

Washington State University

LIBRARY

Manuscripts

Records of History

Archives

Records of Man

The Primary and Source Materials

for the Interpretation of Man's Recorded Heritage

More than Ten Million Pieces

Handwritten or typewritten, originals or copies, here are letters

notes
diaries
journals
reminiscences
accounts
minutes
business records
logbooks
reports
drafts
documents and papers
newspaper clippings
ephemerata
scrapbooks
photographs
drawings and sketches

relating to individuals, families, business firms and corporate bodies, governmental and quasi-governmental agencies, and institutions both public and private.

Notable in the Collection

diaries, letters, papers Whitman, Spalding, Walker, Eells

special collections
Conda de Regla
Hispanic
Incunabula
Rare books and manuscripts

University archives
Bryan, Holland, Compton, French Bohler, Johnson, Waller

specialized collections

Klondike, Naval history, Aviation, Grand Coulee, Columbia Basin; Nez Percé, Colville, and Yakima Indians

McWhorter, Kuykendall, Banks, Howard, Pangborn

and the personal and office papers of Twentieth Century politicians, business men and businesses, persons in the professions, authors and others who have played important roles in the history of the region and have contributed to its literature.

Armstrong, Borah, Drury, Henderson, Tannatt, Wilmer, McGregor, Crandall, Avery, Deutsch, Clark, Hill, Horan, Brown, Johnson, Carty.

Services

In the Division is a catalog of the collection and published and unpublished registers and other guides and tools that indicate the general scope and organization of the material. These may assist in the location of information concerning persons, places, things, and events, both general and specialized.

A staff is always on duty for consultation and assistance.

Conditions of Use

The materials in this Division are available for consultation by persons engaged in serious research. Only in unusual cases are high school students admitted to use the collection.

Restrictions on the use of certain materials are often imposed by the donors and exist also in the common law rights under which a writer or his heirs own the literary property in his writings, including the right of first publication. Unless these rights have been dedicated to the public, the user or his publisher must secure the right of publication from the owner.

Each person using the collection must use no ink or ballpoint pens; make no marks; preserve the existing order and arrangement and report any disarrangement; and exercise the greatest possible care to prevent damage to the materials.

Typewriters and tape recorders may be used under supervision. Photocopy of materials selected by the user may be secured at a nominal cost when no other restrictions apply.

---

For further information:

Dr. Earle Connette,
Librarian and Chief Manuscripts-Archives Division

