THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

Will Assemble Today at the Armory—List of Delegates Who Will Attend—Strong and Winning Ticket to Be Selected.

The Democratic county convention, called for the purpose of nominating a legislative and county ticket, will assemble at the armory at 10:30 this morning instead of at the court house, as at first proposed.

More than the usual amount of interest is taken this year all over the county in the personnel of the ticket. The democrats feel that they have a good chance to win this year and almost every member of the party is ready to pull off his coat and go to work for the success of the ticket. Hundreds of republicans who have wearied of the long continued ring rule of their party in the county will watch the proceedings of today's convention closely and if the ticket put forth meets with their approval will support it. At any rate many of them say that they will and are very emphatic about it.

By common consent Senator Splawn will be renominated for state senator, a position that he has filled in a most satisfactory way to the people for the past two years. The Cowiche statesman really does not desire to make the race, as he stated in an open letter to the Democrat last week. He would not do so except for the fact that the pressure brought to bear upon him to induce him to run has been overwhelming. A number of leading republicans as well as all the democrats are anxious that he should accept the nomination and have repeatedly told Mr. Splawn so. Under all the circumstances he could not well refuse as to decline would seem like shirking a public duty. So "Jack," as everybody calls him, will make the race and his friends are confident that he will win.

Of the two candidates for representative to be nominated, one will doubtless be apportioned to the west end and the other to the east end of the county. Among the candidates mentioned from the upper part of the county are David Longmire, the well known warhorse of the Wenas, and Richard Strobach and T. A. Davis of this city. From the east end there will, it is understood, be three candidates, namely, Dr. F. S. Hedger of Kiona, Henry W. Creason of Prosser and Mayor H. H. Wende, the popular attorney of Sunnyside. Dr. Hedger, it will be remembered, made a splendid race for the legislature against W. H. Hare. Dr. Hedger was beaten by a plurality of 194, the normal republican majority being about 700. Mr. Creason will have the hearty support of the Prosser delegation, while Mr. Wende will probably have the support of the Sunnyside delegation. The delegates from this city say that the brethren from the east end must settle this matter among themselves and that they will support the choice of the caucus.

Sheriff Grant, will of course, be renominated by acclamation. The democrats all over the county are proud of Grant and of the splendid record that he has made in his office and will make an enthusiastic fight for him in the campaign. Mr. Grant has already received assurances of support from a large number of republicans who think that he has fairly earned another term.

For county treasurer three possible candidates are being discussed, Messrs. H. H. Allen, C. C. Case and W. F. Jones. None of them are candidates in the sense of seeking the nomination, but as they are all good democrats anyone of them would doubtless respond to a call from the party.

For prosecuting attorney Geo. F. McAulay of this city is the most prominent candidate in evidence. In fact there is little probability of a contest for this office unless the friends of H. H. Wende conclude to enter the Sunnyside man in the race. Mr. Wende has not yet returned from a visit to his old home, Buffalo, N. Y.

For county commissioners there are a number of receptive candidates in the field. The Kennewick delegation will come up asking for the nomination of L. G. Moore of that town. For the second district John Michels and Joseph Stephenson of this city are being discussed. For this place the Ahtanum delegation is instructed to support and ask for the nomination of Horatio Croso, a well known resident of that precinct.

For school superintendent George Stephenson, now a resident of Toppenish, is mentioned. There is also some talk of nominating Mrs. Ella S. Stair of this city for that office.

Following is a partial list of the delegates elected to attend today's convention. It is known that nearly every precinct will be represented, but this paper has not succeeded in securing the names of the delegates from some of the more remote precincts.

Schloss is Released.

William Schloss, the Russian arrested by Sheriff Grant last week for writing threatening messages to the Quaker doctors, was given a hearing before Court Commissioner Day last Monday afternoon. He was questioned closely by the commissioner and the attending physicians. The man seemed rational on every topic other than religion. He assumed a penitent air and claimed that he meant no harm to the doctors. The Quaker's, he said, appeared to have plenty of money and the idea occurred to him that he might be able to induce them to give up some of it to him.

The prisoner appeared to be a broken down old man with a disordered intellect and not at all dangerous. Under the circumstances it was not deemed advisable to commit him to the asylum. As he had no money he was told that he must either go to work or leave the town and he chose the latter alternative.

Nally Released from Jail.

J. J. Nally of Kennewick was released from the county jail Wednesday on an order from Judge Rudkin. His court permitted the prisoner to go on his own recognizance on the condition that he appear here for trial the first Monday in October. Nally was tried at the June term on the charge of embezzling money from his employer at Kennewick, but the jury disagreed, necessitating a second trial of the case.

An Unfortunate Thing.

Sunday afternoon the trellis on the new 65 acre yard of the Moxee company went down, brought about by the heavy weight of the vines. This unfortunate occurrence necessitates picking the hops somewhat green. Manager Lesh at once put a large force of pickers, numbering about 400, at work so that it is not believed that much damage will result to the crop.

Yakima vs. Cle Elum.

The Yakima baseball nine went to Cle Elum last Sunday and did up the aggregation of that town in a snappy game, the score being 2 to 0. Goins and Wilgus were the battery for the locals. Goins was in good form and but one hit was made by Cle Elum off his delivery. Those present say that it was a "cracker jack" of a game.

The republican county convention was called to order at 11 o'clock in the armory last Saturday morning by Dr. P. Frank, chairman of the county central committee. Chairman Frank on opening the convention gave the delegates a short talk in which he prophesied victory for the g. o. p. all along the line this fall.

H. B. Scudder was nominated for temporary chairman by Ed Lyons, while John Cleman performed the same office for B. F. Barge. However, the latter gentleman declined the honor and Mr. Scudder was elected by acclamation. The Moxee statesman was escorted to the chair by Messrs. Barge and Cleman, and in his speech of acceptance complimented a number of the old party warhorses for being present. Fred Chandler was named as secretary and John Sinclair as assistant secretary. On motion the following committees were appointed:

Credentials—Arthur Grosscup, Geo. Donald, G. L. Allen, Abner Sinclair and J. J. Wiley.

Rules and order of business—W. H. Cline, W. E. Ayers, Ira P. Englehart, Miles Cannon and A. C. Walker.

Platform: Robert Dunn, B. F. Barge, John Kelly, J. M. Brown and Capt. J. H. Thomas. On motion the committee then adjourned until 1:30 p. m.

On reconvening in the afternoon the first business of the convention was consideration of committee reports. There being no contests on motion of Ed. Whitson the reading of the report of the credentials committee was dispensed with. The committee on rules brought in a report recommending that in the order of business to be taken up by the convention the nomination of representatives come first to be followed by nominations for senator, etc. This is believed to have been a cautious move on the part of the Hare men to avoid treachery. The report was adopted.

Prof. Barge read the platform which was adopted. A few of the delegates applauded when the speaker laid emphasis on the plank favoring a railway commission without noting the fact that nothing was said in the report about binding the legislative nominees in the event of their election to support a commission bill. As none of the Boxers raised this important point the platform was adopted by acclamation and the city bosses looked at each other and smiled. They had feared trouble on this score and considered themselves fortunate in escaping it. The denunciation of the present sheriff was regarded by many of the delegates as pure "buncombe", but while that official had many friends in the convention who were not pleased with this uncalled for slap at Sheriff Grant and said so afterward in private conversation no open objection was offered. The platform follows:

Chairman Barge read the report of the committee on platform. It was as follows:

The administration of county affairs by republican incumbents for the past six years has been uniformly efficient and economical, and the republican party of Yakima county can confidently ask the support of the people for the nominees of this convention on the record that has been made. The office of sheriff, held by a democrat, has for the past two years been the most expensive office in the county, and in our opinion has been conducted on a scale bordering on extravagance. We demand that this office be conducted in future with due regard to the interests of the taxpayers, and we pledge the people of the county that if the nominee of this convention for that office is elected he will conduct the office efficiently and with that due regard for economy which should be practiced in all public affairs.

Resolved, That we, the representatives of the republican party of Yakima county in convention assembled, hereby endorse the administration of both national and state government and most heartily the ticket nominated, national and state, believing it to be our duty to renew our vigilance in their success.

Resolved, That we favor such legislation as will enable the general government to carry on irrigation work in the state of Washington to the end that the available water supply may be devoted to the highest possible use, and we are opposed to the ownership and control of the water supply of the state by corporations.

We are in favor of the amendment of the present road law and the enactment of such a law as will enable the people of the state to construct a system of good wagon roads.

Resolved, That we believe in the purity of the ballot box. In both primary and all elections it cannot be guarded too sacredly, and to this end we demand an efficient primary election law providing adequate penalties for illegal voting, that the people may have ample opportunity to select the candidate of their choice, and we instruct our legislative nominees to be insistent and continuous in their efforts to secure the same; and until such laws are enacted we instruct our county commissioners to organize under our present primary election law.

Resolved, That we favor a non-partisan railroad and tax commission with full power to establish rates and regulate traffic, to assess the property of all corporations and including telegraph telephone, express companies, that all species of property shall bear their just proportion of taxes, which may be just and equitable and uniform throughout the state.

ROBERT DUNN,
B. F. BARGE,
JOHN KELLEY,
J. H. THOMAS,
J. M. BROWN,
Committee.

The first order of business was declared by the chairman to be the election of 19 delegates to the district judicial convention to assemble in this city Sept. 17, and nominations were declared in order. Instantly a half dozen or more delegates were on their feet demanding recognition, each with a candidate to name. Among the number were John Cleman, Capt. Thomas and others who desired to name men who were not on the Rigg slate. These gentlemen were recognized by the chairman in order that the delegates might not be confused later. After the "slate" was named the Boxers were allowed to suggest the names of their friends. A number of bystanders, republicans as well as democrats, who watched the proceedings declared that the manner in which this delegation was selected was about the "rawest" piece of work that they had ever witnessed in a political convention. Printed ballots were in evidence bearing the names of the 19 Rigg men whom the machine

HOPS GOING UP

The Situation Looks Good From the Producers Standpoint—Picking Already Begun—Resume of the Situation Throughout the State.

The Yakima hop growers feel rather jubilant this year and with reason. In the first place the yield promises to be an average one. There may be a slight falling off from last year in a few yards, but in others the vines will yield more than last year, at least that is the present expectation. One thing is sure the quality will be better. "No lice," no mould," is the report from every grower.

The market is strong, which has a tendency to make the growers hold off. As a rule they do not care to contract now as nearly all of them are well supplied with picking money and are busy in getting their pickers ready to start next week to gather the crop.

The price this week has been at or near 27 cents, although there are rumors abroad that 27½ cents and 28 cents has been offered. The buyers, however, stoutly maintained yesterday that the market did not justify the latter figure. The only deal made this week, so far as this paper has information, is the sale of the John Shaw lot at Tampico to Pines & Sons at 27 cents. Some deals are pending at or near that figure that will probably be closed today.

Pickers are arriving on nearly every train from the west and it is not believed that there will be any scarcity, as about the usual number of Indians will be on hand. Picking in a few yards will commence next Monday. By the latter end of the week the harvest will be fully on.

Tacoma, Aug. 31.—Hops are booming in Washington this season as they have not in twelve or fifteen years. Reports received by dealers here today indicate that the crop is short the world over, and that there are no old hops on hand, as is ordinarily the case at the opening of the new season. Drought on the Continent, in England, in New York state and in the hop growing districts of the Pacific coast has been the common cause of deterioration in the output.

Isaac Pincus & Son, one of the largest dealers in Tacoma, today stated the Washington crop would amount to 35,000 bales, 20,000 of which would be grown in West side yards, and the remaining bales in Yakima and other East side yards. Mr. Pincus received word from his Oregon agents this afternoon, stating that the yield of that state might not reach up to the estimated 85,000 bales. E. J. Smith of Portland, wiring that growers of Eugene had been picking, and were finding that the crop would fall 25 per cent short of estimates. This caused somewhat of a surprise to the dealers here, as the hop output of Oregon a year ago was 92,000 bales. Dealers are now offering 27 cents, with no growers contracting. At the opening of the picking season last year dealers were offering 20 cents, with contracts plentiful.

Picking will begin in most of the yards of Western Washington next Monday, and by the last of the week will be in full blast in every yard in the state. Mr. Pincus estimates that it will take 15,000 persons to pick the season's crop, and these will be employed three weeks. Of these, 8,500 will be employed in West side yards and 6,500 in East side yards. In all, the state has about 5,000 acres in hops this year, according to Tacoma dealers, which is in excess of the acreage of any season heretofore. The yield to the acre, however, is lighter. On the Klaber hop ranch at Puyallup, which has over 120 acres in hops, 1,300 pickers will be required, and Mr. Klaber has already placed an order for 1,000 pickers with Harry H. Collier, who has charge of the city employment bureau. Pickers will be paid $1.00 a box, the same price as obtained at the opening of last season. Canoe load after canoe load of Indians have been arriving in the city from British Columbia in the past few days, and the Indians are going out to the hop ranches in the Puyallup and Stuck valleys.

"The statistical condition of the hop market at the opening of the new season," said Mr. Pincus this afternoon, "is even better than it was in 1882, when hops went to $1 a pound. It is the case almost invariably when the new season arrives that there are considerable old hops, and the promise of new hops being thrust on the market makes a drop of 4 or 5 cents in the price. This year there is not a pound of old hops, and we have come flush with the new season with hops stiffening in price instead of falling. Our news today from England is that hops are selling there for 39 cents. It was thought that the estimate of the Oregon yield was sufficiently low, but the picking demonstrates that it is too high. How the picking will affect our estimate of 36,000 bales will soon be demonstrated."

Back From Nome.

H. D. Winchester arrived Saturday night, Aug. 27, from his trip to the Nome country, having left here about June 1. The occasion of Mr. Winchester's trip north was to look after an interest that he has with his brother in some mining claims there.

On the whole Mr. Winchester is not very favorably impressed with that country. Nome, he thinks, is a poor place for a working man. A few men are undoubtedly making money there in the mining business, especially those who have water as well as money to work with. The generality of men, however, who go there to mine are not successful.

Mr. Winchester says that C. D. Murane, formerly an attorney of this city, is now police judge at Nome. The Milroy brothers are interested in mining claims about 300 miles north of Nome and are not very well satisfied with the outlook.

Mr. Winchester brought the remains of Dale Thorp home, the young man having died on the trip down, from rheumatism, which finally affected his heart. The deceased had been in poor health all the time he had been in Nome, having went up last spring. Mr. Winchester did everything possible for his comfort during his illness.

Will Start a Brewery.

It is now understood that Clert & Schlottfeldt of Ellensburg who recently bought the Switzer building on Front street, contemplate establishing a brewery on the site. It is said that the structure will be entirely renovated and a third story added. The new owners will also enlarge the ground floor area in order to make room for an artificial ice plant to be used in connection with the brewery. It is believed that work on the building will soon commence.

Cascade Lumber Company Build a Dam.

The Cascade Lumber company are making preparations to build a large dam across the Yakima river in the Selah in order to make a storage basin in which to hold logs. With this object in view the company has purchased a tract of land in the Selah from C. A. Bryant, a part of which will be submerged to form the pond. Work on the dam will be prosecuted while the water in the river is low.

Rev. Whitmore Leaves Naches Church.

Editor Democrat: Inasmuch as the happy pastoral relations which have existed between the Rev. O. B. Whitmore and the First Congregational church and congregation of the Naches are about to be severed, much to the regret of all the people immediately interested, and wholly through the action of Mr. Whitmore in presenting his resignation in terms that leave no hope of its reconsideration;

Resolved, That we as members of this church and congregation who have enjoyed for two and a half years the benefits of this relation, desire to express our high appreciation of Rev. Whitmore's devoted and untiring labors among us.

Beginning his work under unfavorable circumstances, by his pulpit ability, his genial disposition, his rare good tact, his devoted pastoral care, and by his spirit consecration to the work of the Master, he has succeeded in harmonizing all elements in the church; in increasing the congregations, in building the kingdom of God among us, and so has come to fill an unusually large place in the confidence and love of all, old and young alike. Under his indefatigable labors and those of his devoted wife, the church property has been improved, a woman's missionary organization has been effected, and all departments of church work have been brought to a state of high efficiency. Therefore, Be it resolved, further, that it is with heartfelt regret that we contemplate the departure of Bro. Whitmore and his family that we would gladly keep them with us and only acquiesce in their going because the higher duty and the larger opportunity call them; that we shall ever rejoice it was our privilege to be associated as pastor and people during these years and that sings to rest upon him and his family in whatever sphere they may be called to serve.

Notice to Parents.

North Yakima, Wash., Aug. 24, 1904. The superintendent of schools desires to get information and to make announcement regarding pupils who would enter the beginning class of the first primary in February, 1905.

Heretofore children have had to be six years of age before being admitted to school, but it has been decided to allow children to begin school this fall who are not yet six years of age but who will be six by the 1st of February, 1905.

In order that the work of the first primary may not be interrupted by newcomers in February next, the plan has been adopted of admitting children to the beginning class of the first primary but once a year, and that in September.

It is evident that such a plan will work no hardship on pupils who expect to enter February next, but will, on the other hand, be to their individual advantage, because all such children are now allowed to enter in September, and so get a whole year of schooling.

The advantage to the school reaches other grades as well, because they will not be forced out of their room by new pupils entering in the middle of the year.

It is hoped parents will heartily and promptly co-operate in this matter and that they will fill out the blank left at their residence and return to the superintendent or clerk at once, so that provision may be made for the children referred to.

Very respectfully,
W. F. F. SELLECK,
Supt. Schools.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the cuntry than all diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. #### Bill Nye as a Dairyman.

"When I was young and used to roam around over the country, gathering watermelons by the light of the moon, I used to think I could milk anybody's cow; but I don't think so now. I do not milk the cow unless the sign is right, and it hasn't been right for a good many years. The last cow I tried to milk was a common cow, born in obscurity, kind of self-made cow. I remember her brow was low, but she wore her tail high; and she was haughty, oh, so haughty. I made a commonplace remark to her, one that is used in the very best society; one that need not give offense. I said: 'So'—and she 'Soed.' Then I told her to 'Hist'—and 'Histed.' But I thought she overdid it. She put too much expression to it. Just then I heard something crash through the window of the barn and fall with a thud—sickening thud—on the outside. 'The neighbors came to see what it was that caused the noise. They found that I had done it in getting through the window. I asked the neighbors if the barn was still standing. They said it was. The n I asked them if the cow was injured much. They said she seemed quite robust. Then I requested them to go in and calm the cow all right, and see if they could get my plub hat off her horns.

"I am buying all my milk now of a milkman. I selected a gentle milkman, who will not kick, and feel as though I can trust him. Then, if he feels as though he can trust me, it's all right."

From 148 to 92 Pounds.

One of the most remarkable cases of a cold, deep-seated on the lungs, causing pneumonia, is that of Mrs. Gertrude E. Fenner, Marion, Ind., who was entirely cured by the use of One Minute Cough Cure. She says: "The coughing and straining so weakened me that I ran down in weight from 148 to 92 pounds. I tried a number of remedies to no avail until I used One Minute Cough Cure. Four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me entirely of the cough, strengthened my lungs and restored me to my normal weight, health and strength." Sold by C. C. Case.

Snow shovels will be in fashion this winter, as usual.

Diversified editorials are a feature of the P.-I. You can find subjects ranging all the way from sermons to alfalfa, on its editorial page.

A Yakima man not only believes that the dead can be communicated with, but he positively knows it. He writes to a friend of his every week in Tacoma.

Wonder how John L. Wilson likes the writeup given his editor-in-chief by Col. Blethen of the Times in the issue of Aug. 28th? Blethen is no coward, that's a sure thing.

If it is perfectly proper for a woman to sit on a porch in the evening wearing nothing but a white dress, why isn't it proper then for a man to sit on the porch in his nightshirt?

We want to mention the fact to Bishop Potter, lest we forget that if he has not provided slot machines in his "Subway Tavern" in New York city he may as well close up the joint.

There is one thing the sawdust prepared food has done. It has given the boarding house prunes a chance the last few years to take a well-earned vacation. This is a supper table fact.

Judge Parker's theory that a president should not use his office as a means of bringing about his re-election reminds us of President Roosevelt. It is so different from the Roosevelt theory.

Alas for the rarity of female charms under the sun. A woman in Seattle was heard to remark that the new Russian heir was smuggled in under the "kiosk" of "one of them old doctors."

"Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast," yet we have noticed that it doesn't soothe the stomach, by providing a meal, for a great many musicians who follow in its wake. This may be a "bass" remark, but it is the "tenor" of our observations.

We wonder if the picture of the editor of the P.-I. published in the Seattle Times, issue of Aug. 28th, is true to life? You know it is said that photographers always flatter their subjects. We simply wonder if the editor's photograph has been "flattered?" If so, ye Gods! ! !

It must hurt Homer Davenport's feelings to know that his clever, talented, and meritorious cartoons are so little appreciated by the P.-I. of Seattle, when in its issue of Monday, August 29th, the cartoon "Hay or Hill? Which Do You Want?" was placed on page 8 among the help wanted, hotel arrivals, deaths and funerals, real estate, transfer, shipping and summer resort "ads."

Its with an eye for an easy living that some married men have a telephone placed in their home. They tell the wife that the reason they do not go out and hustle for a job, is because they expect every minute that the "phone" will ring from a certain man summoning them to come to work immediately. And what is more the poor wife generally believes that "con" talk.

They say that Mrs. Fairbanks, wife of Senator Fairbanks, candidate for vice-president belongs to the shoddy aristocracy, that she is greatly shocked and indignant because the newspapers have published that her husband was born in a log cabin. Now Grant and Lincoln were born in log cabins and were proud of it. Mrs. Fairbanks should go way back and take a seat. The public is already sick of her.

If the city council of Seattle removes that old land mark "Pioneer Place," in order to make a camping resort for the expressmen of that city, the citizens should rise up as one man and horsewhip each councilman who votes for it. "Pioneer Place" is the only green spot in the life of a business man of Seattle, it is the delight of strangers, and a mark of esteem to the old pioneers who for years prided themselves on that flowery spot. Let Pioneer Place alone.

There are two things that any sane man will, and must admit. Long as cards are manufactured, there will be gambling. Long as whisky is produced people will drink it. All the anti-gambling people on this earth will never stop it, all the prohibitionists known, with a corner on all the white ribbon made, will never stop the man being arrested for being "drunk and disorderly." It is to be with us, like the poor, on this planet, long as the world wags.

There seems to be a growing dislike in some circles of society to the duties of motherhood. After all is said and done, the place of a wife in the home, and her first duties are to her husband and children, and if she shuffles off her responsibilities on to her servants, she may live to regret it in after years. Motherhood undoubtedly means the giving up of a great deal of what some people term pleasure, but it has its compensations, which more than outweigh the small sacrifices. The wife who devotes her whole time to social pleasures has little to comfort her in later life, her nervous system is thoroughly broken down, she is tired of all her surroundings, and she has not the relaxation in her home-life that she might have had. The increasing search for excitement, as shown by the numerous whist and other parties, is a most unhealthy sign, we think. We would not have married women tied to their homes. In fact, we believe that every woman is the better for an interest outside the home life. It broadens her sympathies, and develops another side of her character, but late nights and feverish excitement, week in and week out, saps the nervous force and unfits women for the serious business of daily life.

MY CONFIDENTIAL FRIEND

(Original.)

July 15.—Well, it has come at last. Walter came out from the city yesterday, and after tea we climbed the hill and sat in the summer house. There he proposed to me. I haven't the slightest idea what he said. He had a hard time in getting it out, and I didn't help him a bit. He made several attempts before he was successful; then it came out incoherently. As soon as he began I knew what was coming, and that was all I cared about it. He talked on, while I was in a delirium of joy and never heard a word. I don't believe he could repeat a sentence of what he said, and I'm sure I couldn't.

When we went back to the house we felt obliged to go into the library, where the family were. I felt so happy I wanted to tell them all about it then and there, but Walter looked as if he had been stealing sheep. I can't understand why men are so ashamed of giving way to their gentler emotions.

July 18.—Miss Graves came yesterday. She is to be with us a week. I wish she had stayed away. She listened dubiously to all I had to say about Walter and our engagement, then threw a bucket of cold water over me—at least she might as well have done so. She said she had heard of so many cases where men had deserted the girls they had professed to love that she had at last kept a record of engaged couples and found that out of twenty cases only five resulted in marriage. In the others it was the man's fault every time.

I wonder how she knew that the man was always to blame.

Sept. 8.—We are to leave for the city tomorrow. It has been the most delightful summer I have ever spent—that is, since Miss Graves left. She never sympathized with me in my confidence in Walter, always listening to what I said of him with an ill suppressed sneer. She said she hoped I would not be disappointed, but her statistics indicated that there were three chances in four that I would.

Sept. 10.—We came home yesterday. Walter is unfortunately away on business. I'm sure he is away on business, though Miss Graves says that the probability is he has gone to the country to see some other girl. What nonsense! But I wish she hadn't said it.

Sept. 20.—I am very miserable. I was suspicious of Walter when he returned and showed it by being cool to him—that is, I wasn't at all demonstrative. I am not satisfied with the reason he gave for his absence. He admits that he spent one night at the seashore and that an old friend of his, Laura Goodwin, was there. Walter and I parted coldly.

Sept. 22.—Miss Graves told me she had heard that Laura Goodwin and Walter had once been on the eve of an engagement. She has convinced me that there is something in this matter and that Walter's visit to the seashore was for a purpose. Miss Graves has no faith in men whatever and advises me to be very careful what I do. She kindly took me into her confidence and told me that she had had a lover who treated her exactly as Walter is treating me—that is, as she thinks he is treating me. Her lover walked off deliberately and married another girl. This was ten years ago. I suppose I ought to rely on her more than I do, she is so much older than I and has had so much more experience.

Nov. 12.—It is all over. Our engagement is broken. Walter's visit to Laura Goodwin last September did it. At least that started it. Besides, Walter has been very jealous of Amelia Graves and has warned me repeatedly to keep away from her. If his conscience was clear he wouldn't mind how many friends I might have to "spy on him," for he says that's what Amelia is doing. How unjust! She is simply giving me the benefit of her experience. Heigh-ho! What a miserable world to live in! To think that Walter should have released me so easily. When I told him he was welcome to marry Laura Goodwin he said that she at least didn't have any bosom friends to advise her, and she would trust him implicitly. If he marries her I don't know how I shall be able to refrain from murder.

Dec. 31.—I am so mad that I would like to tear the shingles off the roof. That woman, that thing, that meddling creature, Amelia Graves, has ruined me. Just listen to this:

Dearest Helen—I have the great joy to announce to you my engagement to Mr. Enoch Spellmeyer (what a horrid name), my lover that I told you about. But I didn't tell you that his wife was dead. We met a week ago, and he told me that he had never ceased to love me. He was very considerate of his wife, not blaming her at all because she couldn't win his heart from me, thus showing himself to be a true man. I am so happy. Your loving AMELIA GRAVES.

P. S.—How is your affair with Walter coming on? Rumor has it that he is devoted to Laura Goodwin.

Talk about men deserting women! If this isn't the meanest case of a woman's deserting one of her own sex I don't know what meanness is. I'm nearly crazy.

Jan. 1.—Well, I'm happy once more after months of misery. I wrote a humble letter to Walter last night, and this afternoon he came in radiantly happy. He said he had no alternative but to let me go till I found out the inexpediency of having confidential friends who would prejudice me against him. He seemed to have known what Amelia Graves was doing just as well as if I had told him.

Oh, I am so glad she "showed the cloven foot" before Walter had gone too far with Laura Goodwin.

We are to be married next June. ELIZA B. ARTHUR.

The Wilmington Giant.

The "Long Man of Wilmington," popularly known as the "Wilmington Giant," is a rude, gigantic figure of a man 240 feet in length, with arms extended upward and in each hand holding a long staff in a position parallel with the body. The distance between these staves is 119 feet. The figure is well proportioned and reclines with both legs outstretched. It lies carved on a bold bluff of the downs facing the weald and forms a conspicuous landmark for miles round, especially when the light falls on it at a particular angle. There is a similar figure at Cerne Abbas, in Dorsetshire, and, as both are near religious houses, it is supposed that they may have been the work of the inmates. The slope to the south of the priory, on which the figure is cut, bends downward at an angle of fifty degrees, and the giant was originally marked out by removing the turf and exposing the glaring white chalk beneath. In course of time the outlines became grass grown and could only be seen at certain seasons, so in 1873 a movement was set on foot for re-marking the whole figure. This was successfully accomplished, the outline being plainly marked out by white bricks.—London News.

Big Noses in Favor.

In Japan the nose is the only feature which attracts attention. The nose determines the beauty or ugliness of the face, according as it is big or small. This is probably due to the fact that difference in noses constitutes about the only distinction between one Japanese face and another. The eyes are invariably black, the cheek bones high and the chin receding. In Japan a lady who has a huge proboscis is always a great beauty and a reigning belle. There are a few large noses among the natives, and lucky is he or she upon whom nature lavishes one. In all Japanese pictures representing the supposedly beautiful woman the artist invariably improves on nature by depicting this feature as abnormally developed.

"Spite" Tower.

Every one is familiar with various spite fences or houses, but it is safe to say that quite the most costly and elaborate enterprise of this kind in the world is the famous Wainhouse tower, in Yorkshire, England. Its builder, John Edward Wainhouse, was the owner of a dyeworks in that valley. Next to his estate lay that of an English lord. The two quarreled, and Wainhouse built the tower so that he could always overlook his neighbor's grounds, although they lay much higher than his own. The tower is nearly 300 feet high and cost $50,000 to build.

Used to It.

Jonah was giving the details of the episode.

"But," they said, "did your wife believe you when you said you had been three days in the whale?"

"Yes," he returned. "She said I had given her much more improbable excuses before."

With a happy smile he went downtown to buy her a handsome present.—Harper's Bazar.

Notice to Subscribers.

Delinquent subscribers to The Democrat are requested to settle at their earliest convenience. The tag on the paper will inform you to what time your subscription has been paid. Many of our friends, through carelessness no doubt, have permitted their subscription account to run. The amount does not seem much to them but it amounts to a good deal in the aggregate to the publisher when he is compelled to carry several hundred such accounts and putting out a paper at the nominal price of one dollar per year. We would not kick on this arrangement if our own bills did not have to be paid weekly, or at least monthly. So please come in with your mite and help us along with our good work by keeping the mill grinding.

The republican county convention that assembled in this city last Saturday was dominated by the machine element of the party, just as The Democrat said in its last week's issue that it would be.

Twenty-four hours before the ticket was nominated this paper published the "slate." Our readers in making a comparison between the ticket nominated and the slate as we published it must be struck with the idea that we hit it off pretty accurately with the exception of the nominee for school superintendent and the three candidates named for county commissioners. In these cases a new lineup was made at the last moment by the machine forces in the convention. Prof. Douglas, whose name was on the slate for school superintendent, was punished by the county seat bosses because a part of the Sunnyside delegation refused to vote for Dr. Hare as a nominee for the legislature. As for the nominees for commissioners, the exigencies of the situation, from the standpoint of the bosses, required that certain precincts be recognized that had contributed their strength to putting the slate through. So, on the whole, The Democrat feels that its reputation for prophecy was almost completely sustained by the action of the convention.
The ticket itself is not wholly bad.
There are a few very good men upon it.
This fact, however, is due more to conditions than to the will of the party bosses. They feared to turn down certain aspirants lest the insurrection within the party in this county would get beyond their ability to suppress. If they could have their way about it the court house would have an entirely new set of tenants after next January.

The most remarkable thing about the ticket put forth is the number of ex-democrats that adorn it. One of the candidates for representative, the nominee for prosecuting attorney and two of the three men named for commissioners until recent years were in full communion with the democratic party, not to mention the prospective candidate for superior judge. All of these men, or at least some of them, did not leave the party of Jefferson until after the fusion flood was on the ebb in the late nineties.

There is no significance to be attached to the fact that the convention declared for the establishment of a state railway commission. This was done as a matter of politics and to pull the wool over the eyes of the country voters. The bosses of this city, who for the most part ride on free passes, don't care a rap for a railway commission, for it must be remembered that at the state convention at Tacoma these same gentlemen contributed the vote and influence of the party in this county to the slaughter of the commission idea and aided in striking down Gov. McBride, the foremost advocate of that principle. For these men to say now that they favor a railroad commission and expect people to believe it is asking too much. They will deceive nobody but themselves by their double dealing methods.

If the county seat bosses are really sincere for a railroad commission they had a good chance to show it. If they are for the commission why did they not nominate men for the legislature who favor such a law and through the convention instruct them to vote for it if elected? Instead of that they nominated men who are notoriously against such a proposed law and it is simply inconceivable that they would vote for it unless bound to do so by the most emphatic instructions. In saying this we cast no reflections upon the legislative nominees. Two of them we know intimately and have a considerable amount of respect for. But the assumption that these gentlemen would go to Olympia and vote for a railway commission on the strength of Prof. Barge's mild plank in the platform is to assume that they are willing and ready to sever the social and business connections of many years standing.

They will not do this and the local bosses knew that they would not when they put them on their slate. As for Mr. Johnson, the third nominee on the legislative ticket, he being almost a stranger in the county, we know but little of his views on this subject. In view of the fact that he obtained his nomination at the hands of men who don't want a railway commission it would be unreasonable perhaps to assume that he would vote for it, if elected.

Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the U. S. treasury, is on this coast making speeches for Mr. Roosevelt and incidentally looking over the country with the view of making a report to his chief.
In the three speeches that he made in this state, at Spokane, Walla Walla and Seattle, it is a noticeable fact that the secretary never once referred to the big scrap that is now on in this state between the railroad and anti-railroad factions of his party. Mr. Shaw, of course, is too cute to make any bad breaks of that kind as he is looking out for electoral votes.

Speaking of Mr. Shaw recalls knowledge of the fact that every member of Mr. Roosevelt's cabinet who is capable of making a speech has already been shoved out on a speaking tour or is making arrangements to go out. In the meantime important public business can go hang, as the most pressing business at hand is the election of their strenuous chief, who is his own campaign manager.

When Mr. Roosevelt entered the White House he entertained very strict views on what he called the impropriety of federal officials dabbling in politics, but now, within a period of three years, we find him commanding the whole
"federal brigade" into action in the effort to influence public sentiment to favor his own election. The politicians who have jobs are directed to "get busy" and they will get busy and keep busy until after the election.

Theodore Roosevelt is a unique character in American public life. He has without doubt some very admirable qualities but consistency can hardly be regarded as one of them. He preaches one set of principles and practices another, especially where he himself has a chance to profit thereby. He is an exceptionally able and crafty politician. His dealing with the trust question shows this to be true. Two years ago he began his opera bouffe war against the trusts. His first onslaught made the magnates curse with rage and tremble with fear, but the people applauded and said, amen! But, presto, change!
Leading trust magnates or their representatives were sent for and apparently a treaty of peace was concluded before scarcely a beginning was made in the trust busting business. Since that time J. Pierpont Morgan and most of his ilk have become convinced that Mr. Roosevelt is both "safe and sane" and their influence and the influence of their money bags is thrown into the scale for his election. And the people! Oh, yes, the people are all right, for Teddy has shown them that he is not afraid to tackle the trusts, especially the bad trusts. And so the people are satisfied.

It was the great Lincoln who said:
"You can fool all the people part of the time; you can fool part of the people all the time, but you can't fool all the people all the time."

The Republic says that the country delegates were allowed to run the county convention just about as they pleased.
Good Lord, what a whopper!

The Seattle Post-Intelligencer is still trying to persuade itself that the republican soreness in eastern Washington was due to personal disappointment of candidates and their friends and that it is now almost completely healed over.
No supporter of the Farrell ticket who knows anything about political conditions on this side of the Cascades would lay this sweet unction to his soul. The republican revolt is more deeply seated and more widespread than the P.-I. would have its readers believe. The arrogant and insolent course of the railroad lobby in its domination of the Tacoma convention aroused the indignation of all self-respecting republicans in the state, and they are determined to make their resentment of corporation control manifest at the polls. In eastern Washington it is safe to say that one-half the republican voters will repudiate the Farrell ticket and in western Washington the disaffection in the party ranks is almost as great. If the editor of the P.-I. really believes the stuff he is writing about the restoration of party harmony throughout the state, he will receive a shock when the election returns come in next November that may result in total heart failure.— Walla Walla Statesman.

The east end of the county received but scant courtesy at the hands of the republican convention, the delegates from "Riverdale" being treated for the most part as though they were a lot of aliens. The treatment that they have been receiving is what makes those people desire county division, and under the circumstances who can blame them?
The democratic convention today will treat the east end fairly and will give that section fair representation on the ticket no matter whether the people down there support the ticket or not.
The people of that locality are citizens and taxpayers and are entitled to be heard in county affairs. If they were in the habit of receiving the recognition justly due them we believe that there would be a great deal less talk about dividing Yakima county.

The democratic convention which meets today has a duty to perform, not only to the party but to the people of this county. It must put its strongest men to the front. It must nominate candidates for the different offices who are not only qualified but whose standing in the community is such that they can appeal successfully to the great mass of independent voters of the county. If the party is not disposed to put up the right kind of a ticket it is of but little use to put up any ticket at all.

The republican convention under machine management committed a number of blunders that spells defeat at the polls, unless the democratic convention should prove equally as stupid. It is to be hoped that it will not. We believe that it will not.

Chairman Palmer of the republican state central committee appears to be in a peck of trouble. As soon as he riggles out of one difficulty he seems to get into another. By making an insolent demand upon the postmasters of the state for campaign contributions according to their salaries Mr. Palmer has bumped up hard against a federal statute which forbids such a practice and prescribes a heavy fine and imprisonment for the offender who violates it.
And Mr. Palmer is a lawyer, too.

Really, it would seem that Senator Wilson ought to look after his protege a little closer. The chairman of the state committee is evidently a more dangerous man to his friends than his political enemies.

Col. Blithen and sons, publishers of the Seattle Times, will, on or about September 10, begin the publication at Bellevue of an evening journal to be known as the Puget Sound American.
The new paper will be democratic in politics and will be edited by Mr.
William T. Prosser, a well known Yakima boy who received his early newspaper education in this city. That the new enterprise will be a success may be taken for granted, as Col. Blithen and his two sons are accomplished and successful newspaper men, as the wonderful development of the Times fully attests. The Democrat extends its best wishes for the success of the American and trusts that it will prosper and become a power in its field.

Chairman Palmer of the republican state central committee may be lacking in ability but certainly not in gall. His latest demand for blood money with which to elect Wilson men to the legislature is from the three or four democrats who hold office under Gov. Mc-Bride. He informs these men that they must pay him the regular campaign assessments as the price of holding their jobs. Palmer is now the laughing stock of the state.

The city delegates were apparently willing to stand for almost anything but the unit rule. This rather disconcerted the bosses but they had to make the best of the situation.

Hon. David Bennett Hill of New York announced publicly this week his intention to retire permanently from public life on January 1, 1905. He will do this, he said, no matter whether his party wins or loses in the present contest.

Whatever may be said about Hill he is always a man of his word and will doubtless do as he says. This ought to dispose of all the tommyrot that has appeared in the republican press about Hill becoming secretary of state under Parker.

The way that both old and young wheelhorses were sacrificed by the convention last Saturday in order to make room on the ticket for either newcomers in the country or newcomers in the party was simply a fright. As a result many of the oldtimers are astonished, mortified and indignant. Has it become a disreputable thing for an old timer to aspire to office? Apparently the local bosses think so.

The Spokesman-Review is disposed to attach too much importance to the declaration of the Yakima republican convention in favor of a railroad commission. That plank was merely placed in the platform to enable Prof. Barge, its author, to square himself with his conscience and to "jolly" the farmers.
The bosses didn't mean it.

The republican managers in this county seem to place a much greater value on the services of a fresh recruit than they do on any old timer. This is notably true since our old friend, Col.
Robertson, assumed the position of leader of the party. It must be a sort of "fellow feeling" that animates the colonel.

The republican nominee for prosecuting attorney has reason to congratulate himself on the result of the convention.
Mr. Krutz certainly exhibited a clean pair of heels to all of his competitors in the running. But he had one great advantage over the field of colts that counted heavily in his favor—he had once been a democrat.

That was a rather mean revenge that the city delegates took on Prof. Douglas because the Sunnyside delegation "giggled back" on "Doc" Hare. The professor's name was on the slate but was wiped off. In view of his proficiency and long party service his rejection was a rank piece of ingratitude.

While the county convention last Saturday was engaged in handing good things to ex-democrats, our old friend, the editor of the Republic, was apparently overlooked like a white chip. It seems hardly fair to have made an exception of the most distinguished flopper in "the bunch."

One of the greatest battles of modern times has been in progress this week at Liao Yang with nearly half a million men engaged. Reports indicate that the Japs were beaten back by the Russians with tremendous slaughter. This may prove the decisive battle of the war.

It is believed that Hon. Walter J.
Reed will be the nominee for state senator from Yakima county. The convention meets today. Should it decide on Mr. Reed, Kittitas county will indeed have a friend in court, in fact we would have two senators looking after our every interest.—Cle Elum Echo.

Yes, that's just what we're afraid of neighbor!

Senatorial politics were played in the nomination of the legislative ticket last Saturday. John L. Wilson appears to have held a hand in the game. Wilson-ism is a disease that seems mighty hard to suppress.

It has been suggested that it be called the ex-Democratic ticket.

Where the Sun Shines.

The New York Sun has formally declared for Roosevelt and Fairbanks and this fact is being pointed to by some republican leaders as a gain for the party, although many republican editors seem inclined to look upon the Sun's announcement much as they regarded the "acquisition" of the Chicago Chronicle.

When it is remembered that the Sun is under the control of J. Pierpont Morgan it is not in the least surprising that that paper has formally declared for the republican nominee. It is true the Sun has recently said some very uncompromising things about Mr. Roosevelt personally; and yet this did not necessarily mean that the Sun would object to Mr. Roosevelt's election. Vicious thrusts at public men is the Sun's stock in trade and there is good reason for believing that there has never been the slightest danger that the Sun would devote itself to the republican cause. If anyone has any doubt on this point, he may be enlightened by reading the Washington dispatch sent to the Chicago Record-Herald by Walter Wellman under date of January 15, 1903. In that dispatch Mr. Wellman said: "There is no more uneasiness in Wall street as to what congress is to do in the trust busting line. Wall street knows." Then Mr. Wellman stated that representatives of the trust had held a secret meeting at Washington in conference with republican leaders and reached an agreement providing for a law similar to the law that was subsequently enacted by the republican congress. Mr. Wellman further declared that the leading trust representatives had announced that they had no objection whatever to the publicity feature so persistently suggested by Mr. Roosevelt. In another dispatch to this newspaper, Mr. Wellman pointed out that Mr. Roosevelt "having won the enthusiastic approval of the people by his fight against the trusts and the corporations not long ago began to cast about for methods by which he might even up. He had the people with him, but the trusts, the corporations, the financial leaders, the bankers were hostile." Mr. Wellman volunteered the statement: "It will not be his (Mr. Roosevelt's) fault if the financial people of New York do not soon look upon him with more favor."

The announcement that J. Pierpont Morgan would support Mr. Roosevelt, followed by the formal declaration by Mr. Roosevelt has waged a very successful campaign in his efforts to "even up."—The Commoner.

Alabama—and Senator Turner.

The suggestion made by some republican organs that Senator Turner did not get the support of the Alabama delegation at St. Louis because Senator Turner was extremely unpopular in his own state, leads The Montgomery Evening Journal, one of the leading democratic newspapers of Alabama, to say this:

"Although the Alabama delegation to St. Louis opposed the nomination of George Turner for vice-president, there is no doubt that there is a very kindly feeling in this state for Mr. Turner, and leading democrats who knew him in Alabama and learned to respect and admire him will be pleased to learn that his nomination for Governor of the State by the democratic convention, which meets in a few days, has been assured by the action of the county primaries, and that there are strong probabilities of his election."

"Democratic sentiment was strongly in favor of Senator Turner when he went to St. Louis as a candidate for the vice-presidential nomination. On his return he consented to become a candidate for Governor, thereby yielding to desires of democratic leaders. By nominating Turner on a platform pledging the creation of state railroad and tax commissions the democrats expect to carry the state because of the failure of the republicans to fulfill pledges of previous years regarding a state railroad commission. The recent republican convention at Tacoma was so overwhelmingly controlled by corporate interests as to cause a strong reaction among farmers and workmen."

"Mr. Turner came to Alabama during the reconstruction period, and was appointed United States Marshal under Judge Bruce. He was a republican, but he did not make himself obnoxious, but, on the contrary, manifested, so it is said by leading members of the Montgomery bar, a deep sympathy for the white people of the state and section, and made many friends, who yet kindly remember him. They would like to see him elected Governor of Washington, and from every indication, if the news received from that state is trustworthy, he will be."—Seattle Times.

A Defensive Campaign.

The republican organs say the democrats are to make it a defensive campaign. That being a mere play on words the Philadelphia Record says "certainly," a campaign in defense of "the constitution, of freedom, and of the just rights of the people."—Seattle Times.

ROSES Versus DAISIES

By MARAVENE KENNEDY

Copyright, 1904, by M. E. Wilson

The round faced daisies, not the boy's pleading eyes, held her gaze, yet she smiled winsomely into the eager little face as she gave him the coveted dime. She smiled whimsically as she took her seat in a crowded car. She held the daisies a moment against the crimson roses on her breast, then reread Walter Antler's note:

Margaret, Dear—It's hard lines that I can't see you off, but Harding's out on important business, and I can't desert the ship. Shall be with you in spirit as are my roses in reality. Write me at once on your arrival. I shall be up soon for my answer. Goodbye, dearest. My own dearest, God grant, some day. Yours only, WALTER.

She leaned her fair face to the roses and breathed deeply. It was so sweet to know that she was all in all to the winning, successful man. Her eyes fell to the daisies, and with a sudden suffocation she opened the window.

"Is it too much air for you?" she asked courteously of the plain, middle aged woman beside her.

The woman laughed pleasantly. "There can't be too much air for me. I've been to the city for two weeks, and I'm downright hungry for a whiff of fresh air. I had a good time, I guess. Lentenways I did what folks there call havin' a good time. But I've had all I ever want. Mercerville's good enough for me after this."

The girl's face grew serious. It was the charm of the city that had taken her away from her father and mother—and Jack. For two years the city had held her, and till just the month before she had thought she loved it too well to leave for even a few weeks' vacation. Then had come a longing, a desperate heart sickness, for green fields, peaceful nights and the fragrant cooling of the hills. She would grow tired of them in a few weeks, she thought wearily. She would long then just as earnestly for the brilliantly lighted restaurants, the Hungarian music, the sparkle and life of the gay crowds about her. She would want the theaters, the concerts, the streets pulsing with humanity.

Jack met her at the train. He was the same Jack she had left—tall, loosely built, unconscious of himself. His pleasant face reflected his clean, honest life, and his easy going gait and ready made clothes spoke the custom of the town. She looked at him tranquilly. No, it was not Jack that had drawn her here. It was her father or her mother. How sweet to have mother's kiss on her cheek after the heart hungry mother thought her little ewe lamb fast asleep. How good, too, to hear father call her Daisy and Girlie once more.

And she was glad to see Jack. He came next evening and told her in his soft, slow voice all the news of the place and—once more—how dearly he loved her.

"Do you, Jack?" she asked wistfully. "Could I mean more to you than this?" She reached out her arms caressingly toward the stretch of green and dewy fragrant flowers lying so peacefully beneath the soft moonlight. "Could you be happy with me on a hot, paved street, with no trees nor fields of flowers and where the air was—sick?" She laughed tremulously. "You can't understand, of course, but I came home just for the smell of the grass, the stillness, the pure, sweet air!"

His big, warm hand clasped her cold little fingers lovingly.

"I do understand," he said gently. "I went to the city once, was there almost a year, but I had to come back. I was doing well too. I never told you about it. It seemed rather womanish for a big hulking man to hanker for green fields and flowers."

She moved nearer to him. "There's a man there," she said softly, "that—that I think I—love. He made it very pleasant for me, and he's clever and well to do. I thought a few weeks here would satisfy me, but I know now it won't. I must have the great big open—I can't be shut in. Shall I write him 'No'?" Almost to herself she breathed the question agitatedly under her breath.

"Not if you truly love him, Daisy," he said generously. "But I do want you, dear and—I'd like my chance along with him. Give me two weeks, then send for him and talk things over and decide."

The two weeks were blissful ones for both, but Margaret could not determine how great a share of the joy giving was Jack's. They trudged contentedly along the dusty roads together, picked berries, stole apples and waded streams. They jogged gayly behind old Don, Jack's raw boned delivery horse, and were as satisfied as though he were a thoroughbred.

Then she sent for Walter Antler and waited in strange indecision for him to come. She wrote him frankly of her desire for the country, her uncertainty as to her feelings for him and told him about Jack.

"I don't think I understand," he said uncertainly, standing tall and immaculate beside Margaret the evening of his arrival. His handsome, keen eyes smiled good humoredly into the girl's perturbed face. "You say if I will live in the country you will consider my proposal. U-h-m! I would lose my mind, dearest. This place is very sweet and pretty, yes, but two days of it would drive me to drink." He turned to her earnestly. "The city will seem different with a home of your own and plenty of servants and theaters and concerts. Inside of a year you'll say the city's the only place on earth to live. Really, my darling, you can't mean this talk about the country. It's rank nonsense."

Just then Jack swung lightly out of his buggy and ran up the walk. He did not know Antler had come. The two men eyed each other for a moment tensely. Then Margaret introduced them.

She looked full into Jack's tanned, earnest face, then turned slowly to Antler's clean cut, virile features. The men breathed deeply. Each knew that the woman he loved was deciding for or against him. Margaret herself did not realize what she was doing. She broke the rasping silence with a low:

"I can't go driving this evening, Jack. Come tomorrow evening. I'll go then."

"You've decided against me," Antler said, a strange lump in his throat, as Jack drove away. "You—you love—him!"

"Yes," she answered gently. "He loves the life I do. You and I are so far apart on things. It's the outwardness of each other you and I love, I think, and with Jack it's—something that comes from within. I thought till you came if you would live in the country I would rather live my life with you than Jack, but—"

"You would not—even then?" he asked eagerly. She was very lovely, and he thought he loved her enough for the sacrifice. She smiled in wondrous sympathy, for had she not measured love that way herself?

"I love him better for all time," she said softly. "He and I can be friends and comrades as well as husband and wife, and that's the only way to be happy ever after."

Meissonier as a Portrait Painter.

Meissonier admitted that he would not have made a good portraitist by profession, for with few exceptions he had succeeded only with sitters whom he liked and knew well. He was not satisfied with painting things as he saw them; he had to understand how they came to have such or such an appearance. Though he claimed to remember every drawing that he had ever made, he also claimed that he did not reduce his knowledge to general formulae. "Before nature, I know nothing in advance"—not even, it appears, what size he was going to make his picture or how much he was going to include in it. This is the reason that many of his drawings and some of his paintings have been extended in one direction or another by bands of paper or canvases glued on. Meissonier had a strong dramatic imagination and an uncommon sense of harmony, yet they were both occasionally smothered by this devotion to literal fact.

Carried Samples.

During a meeting of the Louisville presbytery a delegate told this story of pioneer days and vouched for its accuracy: One of the state was extremely fond of pepper sauce, and as he could seldom find any strong enough at places where he stopped he always carried a bottle with him. He happened to be at a hotel one night, though he usually stopped at the home of a friend. A man sat across the table from him and, seeing the sauce, asked if the minister would share it with him. The request was granted, and the stranger poured out a liberal allowance of the sauce into his soup. At the first swallow he made a wry face and blurted out, "Minister, do you preach hades?" "Yes, brother," was the reply. "Why do you ask?" "Because you are the first preacher I ever saw who carried samples," was the answer.

The Legend of Killarney.

Like many other lakes, those of Killarney have legendary origin—an enchanted fountain, the spring head of which, if left unclosed at certain times, would inundate the district. One of these legends we give.

It throws the responsibility of the awful event on a fair young peasant girl, who was wont to meet her lover—a stranger ignorant of the mystic spell—by the fountain side. One night they were lulled to sleep by the music of its flow. At daybreak the girl awoke, screaming, "The well, the well!" It was then too late. The water was rushing forth and overtook them as they ran. They were drowned and involved in their fate the inhabitants of the district.

The people still believe that the submerged houses and their inhabitants live beneath and are at times visible to those who stray along the water side.

MADNESS OF THE DESERT.

Effect of the Monotony of Silence Upon Human Being.

"The silence of the desert has a maddening effect upon the human brain," said a traveler whose experiences are not often paralleled. "Monotony is more severe than anything else deriving its entire pain from mental effect. The monotony of silence is worse than any other kind."

"Take a man away from the hum of the work of men and send him out on the alkali deserts, and the deep silence becomes awful and is sometimes unbearable. All at once, without any previous symptom, some member of the party may stop suddenly, with a dazed look on his face and a wild expression in his eye. He is dangerous. His reason is torn in wild confusion. Anything or anybody familiar infuriates him."

"He must be disarmed and bound at once or he will deal death to the whole party. He is possessed of 'desert madness,' brought on by the monotony of silence. He suffers excruciating mental anguish. He needs to be relieved by being brought back to his accustomed surroundings."

"On this account men used to the desert refuse to go out with those with whom they are well acquainted. The mad man is not likely to attack a stranger. If there is no friend in the party his madness is likely to assert itself in running rather than in fighting. It is a fearful disease not yet understood."—Birmingham News.

FEMINE LANGUAGE.

An English Criticism of the Use of Words by Women.

You may talk to a woman for an hour or more and understand every word she says. Meat, bread, money, motor cars, drains, the ace of trumps—there is really no space at my disposal to give a list of the words that are common to both languages. In fact, most of the solid, concrete things of life may be left out of the question. It is when we pass beyond the concrete that the real misunderstanding arises. Take a couple of very common words used equally by both sexes. A man will say that so-and-so is a "nice" girl. I should know what he meant. A woman will reply that the girl is pretty, agreeable and all that sort of thing, but that she is "not quite nice." The two are using the same word to express different ideas, and they will never agree as to whether that girl is nice or otherwise until they can talk the same language.

Again in the feminine dictionary the opposite of "nice" is "horrid." A man will talk of a "nice scoundrel" and a "horrid bore," and I can understand him. But when a woman tells me that a man is wealthy and clever and good looking—"but I'm sure he's horrid"—she has dropped into her foreign language. I can only be sure that she does not mean what I mean when I speak of a "horrid girl."—London Outlook.

The Name Tibet.

Many forms of the name Tibet sprang from the Chinese T'ubar (fifth century) through the variations of T'uebet, To-boet, Thibet (1165), Tebet (1298), to Tibet (1730). The origin of the name has been variously accounted for, but the weight of historical evidence indicates that the word is derived from Tubat, a famous family name proper to several ancient Tartar dynasties, extensively used in the sense of "chief."

Hodgson asserts that before the arrival of Indian teachers the people had no name for themselves or their land, and, though the present name is not, as some say, unknown in the country itself, the modern Tibetans call themselves Bod-pa and their land Bod-yul. Bod being a Buddhist appellation suggested by the Sanskrit b'ot, or bat, so working back to the Tartar name.—London Spectator.

Irish Nomenclature.

Irish names have often a knack of being frankly pugnacious, so that even a peaceful lord chief justice has had to bear the inciting to murder sobriquet of Killowen. But the mountains from Lismore to Clogheen, known as the Knockmealdown range, are capable of an entirely pacific interpretation, for we commonly say we are knocked down all in a heap by this or that which takes us by surprise, and these mountains surprise all by their beauty. There is no lovelier sight in Ireland, and if an air of melancholy prevails it is because the scene is "somehow sad by excess of serenity," to use a phrase of Henry James it would be difficult to better.—London Chronicle.

Eskimos' Appetites.

The Eskimos have enormous appetites. An arctic explorer relates that he saw a boy eat ten pounds of solid food and drink a gallon and a half of liquid with much gusto. This same explorer observed an adult eat ten pounds of meat and two candles at a meal. Sir P. Phillips tells how a lad of seventeen years ate twenty-four pounds of beef in twenty-four hours.

Analogies.

"I understand your friend Jenkins has resigned that city clerkship he held."

"Resigned? H'm?"

"Oh, wasn't it voluntary?"

"Well, it was just as voluntary as his contributions to the campaign fund were."—Philadelphia Press.

An Evasion.

"But," said the absolutely bald old party, "can I be assured that this horse is quite gentle?"

"My dear sir," replied the horse "gyp" earnestly, "he wouldn't hurt a hair of your head."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Praise undeserved is satire in disguise.—Broadhurst.

A Trip Through Yellowstone Park

is what everyone hopes to have—some day. It is the most wonderful trip in the world. There are more than 3000 square miles of weird, marvelous, unimaginable things that can be seen nowhere else, therefore if one ever sees them one must go to the Park, in the heart of the magnificent Rockies with snow tipped peaks all around. If Old Faithful geyser, a Paint Pot, Mud Volcano, or Emerald Pool were to be found in Lincoln park, Chicago; Central park, New York; or Fairmount park, Philadelphia; the people would flock to see it or them by tens of thousands. For a very small sum, comparatively, all these and hundreds more of nature's unduplicated marvels can be seen between June 1 and September 30 of each year, and one will enjoy, to boot, the best coaching trip in the country.

The Northern Pacific folder on Yellowstone Park, just issued, is a new, right up to date, finely illustrated dissertation on this Yellowstone Park trip. It is not descriptive, but deals with the detailed, technical matters everyone needs to know about such a trip. It tells all about the hotels, the stage coaches, the roads, the cost of the tour; where the geysers, the waterfalls, the bears, the canyons are, and where the trout fishing is found. We have printed thousands of this beautiful leaflet and want everybody interested to have a copy, and it can be obtained by sending A. M. Cleland, General Passenger Agent, St. Paul, Minn., two cents with proper address.

"Wonderland 1904" which is a very fine pamphlet of 116 pages, descriptive of the Northwest, including the Park, will be sent for six cents.

Strength Measured by Years.

Senator Davis doesn't live up to his age or to the expectations of the republican party. They would have the man who is in actuality 60 years young appear twice his nominal age if possible, and bury him alive at that. "A woman's as old as she looks and a man is as old as he feels," but by both rules Senator Davis substracts a score from the measurement of his years.

He looks young; he acts and evidently feels young. He talks young and now we see that he talks young. His letter of acceptance is a piece of virile expression, a strong document. It is not excelled by any political address of the time.

Age is no crime, and no disqualification, when it is the mere adding of experience to strength. Age has been but the maturing of wisdom in the case of the democratic vice-presidential nominee.

The republican party would be fortunate, indeed, could it utilize the twenty years in time, which are surplusage in Davis's case, and convert them into twenty ears of experience for the head of their ticket. Mr. Roosevelt appears to be as much younger than his actual years as does Mr. Davis—in the sense that the former exhibits none of the results of experience, while the latter exhibits none of the ravages of time. The genuine strength of eighty contrasts well with the strenuousness of forty-four.
Senator Davis measures his strength in years.—St. Louis Republic.

Doctoring the Wrong Man.

The following is told of a couple who attended the Oregon state fair last fall and stopped at one of the best hotels in Salem. About 2 a. m. the husband was seized with severe stomach cramps and was almost frantic. His wife was much frightened, but knew that something must be done quickly, so without waiting to put on clothing started down stairs on the jump with naught on but her "nighty." Running into the dining room she saw a mustard cruet on the table. Emptying the contents into her handkerchief she started upstairs on the run, and entered the first door she came to. Here she saw a man lying on the bed, who in the dim darkness she mistook for her husband, and gently tucking up his lingerie slapped the poultice on his abdomen. The man let out a howl and sitting up quickly shouted in angry tones: "Woman, what in h—l are you doing?" There was a shriek, a patter of unshod feet on the hall floor, and, frightened half to death, the poor wife found her room and suffering husband. She told him her troubles, and it tickled him so that his cramps took a change of venue.—Ex.

An Independent Opinion.

The railroad papers of this state are continually harping on the highly respectable character of their candidate Mr. Mead. Very few people ever doubted that Mr. Mead was a gentleman. All candidates for public office ought to be.
Most of them are. But Mr. Mead in his ambition for place and for power, has permitted himself to be placed upon a platform that is not in accord with the desires of the majority of the people on this side of the mountains. Neither was his nomination, secured by railroad interests at all pleasing even to many on the west side. Principle should go above party name. It is claimed that Mr. Mead will carry the state by at least 10,000 majority. The result of the November election will be watched with interest. It will show whether the republicans of the state of Washington are slaves to the railroads or free and independent voters.—Colton News Letter. (Rep.)

Spokane Inter-state Fair.

Railroad rates to the Spokane Inter-state Fair, which opens October 3, will be better this year than they have been for several years. Manager Robert H. Cosgrove seems to have hit upon Herbert Bolster's knack of doing business with the railroads. He has been granted a one fare rate from all points in the Inland Empire to Spokane and return. This is the first time this has been granted in several years. "Like the Old Fruit Fairs" is the motto at Spokane this year and it applies to the railroad rates as well as to other points.

One fare rates for the round trip will be granted by each road on a different day. Besides these all the roads unite in giving a rate of a fare and a third for the round trip, good throughout the fair. All tickets, whether they are the general reduction of a fare and a third or the special one fare rate on a single day, provide that the purchaser may remain in Spokane until the day following the close of the fair or he may return sooner.

This arrangement will bring the crowds into Spokane on different days so as to prevent such an overcrowding of the hotels as will force visitors to the fair to go without beds.

Great rejoicing is felt by the man agement at Spokane over the fine concessions which have been made by the railroads. It is confidently believed that this will bring the greatest crowd in the history of the fairs to Spokane this year.

Stock, fruit, vegetables and grains which are shipped to Spokane for exhibition in the fair will be returned free of charge by all the railroads.

Stock which is making the circuit of the various fairs and does not return to the point from which it immediately came will be given rates adjusted on the same basis. Mineral exhibits are ter-ated even more generously and will be brought to the fair by the railroads without charge, the understanding being that these exhibits will remain in Spokane, making a permanent exhibit.

The Time to Help.

Here is a short story: A resident of this city was unfortunate in business, but there was no strain upon his integrity. He had tried and he had failed; that was all. But he fancied that his old friends viewed him askance. This belief so wrought upon him as to affect his health. One day he met an old acquaintance, who greeted him with a hand clasp and a genial word. He went to his home cheered, for into his life a ray of sunlight had come. With happiness he related the experience, but the joy was only a flash. The man died, worried to the end; killed by the burden he carried. Then there was a change.
Old associates flocked to the stricken home. They wanted to do anything in their power to alleviate the distress.
They were profuse with the offerings of condolence; flowers, kindness. It was too late. The form there lying silent could not know of the sympathy. The sorrowing family could appreciate it, but they wondered why it had come so late. The story ends with this. Is there a lesson to it?

The world is too busy. Busy about what? Heaping up dollars for others to quarrel over; securing power that is fleeting, honors that are forgot. It is well to remember that the fingers of a corpse do not clasp coin, and the form above which grass grows entertains no ambitions. There is nothing in the world worth while but kindness. The people to help are the people who live, and not the ones for whom the struggle is over. Well enough to heap blossoms on the bier, but far better to speak a gentle word. It should be the mission of people to help each other. The show of concern after death has set its seal is more in the nature of a confession than anything else. The dead are not asking favors, and they cannot know.— Tacoma Ledger.

Tortured His Wife.

Two weeks ago Monroe Rogers left Houston, Texas, on a business trip to Salt Lake while his pretty young wife went to visit her sister.

On his return Rogers escorted her home. There he procured a quantity of rope, entered his wife's room, and, overpowering her, tied her hands and feet and then gagged her.

Removing her clothing, he suspended her by the feet with a rope looped through a transom of a door. He then lighted a lamp and secured an old file twelve inches long. He held the file over the oil blaze until it was red hot and began burning the fiery letters of a man's name upon her. Smoke and the fumes of the burning flesh filled the house. He started on her bare shoulder and wrote down the arm to the wrist.

The letters were not small, being two to three inches in size, and the name, with thirteen letters, was spelled out in full. Between each letter he would stop and repeat the instrument. Nearly half the night was consumed in the torture. The suffering woman could do no more than to utter smothered cries and writhe in pain.

The work of branding completed, the husband jerked the gags from her mouth and left the house. Her cries were sufficient to bring assistance and she was liberated and physicians summoned. For hours she was frenzied with nervous excitement and suffering but opiates and lotions brought partial relief. She proclaims innocence of any wrongdoing, but Rogers had learned that she was untrue to him and thus branded her with the name of the man who had wrought his undoing.—Ex.

Those Goo Goo Eyes.

The following from the Alton Democrat may prove of interest to some of the maidens of this vicinity who are wont to use their goo goo eyes on the "traveling man," says the Mabton Chronicle. Same here.

A gay and handsome traveling man lay on a bed of pain;
All hope had passed, his life ebbed fast,
He never would rise again.

"Have you no sweetheart, fair and true?"
They whispered over his bed,
"Whom you would tell a last farewell?"

The young man softly said:
"There's Daisy back in Burlington, And Nellie up at Blair;
There's Millie down in Lincoln town,
And Mary in St. Clair;

And at Des Moines there's Esther dear, Whom I must surely see,
And Anna, too, at Waterloo, Please bring them all to me."

The watchers stared with wild surprise,
And then they said once more:
"Come tell us, pray, without delay,
The girl whom you adore;

The girl whom you have sworn to love
And bring both wealth and fame;
Your promised wife, your hope and life, Quick, let us hear her name."

"There's Maggie up at Boone," he said,
"And Mamie at Wapello; There's Violet at Winterset,
And Maud at old St. Joe;
And Genevieve at Davenport,
And Mabel at St. Paul."

The young man sighed, "It's time I died,
I've sworn to wed them all."

A Feud Settled

(Original.)

Tom Bowline and Jack Hunter were fishermen and friends till that most frequent of all disturbers of men's friendships—woman—brought about a coolness between them. Nevertheless they were joint owners in their boats, nets and other fishing paraphernalia and still fished together.

One afternoon they were out on the ocean in a small fishing boat, a yawl, when a black cloud rising against the wind admonished them to pull for the shore. Each had been thinking during the day that the other was trying to supplant him in the affections of Georgia Conley, and they pulled along in sullen silence.

"What y' goin' to do tonight?" asked Bowline presently of his companion.

"Goin' to see Georgia."

"You've chosen an unfortunit time.
She and I agreed that I was to come round this evenin' and take her over to Sarah Robbins'."

"I've got a note from her in my pocket appointin' me to call this evenin'- in," replied Hunter. The tone in which they spoke had become more acrid.
The only other sounds about them were the oars in the rowlocks and a light swish of following waves against the stern of the boat. Presently Bowline again broke silence.

"I tell you what, Jack, it isn't fair to Georgia for us two to be pesterin' her at once. It might end in her marryin' nobody. She needs to marry, for her father is gettin' old, and the loss of the Pelican took his savin's for a whole lifetime. It would be better for her if one of us left the other out here in the ocean some time. That would settle her."

"Tonight is as good a time as any."
"Reckon since y're so chipper about it you expect I'm the one to be left."

"Reckon you'll be if you mean what you say."

"If you expect anything unfair from me you're mistaken. I'll take no advantage of you."

"I won't let you. Besides, you're in the stern with your back to me. I could brain you with my oar before you could say Jack Robinson."

"You wouldn't do that. You ain't mean enough. Besides, you'd likely come to grief when my body was found with my skull stove in."

"Well, since you've made the proposition, why don't you stand up, turn about and the one that can knock the other overboard pulls in and has a free field."

Hunter spoke with such manifest inability to conceal his rising choler that Bowline feared to remain longer as he was. He rose, and that called Hunter to his feet. The two stood glaring, each threatening the other with an uplifted oar; then, moved by a mutual impulse, they began to fence with their improvised lances. But they had fought only a few minutes when the wind struck them on the quarter, and, had they not instantly sat down, they would have been obliged to continue the struggle, if at all, in the water.

There was enough in the common danger to induce them to drop their quarrel till they could get ashore. Seizing their oars, they pulled lustily, drifting nearly parallel with the beach. The shore curved toward them, and after awhile they came near enough to make an attempt to beach their boat. Watching their opportunity, they pulled in on the crest of a wave, jumped into the water and succeeded in running the boat up out of reach of the next wave.

There is something uniting in danger past and there is something destructive of hot blood in cold water. As soon as they were safe and had rested from the struggle Bowline said:

"We've made asses of ourselves, Jack."

"So we have."

"It would be much more sensible to leave Georgia to make her own decision."

"Of course it would."

"Suppose we walk back up the beach to her house, go in and submit our case to her."

"A good idea."

"With one accord they started to walk three miles to the cottage where the bone of contention lived."

"I'm treating you fair, Jack," said Bowline. "I tell you as a friend you ain't got a ghost of a chance. She had her picture taken the other day, and this morning she gave me one."

He opened his pocketbook and took out a photograph.

Hunter produced his duplicate.

"H'm," said Bowline. "That's singular!"

It was growing dark when they started, and it was soon dark as pitch.

They marched on in silence till they came upon a cottage nestling from the wind and the waves behind a dune.
Had they not been familiar with the locality they would not have seen their way to it. Suddenly it was revealed to them as distinctly as at midday by a vivid flash of lightning.

There was another revelation—one that neither had looked for—a revelation that neither ever forgot. There on the little porch in a hammock swung from opposite corners sat two beings so close together that even the light of electricity could show no interval. They were Georgia Conley and a young man in a blue serge jacket and white duck trousers. Whether it was that their lips met at the moment of the flash or kept a continued meeting, certainly they met, and the rivals were distinctly aware of it.

"Reckon we'd better go about, Jack."
"No more beating up against this wind for either of us, Tom."

Tom Bowline and Jack Hunter went down the beach arm in arm. They are partners in fishing to this day, and both are bachelors.

'Twas A Great Slaughter

desired to elect. Every man whose name appeared on the slate was declared elected as follows:

B. F. Barge, A. D. Sloan, Edw. Whitson, J. D. Cornett, W. H. Carver, I. P. Englehart, Z. Y. Coleman, W. E. Ayres, S. P. Flower, H. A. Griffin, A. C. Walker, J. J. Wiley, A. McCredy, W. F. Powell, George Vetter, F. K. Hiscock, W. E. Lawrence, B. E. McGregor, Robert Dunn.

The names of the Boxers who were beaten for delegates follows: W. P. Murphy, W. L. Dimmick, W. D. Thompson, John Ogburn, J. E. Shannon, J. M. Brown, W. M. Richards and John Cleman.

The chairman then announced in stentorian tones that nominations for two candidates for representative were in order. Ex-Representative Dunn secured the floor and in a highly eulogistic speech placed before the convention the name of Dr. W. H. Hare. "My friend and former colleague," said the Captain in his rich Highland accent, "was one of the leading and most influential men in the last legislature. If you will elect him again he will be the next speaker as well as the last." The Captain's eulogy of his friend was quite unnecessary, however, as the convention had made up its mind to nominate "Doc" anyway.

Miles Cannon then delivered a flowery speech placing in nomination his friend Rev. Lee A. Johnson of Sunnyside. Mr. Cannon said that his candidate is a moral man, a man of great intelligence and good address and eminently qualified for legislative work. He failed, however, to state that the Sunnyside statesman is also a very recent convert from the democracy, which as after events proved, might have been a strong recommendation to the convention.

John Cleman, the Boxer leader, then placed in nomination the name of James H. Fraser of this city. Mr. Fraser had previously been a candidate for the senate but recognizing the futility of staying in that race after the Reed-Hare alliance was made declared himself a candidate for representative. The balloting then commenced, the chairman of each delegation announcing the vote. Hare, and Johnson were declared nominated by the following vote:

Hare ..... 113
Johnson ..... 154
Fraser ..... 40

Capt. Thomas of Yakima City was then recognized and in an eloquent speech placed before the convention the name of Walter J. Reed of this city for the high office of state senator. A number of seconds were made and Mr. Reed was declared the nominee by acclamation.

For Sheriff, Bridgman of Sunnyside named H. A. Webber of Rattlesnake. As no other victim was offered for the sacrifice Mr. Webber was nominated by acclamation, the nominee apparently not realizing the fact that he had been handed a "gold brick."

H. B. Scudder then called Prof. Barge to the chair and taking the floor proceeded to nominate Lee Tittle of the Moxee for the office of county treasurer. He said that Lee is an exemplary young man and that Moxee precinct should be recognized as it had always been loyal to the g. o. p. and had never asked for anything before. C. M. Hauser of this city was then nominated by ex-Mayor Redman, who said that he had known "Charlie" since he was a kid back in Hoosierdom and his father before him. A Kiona delegate then performed the same office for Clint Kelso of that precinct and the voting commenced. Two ballots were necessary, even though Tittle's name was on the slate, the second resulting as follows:

Tittle ..... 98
Hauser ..... 24
Kelso ..... 35

For clerk, delegate Green of Sunnyside placed in nomination J. W. Day, the present incumbent. Capt. Dunn attempted to start a stampede for D. L. Crowder of this city and placed that gentleman in nomination. The ballot showed that Day had 154 votes to 2 for Crowder.

For school superintendent E. M. Douglas of Sunnyside, J. R. Schwartz of Nob Hill and J. A. Jacobson of the Naches were nominated. Two ballots were required, the second resulting as follows:

Jacobson ..... 80
Douglas ..... 45
Schwartz ..... 32

Seventy-nine being necessary for a choice Mr. Jacobson was declared the nominee.

For auditor W. B. Newcomb was re-nominated by acclamation.

For assessor, Harry Coonse, the present official in that office was re-nominated by acclamation.

Nominations for the office of prosecuting attorney were next called for. Bridgman, a lawyer of Sunnyside named Lee C. Delle of this city; Edward Whitson nominated W. M. Thompson, Ira P. Englehart named John H. Lynch, C. E. Lum entered L. O. Meigs in the race while W. H. Redman performed the same office for Ira M. Krutz. This was by far the most interesting fight in the convention. While Mr. Krutz' name was on the slate there was a strong field against him, which if combined in time upon one candidate might have beaten Krutz. The first ballot resulted as follows:

Thompson ..... 29
Delle ..... 32
Lynch ..... 34
Meigs ..... 9
Krutz ..... 50

The final ballot gave:

Krutz ..... 96
Delle ..... 40
Thompson ..... 3
Lynch ..... 18

Mr. Krutz was declared the nominee amid great excitement.

For surveyor W. F. Meloy, the present incumbent, James Thomas of Yakima City and Ernest McCulough were placed in nomination. Mr. Meloy received 103 votes, Thomas 13 and McCulough 40, the nomination going to the former.

For coroner, Dr. David Rosser and Dr. Tetreau, both of this city, were named. Dr. Rosser received 106 votes as against 50 for his competitor and is therefore the nominee.

For county commissioner, first district, Daniel Sinclair and John Cleman were placed in nomination. The former received 120 votes to 36 for the latter.

For commissioner, second district, W. M. Richards of Fruitvale, D. B. Greenwald of the Ahtanum and Dan A. McDonald of Parker were placed in nomination. Three ballots were required to settle this contest, the third resulting as follows: Richards 53, McDonald 104, the latter gentleman being declared the nominee. Greenwald's name was withdrawn at the end of the second ballot when he received 47 votes, most of his strength going to McDonald.

A. C. Smith, Rufus Fullerton and C. A. Jensen were nominated for county commissioner, third district. The first ballot settled the matter giving Jensen 116, Fullerton 29, Smith, 9.

The North Yakima delegates named R. K. Nichols and J. A. Taggart, the present incumbents, for justices of the peace and Gus Hammel and Clarence Butler for constables. Central committeemen elected for the city precincts were as follows: First ward, Dr. P. Frank and W. H. Redman; second ward, A. D. Sloan and Frank Horsley; third ward, A. N. Short.

Will Build to Cowlitz Pass.

A great deal of interest has been manifested here in the movement looking to an extension of the Tacoma & Eastern railway across the Cascades into this valley. The following is a dispatch from Tacoma to the Seattle P-I of August 30:

Tacoma, Aug. 31.—The Tacoma & Eastern railroad has surveyed a route through the Mineral creek, Big Bottom, Pleasant valley and Cowlitz river countries to the Cowlitz pass, and announces its intention of building a railroad through those districts. The road will branch off the main line of the Eastern at the point where Mineral creek empties into the Nisqually river. The management of the railroad announces that the line is merely for the purpose of tapping excellent timber districts, with no intention of crossing the Cascades.

People, however, who believe the activity in tide flat property in Tacoma, Seattle and Portland presages the appearance of another transcontinental railroad, see in this move of the Tacoma & Eastern an extension which will afford an incoming road an excellent foothold in the Sound region. The Cowlitz pass is looked upon by able engineers as one of the most feasible routes by which roads from the east side can enter the Sound territory, while the country traversed on both sides of the mountains by a road adopting that route is rich and fruitful.

Why the Campaign Lags.

"We are in the second month of the presidential election—that is to say, the second month since the conventions were held, the platforms adopted, the candidates nominated. In the two months before the conventions met, when there was some uncertainty on every condition of the contest except the nomination of Roosevelt by the republicans and their adoption of a stand pat policy regarding the tariff, there was quite as lively a political situation as there has been since the conventions. . . .

"The fact appears to be, however it may be accounted for, that the convention enthusiasm has died down on both sides.

"The republican convention enthusiasm was so plainly artificial and machine-made that its subsidence is not to be wondered at. The democratic article, on the other hand, was so vexatious and opportunist in its character that men do not yet substantially agree concerning its significance.

"It was surmised that the candidates of both parties, in their speeches of acceptance, would awaken fresh ardor, and that the din of battle would be heard on every side. They have all spoken, and their addresses have scarcely stirred the placid, not to say stagnant, waters of public interest.

"Mr. Roosevelt assumed a tone of philosophic calm and a manner of safeguarded commonplace that were instantly recognized as out of character, and caused people to wonder what 't' signified, while forgetting what he said. Judge Parker was wholly characteristic in his judicial-tempered, carefully qualified outgivings, his first extended communication to the American people.

"How is this phenomenal apparent indifference of the people to be accounted for? We are not sure that anyone can satisfactorily account for it. Some things, however, may be noted. For one thing, Theodore Roosevelt has lost the grip that he had on the imagination of the people. They know him better than they did four years ago and they do not like him so much.

"He has played fast and loose in so many ways and has exhibited such an abnormal desire to procure his own nomination at any sacrifice of official dignity and by every device of sheer partisan interference with the self-determination of the people, that they are seriously considering whether he is the man of high ideals and self-sacrificing nature they once believed him to be. They have taken note of his arrogant egotism, his insolence to men who have served their country as bravely and honorably and much longer than he has, and bear on their bodies cruel wounds, of which, however, they do not boast.

"They observe that while he courts praise as the pater of pure politics he cultivates the favor of bosses whose names are synonyms of political corruption. They observe that while he poses as the most earnest and implacable of civil service reformers he has suspended the regulations seventy times to give places to his favorites. In the five years of President McKinley's administration he exercised this privilege but once.

"If we read the signs of the times correctly, there will be more independent voting this year than in 1896 and 1900, but there will be little preliminary noise about it. No one need be surprised if, when the votes are counted, it is discovered that the distrust of Roosevelt, and of what he may do to, or with, the country by the exercise of his daring self-will, runs much deeper than has been suspected. It is not impossible that under existing circumstances a very large number will prefer to confer executive authority on a man like Judge Parker. . . .

"In the third place, the democratic party and the democratic candidates, granting that the candidates are conservative and honorable men, do not yet arouse any popular enthusiasm. So far as we can see, they are not likely to do it. The St. Louis convention, viewed in the aggregate of its phenomena, was not one to inspire the zeal of the mass of democratic voters.

"The fundamental fact with regard to the noticeable indifference of the people is that the democratic leaders have not yet put forth with a clarion voice that compels attention any positive program of antagonistic policy.

"Whether there is to be an earnest campaign, enlisting the hearts of the people, depends more than anything else on Judge Parker's next formal deliverance. Is he capable of sounding the keynote of a progressive, aggressive, defiant, loyal democracy, as faithful to the letter and spirit of every article of the constitution as to any?"—Boston Herald.

Behind the Canucks.

We Americans are in the habit of alluding to our English brethren as slow, "intensely conservative" and averse to making changes of any kind. But in many respects they show much more nerve than the "progressive Yankees" in taking hold of hard problems.

In the matter of regulating common carriers, a matter of vital interest to the farmers, they are far ahead of us. Look over the border, for instance, at the Canucks. The Canadian government has taken sweeping control of the railroads. They have a railway commission of three members, to whom is delegated very extensive powers to make and revise rates, remedy abuses as against individuals and places and generally prevent extortion and discrimination. Our Interstate Commerce Commission is tame and inefficient by comparison. And there is another difference. When the English make a law it is enforced. Their Rich and poor, powerful and weak, the mighty railroad magnate, the trust promoter and all the other would-be oppressors of the people are made to "toe the mark."—American Farmer.

Women's Relief Corps Doings.

The Women's Relief corps has decided to build a monument to the memory of the members of the Grand Army of the Republic on the lots recently dedicated by the city in Tahoma cemetery to the latter organization. The monument will cost about $600 and will be placed on the lots next December. The specifications for it can be seen at the drug store of A. D. Sloan.

The Relief corps has the first payment in sight and the rest of the indebtedness will be cleared by holding socials and birthday parties at the homes of the members. The first party was held by Mrs. Tuesley who is 71 years old. Each one attending these parties gives $10 toward the fund. The birthday offering is a penny for each year of the age of the person giving the event. Mrs. Tuesley being the oldest member, 71 pennies were turned into the treasury and nice refreshments were served. Other events were held by Mrs. Combs, Mrs. Horsley, Mrs. Allen, Mrs. Jacobs, and Mrs. Harris. The proceeds of all these amounted to $20. Mrs. Van Mavera will entertain on September 2.
