Confederate dead that sleep on Johnson's Island. The Georgia Improvement List of the Dead and Flat of the Graves. Historical Sketch of the prison.

At the Twenty-fifth annual reunion of the 128th Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry held in Sandusky, Aug 16th, 1900 the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Whereas the ground now used on Johnson's Island as a cemetery for the Confederate dead is only nominally under the control of the United States Government, and is not owned by it, be it

Resolved, by this association, that the representatives in Congress from the 13th district of Ohio, Hon J.A. Norton, and the Senators from Ohio, Hon J.B. Foraker and Hon M.A. Hanna be requested to secure the passage of a bill to secure the title to the ground thus occupied as a cemetery on Johnson's Island to the United States."

Capt. H.C. Strong of Sandusky, president of the 128th Regimental association has given much time and labor to the movement to place the cemetery on Johnson's Island under national ownership and care, and a bill to that effect will be introduced this winter by Hon J.A. Norton, member of Congress from this district. An option on a sufficient area of land in which the cemetery is located has been secured at a reasonable price per acre, and there is every reason to believe that the bill will pass. The following articles giving a historical sketch of the prison on Johnson's Island and the improvement of the cemetery in the spring of 1890 will be of interest and pertinent at this time:

Late in the fall of 1861 Lieut. Col. Wm. Hoffman, commissary general of prisoners came to Sandusky and leased from Mr. L.B. Johnson about forty acres of land on Johnson's island, to be used for a prison for Confederate officers. The post was known officially as Depot Prisoners of War, Johnson's Island, near Sandusky, Ohio. The island is in Sandusky Bay, a little over three miles from the city.

Mr. W.T. West of Sandusky, was given the contract for the construction of the necessary buildings and completed his contract early in ~~1861~~ 1862. The buildings consisted of cottages for officers, two story barracks for troops and prisoners and necessary buildings for quartermaster and commissary store and a hospital.

The barracks for troops would accommodate two companies of two hundred men each; they were boarded up and down, battened on the outside and ~~exposed~~ ceiled on the inside. Bunks three tiers high, wide enough for two men, supplied with ticks filled with straw, afforded sleeping accommodations. They were warmed by cast iron box stoves using wood as fuel and were lighted with tallow candles. A kitchen, at each end of each barrack, was arranged to provide for the wants of the company. The barracks for prisoners were built in exactly the same manner and would accommodate about two hundred and forty men each.

The prison yard was surrounded by a fence built by two-inch plank, placed on end about fourteen feet high. On the side, near the bay, the planks were placed about four inches apart. A walk, built around the prison near the top of the fence on the outside, was used by the guards, giving them a view of everything that transpired in the prison yard.

At the northeast corner of the prison yard and also at the main entrance, fronting the street in the prison yard, block houses were built loop holed for musketry, each armed with a brass twelve-pound mountain Howitzer.

In November, 1861, William S. Pierson of Sandusky, was appointed major and authorized to recruit two companies of infantry to be known as the Hoffman battalion, Ohio Volunteer Infantry, Company A. Capt. Foster M. Follitt, was mustered into service Jan 14, 1862. Company B, Captain Edward A. Scoville, was mustered into service Feb. 27th, 1862.

The prison depot was intended to be used exclusively for commissioned officers and with the exception of a few small lots of enlisted men sent by mistake and soon ordered to other prison depots was so used. From first to last, about ten thousand Confederate officers were confined there, the greatest number of any one time being about three thousand. The entire number of deaths among these prisoners was about two hundred and twenty. There are now two hundred and six graves in the cemetery.

The prisoners began to arrive as soon as the prison was completed and more guards became necessary. Company C, Captain Philitus W. Norris was mustered into service June 6th, 1862.

On the 26th day of June, 1862, Company B, 88th O.V.I. three months' service, Captain Daniel Brewer, was brought from Camp Chase and remained on the island until mustered out September 1862.

Company D. Hoffman Battalion Captain Thomas H. Linnell was mustered into service September 16th, 1862.

Company C and D Hoffman Battalion participated in a short active campaign in Western Virginia in the summer of 1863.

In December 1863 and January 1864 ~~six additional~~ six additional companies were mustered into service and they, with the Hoffman Battalion became the 128th regiment O.V.I. Col. Chase W. Hill commanding.

In the summer of 1863 in consequence of a threatened raid upon the post from Confederates in Canada, three remnants of Ohio militia were ordered out. One encamped on Huron Park in the city and two on the island. Brigadier General Jacob D. Cox, commander of the district of Ohio came to the island and remained until the militia were ordered home.

On November 10th, 1863, the 24th Battery, Ohio Volunteers Light Artillery came to the island and remained until August 6th, 1864.

About the 1st of December, 1863 the 12th regiment O.V. Cavalry acting as infantry came to the island and remained most of the winter.

Major General Terry, 1st division 6th Army Corps with the 4th brigade 1st division 6th army corps, Brig Gen Alexander Shaler commanding 6th New York 67th New York, 122nd New York, 23rd Pennsylvania, 82nd Pennsylvania were stationed during the winter and spring, 1863-64 on Johnson's Island and in Sandusky.

The United States steamer Michigan was in the bay a considerable part of the season of 1863-64.

When the first deaths occurred among the prisoners Mr. L.B. Johnson gave his consent that they might be buried on the island and the present site of the cemetery was selected with his approval. No lease of land was made, in so far as the writer has knowledge, no compensation was ever received by Mr. Johnson for the use of the land.

Mr. Johnson has been dead about three years. The cemetery is now owned by Jas. H. Emrich and Charles Dick of Sandusky.

After the close of the war Mr. Johnson built at his own expense a fence around the cemetery and repaired it from time to time until an officer from Columbus Barracks, some years ago, built a fence, iron posts and flat steel wire about it. Other than this the cemetery was neglected until some fifteen or more years ago. McMeens Post GAR of Sandusky cleaned it up and held services there on Memorial Day. of the sme ~~yarrx~~ character as those held later in the day at Oakland cemetery. These services have been maintained regularly ever since by this post and are always well attended.

In 1889 a party of editors and prom nent officials of Georgia visited the cemetery saw its neglected condition, raised a fund and caused head stones of Georgia marble to be placed at each grave. Since that time the only attention this cemetery has received has been from McMeens Post GAR.

The Confederate head at Johnson's Island.

From Sandusky Register, October 12, 1889

When the distinguished party of Georgia farmers, fruit growers and newspaper men visited Sandusky in early September on their tour of sight-seeing through Ohio they were taken by Jno T. Mack of The Register to the cemetery on Johnson's island where sleep 206 soldiers nearly all of them officers of the Confederate army who died while prisoners on the island. The visitors found the cemetery in a neglected condition and the plain head boards tha once marked the graves fast becoming obliterated by the frosts and storms of time. Many of the boards which mark d the graves once bore plainly the insc ription of the dead lying beneath are now entirely rotted away, many others give but in dim and imperfect outline the names they bore, many boards ha e fallen on the graves, few are now standing.

The cemetery covers about one a re of ground. Its location is beautiful and its surrondings have all the charm that nature could give. It is in the west side of a lovely grove of young trees at the northeast point of the island. A few rods to the south and east the waters of Sandusky bay play along the gently sloping shores. To the westward lies a large open meadow w th fields of corn bey ond and the old prison grounds and the few remaining buildings in full view on the elevated lands beyond. Save the tread of an occasional visitor from day to day no sound from the busy world is heard and the soldier dead sleeps the "sleep that knows no waking" in eternal silence. Once a year on Memorial Day morning a steamer from the city conveys committees from the Grand Army Posts and the Relief Corps and other delegations of ladies and gentlemen across the bay to the island. The cemetery is visited, the graves strewn with flowers, the sacred words read and prayer and an appropriate address delivered. Three or four years ago a government official ~~visited~~ erected an iron fence around the cemetery using up a small unexpended balance but beyond that nothing has been done by way of improvement.

Three or four of the bodies have since the war been removed by relatives to a final resting place in the South. Two or three graves have head stones in marble erected by kindred who have not forgotten their dead. Rip Van Winkle when he came back from his twenty years' death sleep said "How soon are we forgotten when we're gone."

Yes, generally, but not all are forgotten.

A ~~small~~ stroll through a cemetery among neglected graves reminds one of the truth of Rip's sad soliloquy--and of its exceptions also. Some years ago the Register agitated the subject of the government improving the cemetery on Johnson's island and although the personal efforts of its editor, I. F. Mack congress passed a bill appropriating a sum for the work but the owner of the island refused to give a deed of the land so the government therefore nothing could be done and the ~~appropriation~~ appropriation lapsed into the treasury at the close of the year.

When the Georgia party visited the cemetery a few weeks ago the newspaper men resolved that they would bring the matter of improving it to the attention of their people. They saw how rapidly all marks showing the location of the graves and names of the dead were being obliterated and realized the necessity of speedy action. In compliance with the request then made by the Georgia brethren the Register gives this morning a list of the dead buried in the cemetery. It has been obtained after careful labor, and imperfect as it is is the most correct obtainable. The original list was of course made by the officers in charge during the occupancy of the island for a prison, but it appears that those first records do not give the names of all the dead and the list contains the usual proportions of "unknown."

A personal inspection of the graves and inscriptions of the headboards made some years after, while the headboards were in good condition and the inscriptions legible, confirmed the original list. That list was also compared with a "List of Prisoners of War who have died at Johnson's Island" furnished by the commissary general of prisoners and on file no doubt, at Columbus, and in the war department at Washington.

The list we give combines the two, showing wherein there are many variations in the two records as explained in the two records as explained in note A--following the list we publish. In compliance with their request a copy of today's Register is sent to every member comprising the Georgia Party which visited the cemetery. Should action be taken looking to the improvement of the cemetery, the publishers of the Register stands (eq) ready to afford all the aid in their power.

There are in existence but two copies of this list. One is held by Mr. L.B. Johnson of Sandusky, owner of Johnson's Island, and the other by the publishers of the Register.

From that list and the accompanying plat of the cemetery which was made at the same time the list was taken, the graves can be definitely located and a majority of the names of the individual dead they contain correctly ascertained.

In this connection a few words about Johnson's island will be of interest. This island lies in Sandusky bay directly opposite the city and distant a little over three miles. A half mile from its north and east shores lies the mainland of Ottawa county of which Johnson's island is a part which forms a peninsula nearly 15 miles long with Sandusky bay bounding it on the south and Lake Erie on the north and east.

The island is about one mile long, one half mile wide and its east point is a little over one mile from the mouth of Sandusky bay. It is thus set like a gem on the beautiful bay close to mainland and the busy moving world and yet separate and apart from it. Its shore does not rise in rough and rocky outline from the water but are gentle gradually ascending grade to the center of the island on every side. At many points the beach is sandy and affords splendid natural bathing grounds while the finest views are afforded of the lake to the east, the bay and city to the south and west, and the high table lands and vine clad slopes of Ottawa county to the north and northwest.

The island contains about 300 acres, seventy five of which are covered by magnificent young groves of black walnut, hickory and other trees native to the section, grown up almost wholly since the dark and unhappy days of civil war. The grove covering the east point where the cemetery is situated is especially fine. About 50 acres are in orchards of peaches, grapes and other fruits; 150 acres to meadow and tilled land for farming and a quarry of inexhaustible lime stone furnishes a large annual output of lime and building stone. A lovelier natural spot for a city of the dead " could hardly be found any where. The time is coming when Johnson's island will be converted by the landscape gardner into one of the most beautiful resorts in all this summer resort region and when cottages and summer homes by the dozen will dot its charming shores.

It may not come in the life time of too its present venerable owner but it will come and that before many years. Nature has designed ~~it~~ and fashioned it and the art of man will yet utilize it for his pleasure and profit. Whatever improvement therefore the Georgia brethren may make in the cemetery should be made with an eye to the surroundings as they will be in the future.

(From the Sandusky Daily Register of May 12, 1890)

The 206 Confederate soldiers who comprise the little silent city of the dead on Johnson's island no longer sleep in unmarked graves.

The marble headstones furnished by people of Georgia through subscriptions raised by the party of newspaper brethren and prominent farmers and fruit growers of the state following their visit here last September are in place.

When the battalion from McMeens met ~~GA~~ and delegations of citizens visit the spot on Decoration day to hear a prayer and address and ~~screw~~ the mounds with flowers a different scene from that of the past will meet their gaze.

At the head of every grave and in perfect line stands a well set marble slab rising two feet or more above the ~~head~~ and bearing in clear cut ~~lithic~~ letters that a century's storms cannot obliterate. the only human ~~and~~ epitaph there is of the soldier who lies buried beneath. The headstones are of pure white Georgia marble from the quarries of the American Marble Company of Marietta and were ~~trans~~ transported in one car from Marietta to Chattanooga by the NC& St L.

railway thence to Cincinnati by the L and N railway thence to Springfield O by the C C C and I railway and from Springfield to Sandusky by the Cincinnati, Sandusky and Cleveland railroad. All of these railroads conveyed the car free of charge thereby by their liberality saving to the subscribers a considerable item in the expense.

The headstones came through early in April last in good condition.
 Not one was broken or marred and as soon after their arrival as the weather permitted they were transported across the bay on the steamer Josephine. Mr. John Homegardner, owner of the steamer, kindly furnishing it at a very small charge. The work of superintending the transfer and placement of the headstone was put in charge of the writer by Col. John O. Waddell under authority of the following letter:

~~Atlanta~~ Atlanta Ga, March 28, 1890 Jno T. Mack, Sandusky O

My dear sire: We have headstones for Confederate soldiers buried on Johnson's island ready for shipment. Colonel Sweet has gone to Europe for his health, ~~and~~ leaving the matter with me. What is the least sum it will take to put them up after reaching Sandusky, and will you superintend the work? I know I am asking much, but am emboldened to call on you on account of the splendid manner you treated us at Sandusky last fall.

yours very truly ~~JOHN~~ Jno O. Waddell.
