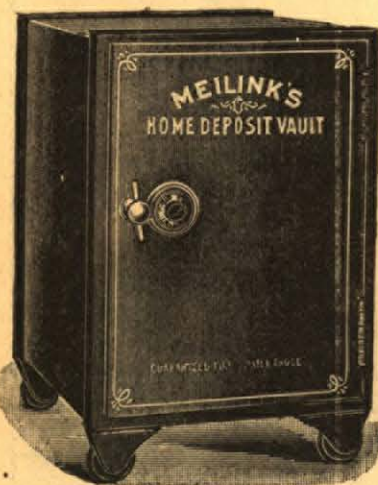

Ladies' Musical Club.

A regular meeting of the Ladies' Musical club was held at the home of Mrs. F. B. Moore on North Second street Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The program both individually and taken as a whole, was an excellent one. All of the numbers were carefully prepared and gives evidence of much interest being taken in the club work this year. On account of Mrs. Moore's beautiful and spacious home and her courteous hospitality the program was doubly enjoyed. The program follows:

Mr. Mead a Disappointment.
Albert E. Mead, Republican nominee for governor, has come and gone. Being a new man in public life in this state and unknown up to a few months ago, his coming was awaited with interest by the people of this city and surrounding country. Since his nomination for the high office by the Republican state convention they have read and heard a great deal about Mr. Mead, much of which, perhaps, is not altogether creditable to the candidate, and naturally they were anxious to see and hear the man. Mr. Mead was therefore greeted by a large audience fully as large as the one that greeted Judge Turner, a few evenings before.

So far as we have been able to observe the impression left by Mr. Mead upon the minds of the doubtful voters in his audience was not a good one. In spite of all the vehemence with which he spoke there was an air of insincerity about the man that strikes people unfavorably. His explanation of his attitude on the railway commission measure was not calculated to satisfy any man who believes in the wisdom and justice of enacting such a law. It is true that he said that if elected he would sign any commission bill passed up to him from the legislature. In saying this, however, he was taking no chances for Mr. Mead must certainly know that if he should become governor or his good friends, the railroad men, will see to it that he is not embarrassed by having any commission bill passed up to him to sign. His attitude on this question, the most important in the state campaign, pleased nobody except such partisans of whose support the candidate was sure in advance.

Mr. Mead does not impress people with being in any sense a great man. He really is not a big enough man mentally to make a fitting governor of a great state like Washington. Any unprejudiced man who looks the candidate over carefully and hears him speak can see that this is true. We have no desire to make invidious comparisons between the two gubernatorial candidates and we don't know as it is necessary to do so any way, but certainly any comparison that is fairly made can not be to the detriment of Judge Turner.

That Mr. Mead's appearance here was a good deal of a disappointment, even to his most ardent supporters, is unquestionably a fact.

W. T. Dovell, the Seattle gentleman who occupied so much time at Mr. Mead's meeting here and really said very little, was one of the 115 delegates from King county to the Republican state convention at Tacoma. As is generally well known the delegation from King county wore the Farrell brand, and in all things did the bidding of Mr. Farrell and his managers. It was the King county delegation, it will be remembered, that started all the trouble at Tacoma by sending for Mr. Farrell to tell the convention what to do. Mr. Dovell, of course, played an unimportant part in all that took place, but his associations at that time probably reconciled him to go before the public as he is now doing with a plea for the railroads.

The fact that a large party of leading local Republicans assembled at the depot Wednesday afternoon to welcome Mr. Mead, their candidate for governor, on the arrival of the North Coast Limited, raised quite a laugh when a bystander remarked: "Oh, h—l, Mead don't travel on the North Coast Limited; no passes go on that train." Mr. Mead arrived on the following train.

It is needless to say that the remarks of Mr. W. T. Dovell were not very well received in this city. It may be true, as Mr. Dovell claims, that a good many people fail to give in all their property to the assessor, but that fact doesn't excuse the railroads for doing the same thing. Dovell made votes here for the Democratic ticket.

J. N. Pickrell of Colfax, ex-prosecuting attorney of Whitman county and a prominent railroad politician of that county, spoke at Toppenish last night in company with Dr. W. H. Hare, Republican nominee for the legislature. It's a wonder Doc don't take his running mate, Rev. Lee Johnson along with him.

The Democratic county ticket grows in favor every day with the people. It is made up on the whole of worthy and competent men, who, if elected, will perform the duties of their several offices to the satisfaction of the people who pay the taxes.

North Yakima's registration of 1449 indicates that the city is making a healthy and most satisfactory growth. Taking the number of voters registered as a basis it is fair to assume that the town now has a population of over 7,000.

The Express is receiving the Daily Democrat of North Yakima. It is a credit to the town, and Editor Medill is to be congratulated on his success in the newspaper business.—Pasco Express.

Mead's Approval of Dovell.

A. E. Mead, the Farrell candidate for governor, sat on the platform at Riverview Tuesday night while W. T. Dovell of Seattle, who is accompanying him on his campaign tour, declared that "the railroads came nearer paying their just proportion of taxes than any other property owner in the state."

By inference Mr. Mead indorsed that declaration. He spoke after Mr. Dovell had concluded, and said nothing to contradict or in disapproval of Mr. Dovell's open and frank defense of the present system of railway taxation. By all the rules of political campaigning therefore, Mr. Dovell's declaration must be accepted as one which Mr. Mead himself approves.

This means simply that the Farrell leaders have not only determined to prevent railroad regulation through the agency of a commission, but that they have repudiated their bogus, milk and water declaration in favor of tax reform which they caused to be inserted in the platform adopted by the Farrell convention in Tacoma.

Out of their own mouths they are condemned, because no man in this state stands closer to the Farrell organization than does Mr. Dovell, who was attorney for the Northern Pacific at Walla Walla for years before he moved to Seattle, who is a bosom friend of B. S. Grossep, Mr. Farrell's chief assistant in running railroad politics, and who is himself a member of a law firm which has one of the largest corporation practices in the state.

In view of his tacit approval of Mr. Dovell's declaration Mr. Mead can not pretend that he has any sympathy with the demand for reform in railroad taxation. With each passing day the so-called Republican state organization, which is supporting Mr. Mead, is showing more plainly the cloven hoof of the railroads; and the people owe to frank souls like Mr. Dovell a vote of thanks for assisting in the expose.—Spokane-Review.

STRIKE AT TRADUCERS OF TURNER

Judge Turner Will be Elected—Infamous Campaign Being Made Against Him by the Railroad Hirelings Helps Him in the Race.

SEATTLE, Oct. 20.—(Special Correspondence)—While the dominant issue in the present campaign is a moral one (whether political promises mean anything and whether the railroad lobby shall rule the state), the dominant political issue is the question of the legislative regulation of railroads. On account of having been overshadowed by the larger moral issue the question of regulating railroads has been but comparatively little discussed. No discussion is needed at this time to convince the people of the state of the justice of regulating railroads, though there are a few who are not convinced as to the advisability of such a course. Such persons would do well to read for information and guidance an article entitled "Three Railroads—One Railroad," published in the October bulletin of the Portland Chamber of Commerce. The article is from the pen of W. A. Mears, secretary of the North Pacific Coast Jobbers & Manufacturers' Association and Mr. Mears has, without doubt, devoted a great deal of thought and study to the question. He says:

"I have lately had prepared a set of comparison tables showing class and commodity rates out of Portland, Seattle and Tacoma west, and out of St. Paul, Minn., and Omaha, Neb., east, to points distant out of each city 25, 50, 100, 150, 200, 350, 450, 550, 650, 750, 850 and 950 miles, the latter being about midway between the two terminals with the following results:

"The rates from the Pacific Coast terminals east to the half-way point taking an average on third, fourth and fifth classes (under which head most of the class goods fall) are 83 per cent higher than from St. Paul and Omaha west, while taking the comparison east across the states of Oregon and Washington, as against like distances from St. Paul and Omaha, they are 97 per cent higher.

"The same comparisons on all articles including agricultural implements, hardware, liquor, paints, paper, groceries and stamped and enamelware, shows that the rate from Pacific Coast terminals east to the midway point averages 90 per cent higher than from St. Paul and Omaha west; and across the states of Oregon and Washington east they average 109 per cent higher than for the same distance from St. Paul and Omaha west."

This is the state ment of an expert who has made a studious investigation of the subject, not for campaign purposes, but for the purpose of getting at the facts for the use of shippers in arguing with the railroad companies for better treatment in the future. It seems inconceivable that a man can read these conclusions and continue to maintain that there is no need in Washington for an effective railroad commission.

SEATTLE, Oct. 20.—(Special Correspondence)—A notable feature of the progress of the present campaign is the fact that no important charge has been made by the Republicans against the Democratic candidates which the persons making the charge have been able to maintain. Early in the campaign the Republican press bureau spread abroad over the state the charge that Judge Turner had once referred to the soldiers of the American army as "McKinley's hired assassins." The persons making this charge were called liars in plain language by Judge Turner and the Post-Intelligencer at least had the good grace to confess to the charge and retract the charge. Smaller papers are still circulating the falsehood with much gusto.

Last Friday night ex-Senator John L. Wilson delivered an address in Seattle in the course of which he charged Judge Turner with having received a fee of $500 for going before Secretary Long of the navy department in 1901 and making the argument which induced Mr. Long to award the Moran Bros. Co. of Seattle the contract for the construction of the battleship Nebraska. Robert Moran's attention was called to the statement and he called Mr. Wilson a plain liar in polite language. When the falsity of his statement was exposed, Mr. Wilson sought to get out of having made the statement by saying that he had been misquoted in the Post-Intelligencer, his own newspaper.

For some one to call Mr. Wilson or the Post-Intelligencer a liar each and every time he or it utters a palpable falsehood in the present campaign would keep at least one man busy from now until election day. Among the other falsehoods it has given circulation to is that Judge Turner worked against the railroad commission section in the constitutional convention, and this falsehood was disproven by quoting from the Post-Intelligencer's own columns for the period of the convention.

Republican weekly papers which receive their editorial matter from the Republican State Central Committee strongly flavored with the personal desires of John L. Wilson appear to be much worried because George Stevenson is not supporting Mr. Mead for governor. One reason why the Wilson bureau is insistently "knocking" Mr. Stevenson is that Mr. Stevenson is working for the election of Charles Sweeney for United States senator instead of John L. Wilson the candidate of the Wilson bureau. And the principle reason why Mr. Stevenson is opposing Mr. Mead is that Mr. Mead himself is for Mr. Wilson for senator and refuses, wherever he goes, to ask his hearers to vote for legislative candidates on the Republican tickets, unless those candidates are known to be Wilson men. Very naturally Mr. Stevenson, as one of Mr. Sweeney's managers, is not going to tear his shirt for the election of a gubernatorial candidate who, when elected, will oppose the election of Mr. Stevenson's senatorial candidate. Rather than do so he prefers to see elected a governor of the opposite party who will have no influence on a Republican senatorial contest. As to Mr. Stevenson's connection with the railroad lobby we have the word of both J. D. Ferrell and B. F. Grossep, in published interviews, printed a short time before the Tacoma convention, that Mr. Stevenson is not connected with the railroads in any way. The only railroad lobbyists the Wilson press bureau is worrying about in this campaign are those which have severed their connection with the railroads. Their only references to Mr. Farrell and other active railroad lobbyists have been words of defense, praise and apology.

There are two state boards in which the voters should have a very great interest. One of these is the state equalization board which has to do with equalizing the assessments of the state. This board is composed of the state auditor, the secretary of state and the land commissioner. The other is the state commission having the handling of the permanent school fund. This board consists of the secretary of state, the state treasurer and the commissioner of public lands. Serious charges are now pending against both of these boards. The state board of equalization this year reduced the railroad property assessments of the state this year by more than $1,000,000 and the charge is made in a suit pending in the King County Superior court of so manipulating the permanent school fund as to enable private brokers to demand fees from cities and counties as a condition to inducing the members of the board to bid on issues of local bonds.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 20.—"The election of Judge Turner and the entire Democratic state ticket is now assured," said Henry Drum, chairman of the advisory committee of the Democratic State Central Committee this morning. "The very estimates given out by the Republican campaign managers contain the strongest evidence in support of the theory that the Republicans themselves see the inevitable storm approaching."

"Entirely aside from the issues presented in the campaign the people of the state have come to realize that it is a opportunity is afforded them to vote for a candidate for governor of Judge Turner's distinguished ability and of his acquaintance and friendly relations and influence with the great national political leaders of both parties, even including President Roosevelt himself.

"But while the friends of good, capable and honest government and the opponents of corporate rule and dictation are electing Judge Turner I sincerely trust, believe and hope that they will at the same time register their emphatic disapproval of both the acts and the methods of those enemies of good government and those creatures of corporate power who have during the campaign devoted their time and energies to traducing Judge Turner and his supporters, and to circulating false and malicious charges and accusations against him and them. The accusations which they have circulated have all fallen of their own weight or been overtaken and disproven by reference to the most reliable authorities so have done little or no harm except to serve as an indication that in some small measure those circulating them believe that the people of the state approve of such methods. I fell confident that the people do not approve of them and I sincerely trust and hope that they will register their emphatic disapproval in the coming election."

While Mr. Drum uses no names it is easy for persons familiar with Washington politics to call off the list of the traducers of Judge Turner and his sincere and honest supporters in the present campaign. The past grand master of the subversive order of traducers of character, personal and political, has been Ex-Senator John L. Wilson and his newspaper, the Post-Intelligencer. The Post-Intelligencer began the campaign by making the accusation that Judge Turner once referred to the soldiers of the American army as "McKinley's hired assassins." This charge was emphatically denied by Judge Turner and the Post-Intelligencer thereupon published a retraction in which it stated that the expression is to be found in none of Judge Turner's addresses in congress. But even with the retraction it published a mass of other equally false and malicious accusations and has kept the practice up ever since that time.

It was the Post-Intelligencer which started the accusation that in the constitutional convention Judge Turner worked for the railroads and this charge was repeated and reiterated in half a dozen issues of that paper. Judge Turner's friends referred to the files of the Post-Intelligencer for the period the convention was in session and quoted from the paper's own stories from its special correspondent in complete refutation of the charge and the paper has ceased making it. Quite recently, however, the paper has had garbled certified copies of portions of the official journal of the convention made at Olympia and the readers of that paper may prepare themselves for another flood of charges against Judge Turner, though they may not be published until it is so near election day that it will be impossible to look up the P-I's files to refute the specific charges.

It was John L. Wilson, personally, who, in an address delivered in Seattle, made the charge that when Judge Turner made the argument before Secretary of the Navy Long which induced Secretary Long to give the Moran Bros. company the battleship contract he did so for a few of $500. The matter was brought to the attention of Robert Moran who promptly and properly branded the statement as a falsehood.

But Senator Wilson has not by any means been the only traducer of Judge Turner's character. The whole Wilson-Palmer-railroad state committee has throughout the campaign pursued the policy of demanding that all participants devote the major portion of their time and energy to attacking Judge Turner's political record. Judge Milo Root, acting chairman of the committee by the grace of Mr. Wilson's influence is credited with having advised an eastern Washington campaign speaker to "praise Mead to the skies and give Turner H—l."

Secretary of State Sam H. Nichols is credited in the Tacoma News with having said in a public address at Tacoma early in the campaign that when the Republicans of the state elected the present state officers they elected a Democratic governor, that he died and another man became governor who was also a Democrat and that he hoped that the next time the Republicans elected a governor they would elect a man the rest of the state officers could associate with.

Congressman Cushman was appealed to by the Wilson-Palmer committee early in the campaign to make the criticism and abuse of Judge Turner one of its principal elements. This Mr. Cushman declined to do, although consenting to criticize Judge Turner's political record. Because he refused to go the lengths desired of him by the committee his services on the stump were dispensed with and he was permitted to go east to participate in an Illinois congressional campaign.

But both Congressman Jones and Humphrey have followed the program cut out for them and their addresses have teemed with abuse of Judge Turner. Congressman Jones, although coming from eastern Washington has throughout his political career shown an aptitude in taking railroad orders which has won him the highest regard of the railroad leaders, and the action of his delegation from Yakima county in lining up against the McBride forces in the Tacoma convention has not done anything but strengthen him in that portion of the state. In his address at Tacoma Monday night his effort towards the criticism of Judge Turner was especially marked, made so on account of the fact that he Republican committee

It is reported on what appears to be reliable authority that the money to pay for the 20,000 copies of the Tacoma Ledger containing Mr. Jones' speech and money to pay for 25,000 copies of the Post-Intelligencer for campaign purposes was secured from the national committee recently by John L. Wilson, under the plea that extra work in Washington is necessary in order to save Roosevelt and the congressional ticket.

Mr. Humphrey has gone to as great lengths as Mr. Jones in the abuse of Judge Turner, calling him a traitor to his country in nearly every speech he has delivered during the campaign.

Friends of good government and enemies of corporate rule and dictation desiring to express their disapproval of these political methods can do so at the polls on election day. Mr. Wilson is a candidate for United States senator and claims to have legislative candidates favorable to him in the counties of Whatcom, San Juan, Island, Clallam, King, Mason, Chehalis, Lewis, Cowlitz, Pacific, Kittitas, Douglas and Spokane and several others. He has become, also, the particular sponsor for the candidacy of Mr. Mead for governor, second only to the railroad bosses. Votes against these candidates are votes in disapproval of the methods pursued by Mr. Wilson and the Post-Intelligencer.

Men who desire to express disapproval of the course pursued by Mr. Jones and Mr. Humphrey can do so by voting against them to the extent of giving a large vote to Congressman Cushman, or even endangering their actual defeat.

Certain political leaders in Washington who are in close touch with the railroad forces have pursued the methods of the Wilson-Palmer-railroad organization for so long and with such success that they have convinced themselves that such methods meet the approval of the people. This year the people are thoroughly aroused and in addition to overthrowing the railroad forces are offered the opportunity to put their stamp of disapproval on the methods pursued by the defenders of railroad political policies.

JOE SMITH.

Here Is Candor.

Says the Portland Oregonian, which has been anti-McBride, anti-Turner and anti-commission:

"The simple fact is that J. J. Hill, controlling the railroads of the state of Washington, had determined to beat McBride because he was regarded as an enemy of railroad business, fanatical and irrational. The railroad people were expostulated with and admonished that their course might throw the direction of the affairs of the state into the hands of some other enemy; but they answered that they didn't care; that they were going to be rid of McBride and let things take their course."

There is candor. James J. Hill set out to down McBride, and did it. And, then, according to the Oregonian, he went way back and sat down. If the Oregonian will open its north window and listen it will hear laughter across the Columbia river; for great will be the mirth over the suggestion that James J. Hill does politics in that way. It cost Hill something to get control of the republican convention and beat Governor McBride, and when Hill pays out railroad money he wants results, and he demands all the results that are in sight.

If Hill had been a man of moderation he might safely have left the game with the defeat of McBride; for the railroad commission forces were united on McBride. They had only one candidate before the convention, and when Hill destroyed that candidate he could not go amiss in choosing between Crocker, Atkinson, Baker and Mead, the only remaining candidates who had any sort of following in the convention.

But Hill is not a man of moderation. He went further, and demanded, through J. D. Farrell in the conference of railroad managers and politicians in Farrell's private car, that the commission plank be stricken from the platform. Farrell and his conferees then made up the railroad ticket which was ratified the next day in open convention.

But there is no need for controversy between the Spokesman-Review and its good friend, the Oregonian. We are agreed on the main fact that James J. Hill, a lifelong democrat, residing 2000 miles from the state of Washington, made up his mind to be "rid of McBride" as governor of Washington, and executed that determination. The only difference between us is that the Oregonian gives Mr. Hill credit for being half a Warwick, while the Spokesman-Review regards him as a Warwick in the full meaning of the term—as both "a setter up and puller down of kings."—Spokesman-Review.

THE HOP MARKET

The Oregonian's Review of the Situation—Prices Are Firm.

The local offices could not report much business yesterday, except trading between dealers. These transactions ran from 30 to 31 cents, and it is said some deals were made at 31 1-2 cents. Probably the largest of these sales was made by Seavey & Metzler to E. J. Smith, 56 bales at 30 1-4 cents. A. J. Luce has been offered 30 cents for all the remainder of his stock of 1904's.

For three or four days there has been a lull in this market, and a few timid holders have had an idea that the market was weak. Nothing could be further from the truth. The pause in the buying was no more pronounced than it has been at several other times this season. It was merely a withdrawal from the market of eastern brewers in an effort to force prices down a point or two. This game has failed in the past and those who know Oregon farmers best say it will fail in the present instance. The growers of this state are too well posted on the actual conditions that govern the market to be stampeded into selling just because buyers are not after them in droves. While the buying pressure that characterized the market last week has been absent, the undertone is as strong as ever, owing to the firm holding of the heavy growers of this state. Word comes from every section of the hop country that the farmers have lined up waiting for better values. Most of them seem to have set their minds on the 35-cent mark.

Estimate of an Authority.

In its estimate of the hop situation, the New York Hop Reporting company figures out even a stronger position than has generally been allowed by members of the trade, finding a world's shortage of no less than 160,000 bales. Its statistics follow:

Bales.
English crop, latest estimates.	174,000
English probable shortage (below consumption)	280,000
Continental surplus available for export	75,000
United States crop, 1904, estimated	230,000
United States consumption, 1904	210,000
United States surplus	20,000
United States old stock on hand	25,000
Total	45,000
Continental surplus	75,000
Total	120,000
English shortage	280,000
World's crop shortage	160,000

FAVORITE AGES OF WOMEN.

They Appear to Range Between Sixteen and Twenty-four Years.

It may seem strange that women have preferences for particular ages. An inspection of the census, however, leaves no room for doubt that certain years are preferred and certain other years disliked by the members of the gentler sex.

Of children fourteen years and under the number of boys is nearly 400,000 greater than the number of girls; at fifteen the boys are still 6,000 ahead of the girls; at sixteen the girls are 6,000 the more numerous, and each year thereafter until the twenty-fourth there is an excess of women over men. The favorite ages within these limits are eighteen and twenty. There are 24,000 more misses of eighteen than there are boys of that age, and the young ladies twenty years old exceed their masculine companions by 54,000. At twenty-four and twenty-five the numbers of the two sexes are nearly equal. Then the women begin to grow less with great rapidity. The most unpopular ages are thirty and forty. At the former age there is a difference of 78,000 between the two sexes; at the latter 83,000.

One peculiar circumstance is that there are more women twenty years old than there are girls of thirteen or fourteen or any age up to twenty. This fact conclusively demonstrates that twenty is a very healthful age. But if the younger ages are unhealthy, where did the increased number who are twenty years old come from? No women are born that old.

Only an unusually elastic theory can account for these peculiarities with becoming gallantry to the lovelier sex.—J. S. Gilham in Ladies' Home Journal.

CHINESE CONTRASTS.

We bake bread; in China they steam it.

We divide the day into twenty-four hours; they into twelve.

We locate intellect in the brain; they locate it in the stomach.

Our calendar is based on solar time; theirs is based on lunar time.

With us the seat of honor is on the right; with them it is on the left.

Our given name precedes the surname; theirs follows the surname.

The needle of our compass points to the north; theirs points to the south.

We have standard weights and measures; their weights and measures differ in each district.

Our children stand facing the teacher to recite their lessons; theirs turn their backs to the teacher.

Our watchmen quietly go their rounds with a view to catching thieves; theirs beat gongs and yell to frighten them away.

We bury our dead a few days after their decease; they often keep theirs in the house in heavy, sealed coffins for years.—"China's Millions."

The Hookah in India.

The hookah is smoked as a refreshment and sign of fellowship by the natives of India and not merely as a luxury. When a group of natives are seated together and, as is the custom, the hookah is passed around to each in turn it is considered very bad manners for any one to decline to have a few puffs. If the hookah is thus refused in a friend's house or while one is the guest of another it is regarded as an insult. If for any reason a native is put out of caste the fact is strictly marked by his former caste fellow's refusal to smoke with him, and any one who eats, drinks or smokes with an outcast is himself outcasted.—Chambers' Journal.

"Executive Ability."

"But then, of course, he has executive ability," we said conclusively. "Executive ability?" repeated our acquaintance. "What do you mean by that?"

"Why, the quality of holding subordinate responsible for failures and taking credit to ourselves for their successes," we responded.

Which we considered rather clever for studied impromptu.—New York Herald.

PAWN SHOPS OF CHINA.

They Cut Quite a Figure in Life in the Flowery Land.

Pawnbroking is a great institution in the Flowery Land. The Chinese pawnbroker's, however, is quite a different kind of establishment from ours. The pawn shop of China is more a stronghold, a place of quiet and safe repose, for valuable jewelry and the miscellaneous and costly wardrobes of the people. It also in many instances performs the equally important but somewhat costly function of lending to the needy, and, as in the collections of similar establishments of our own land, one may see the much prized jewels and trinkets of happier times, which caused their poor owners many a bitter pang to part with, heartaches that were perhaps brightened with the hope that one day they would be able to redeem them.

To listen to the man selling these un redeemed pledges is one of the choicest entertainments of the Peking streets. He is selected by the pawnbroker for his fluency of speech and ready wit, which he gives full play in his humorous descriptions of the quality and history of the furs and richly embroidered dresses which are piled up on the platform of his tent. He at times runs off his speech in rhyme, making clever and sarcastic allusions to the requirements of his audience, pressing a satin robe on the attention of some naked beggar.—Golden Penny.

An Odd Jewish Ceremony.

In the Jewish Encyclopedia is an account of the queer ceremony of the taking off a brother-in-law's shoe by the widow of a brother who has died childless, through which ceremony he is released from the obligation of marrying her. The ceremony is described as follows:

The yabam (brother-in-law) must have his right foot, on which the shoe is placed, washed very scrupulously, and after he has strapped it on he must walk four cubits in the presence of the judges. Then the chief of the judges reads the following passage, which the yabamah (woman) repeats word for word: "My brother-in-law refuses to raise unto his brother a name in Israel; he will not marry me." Then the yabam is required to repeat the sentence, "I do not wish to take her." He then presses his right foot against the floor while she looses the straps with her right hand, takes off the shoe and throws it some distance away. Then she places herself in front of the yabam, spits on the floor in front of him and repeats these words after the presiding judge: "So shall it be done unto that man who will not build up his brother's house, and his name shall be called in Israel 'the house of him that hath his shoe loosed.'"

A Feud Settled

[Original.]

Tom Bowline and Jack Hunter were fishermen and friends till that most frequent of all disturbers of men's friendships—woman—brought about a coolness between them. Nevertheless they were joint owners in their boats, nets and other fishing paraphernalia and still fished together.

One afternoon they were out on the ocean in a small fishing boat, a yawl, when a black cloud rising against the wind admonished them to pull for the shore. Each had been thinking during the day that the other was trying to supplant him in the affections of Georgia Conley, and they pulled along in sullen silence.

"What y' goin' to do tonight?" asked Bowline presently of his companion.

"Goin' to see Georgia."

"You've chosen an unfortunate time. She and I agreed that I was to come round this evenin' and take her over to Sarah Robbins'."

"I've got a note from her in my pocket appointin' for me to call this evenin'," replied Hunter. The tone in which they spoke had become more acrid. The only other sounds about them were the oars in the rowlocks and a light swish of following waves against the stern of the boat. Presently Bowline again broke silence.

"I tell you what, Jack, it isn't fair to Georgia for us two to be pesterin' her at once. It might end in her marryin' nobody. She needs to marry, for her father is gettin' old, and the loss of the Pelican took his savin' for a whole lifetime. It would be better for her if one of us left the other out here in the ocean some time. That would settle her."

"Tonight is as good a time as any."

"Reckon since y're so chipper about it you expect I'm the one to be left."

"Reckon you'll be if you mean what you say."

"If you expect anything unfair from me you're mistaken. I'll take no advantage of you."

"I won't let you. Besides, you're in the stern with your back to me. I could brain you with my oar before you could say Jack Robinson."

"You wouldn't do that. You ain't mean enough. Besides, you'd likely come to grief when my body was found with my skull stove in."

"Well, since you've made the proposition, why don't you stand up, turn about and the one that can knock the other overboard pulls in and has a free field."

Hunter spoke with such manifest inability to conceal his rising choler that Bowline feared to remain longer as he was. He rose, and that called Hunter to his feet. The two stood glaring, each threatening the other with an uplifted oar; then, moved by a mutual impulse, they began to fence with their improvised lances. But they had fought only a few minutes when the wind struck them on the quarter, and, had they not instantly sat down, they would have been obliged to continue the struggle, if at all, in the water. There was enough in the common danger to induce them to drop their quarrel till they could get ashore. Seizing their oars, they pulled lustily, drifting nearly parallel with the beach. The shore curved toward them, and after awhile they came near enough to make an attempt to beach their boat. Watching their opportunity, they pulled in on the crest of a wave, jumped into the water and succeeded in running the boat up out of reach of the next wave.

There is something uniting in danger past and there is something destructive of hot blood in cold water. As soon as they were safe and had rested from the struggle Bowline said:

"We've made asses of ourselves, Jack."

"So we have."

"It would be much more sensible to leave Georgia to make her own decision."

"Of course it would."

"Suppose we walk back up the beach to her house, go in and submit our case to her."

"A good idea."

With one accord they started to walk three miles to the cottage where the bone of contention lived.

"I'm treating you fair, Jack," said Bowline. "I tell you as a friend you ain't got a ghost of a chance. She had her picture taken the other day, and this morning she gave me one."

He opened his pocketbook and took out a photograph.

Hunter produced its duplicate.

"H'm!" said Bowline. "That's singular!"

It was growing dark when they started, and it was soon dark as pitch. They marched on in silence till they came upon a cottage nestling from the wind and the waves behind a dune. Had they not been familiar with the locality they would not have seen their way to it. Suddenly it was revealed to them as distinctly as at midday by a vivid flash of lightning.

There was another revelation—one that neither had looked for—a revelation that neither ever forgot. There on the little porch in a hammock swung from opposite corners sat two beings so close together that even the light of electricity could show no interval. They were Georgia Conley and a young man in a blue serge jacket and white duck trousers. Whether it was that their lips met at the moment of the flash or kept a continued meeting, certainly they met, and the rivals were distinctly aware of it.

"Reckon we'd better go about, Jack."

"No more beating up against this wind for either of us, Tom."

Tom Bowline and Jack Hunter went down the beach arm in arm. They are partners in fishing to this day, and both are bachelors.
