Loren W. Ranton, Washington State Director of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency for the past four years, has been appointed as Director of the newly created Program Service Bureau of the National Council in its New York Office.

In the new assignment, Mr. Ranton will work with other national organizations and agencies in developing and promoting delinquency prevention, control and treatment programs. Emphasis in the new program will be on citizen involvement in the fight against crime and delinquency.

The Washington Council, a United Good Neighbor agency created in 1956, has worked in the state for the development and improvement of delinquency and crime prevention, control and treatment programs.
