EASTERN OKLAHOMA INDIANS TO BENEFIT FROM OEO PROJECT (DEMONSTRATION)

A program that will demonstrate that off-reservation Indians in a ten-county area Eastern Oklahoma, can effectively promote their own rural economic development through community organization and participation, was announced today by the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The $470,277 Community Action Program demonstration grant was made to Oklahomans for Indian Opportunity, Inc. of Norman, Oklahoma, a non-profit organization founded in 1965 to improve the material and cultural conditions of Indians residing in Oklahoma.

There are some 200,000 off-reservation Indians in the State of Oklahoma. The ten-county area in which this demonstration project will operate, has an estimated 30,000 Indians, the majority of whom are in the inaccessible hard-core category.

Among the objectives of the 12-month project are the following:

--create strong grass-roots organizations where the poor can participate in setting up and implementing their own programs;

--pool all available resources from Federal and private agencies for the implementation of specific economic programs such as cooperatives and service industries;

--set up lines of communication between various departments and agencies in order to avoid duplication of efforts. A number of Federal agencies are funding projects for Indians in Eastern Oklahoma but lack of coordination has produced duplication and confusion. OIO could act as an "umbrella organization for the pooling of Federal and other resources towards the economic rejuvenation of the area;

--and, help the Indians plan for area-wide organization with longer-range goals in economic development.

Economic and social development specialists will be employed to work through non-professional aides drawn from the poor, to create interest among the Indians for economic development. OIO will also work with agencies having on-going programs in the area to promote basic education, leadership training and consumer education.

The counties involved are Mayes, Delaware, Cherokee, Adair, Sequoyah, Haskell, Latimer, Le Flore, Pushmataha and McCurtain.

MAKAH INDIAN RESERVATION, WASHINGTON (C&A - INDIANS)

Needed programs of adult education, health, housing and youth programs for the residents of the Makah Indian Reservation, Neah Bay (Clallam County), Washington was announced today by the Office of Economic Opportunity in Washington, D.C.

The $94,276 project to the Makah Indian Tribal Council represents $84,949 in new Federal funds and $9,327 reprogrammed funds from a prior grant.

The adult education program for 300 reservation residents will provide basic instruction in arithmetic, industrial art, language, typing and home economics. These courses will improve communication skills, nutrition and budgeting as well as enable some of the residents to qualify for further training. Work with both school and adults to help solve cultural problems of Indian children is also included. One certified teacher and six nonprofessional teacher aides will be employed.

Physical, environmental and mental health services will be continued under the community health education program. This will include pre-natal care, alcoholism, child care, assistance to the elderly in nutritional and health problems and wholesome, healthful, leisure-time activity. The community health director and one resident community health assistant will work in the program.

A business consultant and consumer educator will be employed to work with the Tribal Council and individuals in helping them increase the economic potential of the reservation. He will serve as liaison between the Small Business Administration and individuals seeking services and information on housing loans, contracts, and economic opportunities for assistance from Federal, state and local agencies, and hold meetings with the residents of the reservation to inform them of proper buying, available resources, etc.

The Housing Development Program will help the local housing authority to develop and establish housing programs and designs which meet the needs of the people.

The Makah Manpower Work Corps will provide work experience for 20 indigent residents who will clear and level a 90 acre housing site. They will also work on the homes of 30 local residents. Work will include repair, plastering, etc.

The Summer Youth Opportunities Program will enable 10 high school youngsters to gain work experience while cleaning up the community, painting the homes of the impoverished, thus helping to develop their social needs. Organized recreation and field trips are also included.

Sandra V. Johnson will continue as project director.
