Fruitvale.

Mrs. E. W. Nash left on Monday for Red Lodge, Mont. Her two boys will remain here for a few weeks.

Fruitvale school had to close two weeks earlier than was expected, many of the patrons being afraid that smallpox might get into the school and spread.

G. W. Hauser has rented the Wiley place for a year and has already moved. He met with quite a loss soon after he got settled. Having brought out all his Belgium hares, he put them into what he considered safe quarters, but some prowling dogs got in one night and killed about $100 worth.

Among the recent arrivals in this locality, is E. Dickerson who takes charge of the Raymond ranch. Opposite his place is W. James, another newcomer, who is clearing up a 10 acre ranch and has already ordered a supply of fruit trees. Richard Carieu, of Grand Forks, Minn., has bought a small piece of land near the school house and is temporarily stopping there with his son-in-law, as he is a man of means and does not wish to rush matters too much. He will buy a good sized ranch, later.

Nob Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner start for California tomorrow. Their many friends miss them but extend best wishes for a speedy recovery and a safe return.

J. E. Shannon returned this week from a trip to the headwaters of the Cowyche, where he was looking up a proposition to purchase a section of land on which to pasture his stock.

Mr. Anglin has returned to Nob Hill and is occupying the Arthur Carosso house, on the hill at the four corners. He has been engaged to walk the Hubbard ditch the coming season.

The cleaning out of the Hubbard ditch has been completed and work will begin in a few days on the headgate, which is to be lowered 18 inches, also the ditch is to be deepened from one foot to 18 in. for nearly a mile, which will give a much greater volume of water and will result in an abundant supply during the irrigating season.

Toppensish.

Frank Williams spent Sunday in Ellensburg.

James Lonergan has just shipped a carload of beef cattle from this point.

Miss Birdie Parton returned to Yakima Sunday, after spending a week on the ranch.

U. F. Diteanu was in the city the early part of the week, and registered at the hotel Staton.

A "Poverty" social was given at Staton's hall last Wednesday, the proceeds going to the church.

The dwelling house of Mrs. Robbins was burned to the ground last Monday night. Very little was saved.

Toppensish, owing to the increasing amount of business, is badly in need of an additional side track, and it is to be hoped the railroad company will soon put one in.

Sunnyside.

Miss Maude Eby came from North Yakima on Friday to spend a few days with her parents.

The Sunnyside school will give an entertainment at the Odd Fellows hall on Friday evening March 22.

The Globe hotel sign has been nicely retouched with paint, which adds greatly to its appearance. Q. I. Phelps did the work.

The Hub Mercantile company, of Mabton and Sunnyside, have just received a shipment of a general line of hats and clothing.

Gas Templin, who returned with his bride, is now keeping house in his new North Sunnyside cottage, which he built since his return.

The Vandermark hotel has had several new rooms added recently. This improvement will much increase the comfort and convenience of the guests.

Grandma Larkins was taken sick suddenly on Sunday and at present is but little better. She was anointed Monday afternoon by the Elders of the church.

Mr. Caffery came home last week for a short vacation. He will devote his time during his stay to planting about 5 acres of the land which he purchased recently of the town site company.

Mr. Luthlin died at his home last Friday of pneumonia. The deceased was among the first settlers and was highly respected by all who knew him. The funeral was conducted Sunday afternoon by Rev. Mr. Budlong.

Clinton Webber and Miss Esther McDonald were married at North Yakima last Wednesday. They have gone to housekeeping on the Webber ranch east of Sunnyside. Clint "set 'em up" to the boys and thereby avoided the cow bell and tin can racket, which would have been the inevitable result had he failed to respond.

MEETING OF CITY COUNCIL

H. H. Lombard Resigns—A. B. Weed His Successor—Hall Asks Carnegie for Gift.

Six councilmen present at the regular meeting last Monday evening. The absent member was H. H. Lombard whose resignation as councilman at large was read by City Clerk Dought and accepted by the council. He offered no reason for his withdrawal but it is understood that it is because of his business cares.

Fire Chief Hauser had received an offer of 150 feet of new fire hose for the old hand engine which has been in the possession of the city for years. Mr. Hauser had been requested to reply promptly to the offer so he secured the consent of a majority of the individual members of the council last week and shipped the engine. The action met with some opposition but it was ratified at the regular session Monday evening.

Frank B. Shallow applied for a renewal of his license to sell intoxicating liquors, which was granted.

The request of M. Schorn that 50 per cent. of the 1889 taxes on some of his property be accepted for full value was granted.

A resolution declaring the intention of the city to lay a sidewalk on Third street in front of block 67 was read and passed by the council.

A resolution was adopted requiring all sidewalks hereafter built on Yakima avenue in the business portion of town to be of concrete, brick or other non-combustible material. The resolution also contained many detailed provisions for the construction of these sidewalks.

The property owners of Sixth street finding that the plan for the grading of Sixth was defective, asked that the council change the provisions of the contract with Mr. McVior in order to widen the driveway and narrow the parking on each side of the street. The wish of the Sixth street residents was that the contractor be allowed $100 more for the change, but the council would not agree to their additional expense. A resolution was passed compromising on $50.

An ordinance calling for the grading, macadamizing and curbing of Yakima avenue from Front street to Natchez avenue was passed. It was proposed by Councilman Reed that the cross streets from Front to Third, inclusive, be similarly improved one block north and one block south of the avenue, but no definite action was taken in that matter as it was deemed better to await the result of the work of the new rock crusher.

As all the bids for city lumber were identical they were rejected and the clerk was instructed to advertise again.

The bids for the city printing were referred to the committee on printing.

The street commissioner was instructed to fill several mud holes and depressions on Second street.

Health officer Frank reported to the council that four cases of smallpox exist in the city, three being in the detention hospital. The disease, he reported, is well under control and no probability of any further spread.

Mr. Hall reported that he had written to Andrew Carnegie asking for a donation of $10,000 for a public library building in this city. The council also decided to forward a letter to Mr. Carnegie in order to add more weight to Mr. Hall's request.

A. B. Weed was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Councilman Lombard.

The following bills were read:

Tony Day, work on fire alarm	$30.00
St. Paul & Tac. Lbr. Co., lumber	$9.95
Yak. Democrat, printing	$5.00
St. Paul & Tac. Lbr. Co., lumber	$4.18
Yak. Work Yard, fuel	$12.25
Henry Ditter, warrant	$7.85
William Curry, work	$2.50
C. M. Hauser, expense as fire chief	$1.50
A. E. Howard, building pest house	$57.50
Frank Horsley, lumber	$37.75
G. L. Allen, Co. Clerk fees	$12.00
Geo. S. Rankin, 6th street flume	$65.00

Owing to the effect of building territorial roads the shortest way across, Jesse Hughes' land is so divided as to leave a small three cornered piece that will hardly pay to fence. On the other hand the Episcopal church has never separated from the Catholic church. It still claims to be a branch of the Holy Catholic church, as truly as that branch of it which calls itself the Holy Roman church. At the reformation it threw off certain accretions which had been taken on during the middle ages, it retained everything essentially characteristic of the Apostolic church, and it retained also some other things which had developed during the 15th century of church growth, such as the church architecture, music, the creeds and a portion of the liturgy. Some of the ultra Protestant bodies discarded the architecture, music, liturgy, creeds and vestments altogether. The Episcopal church said some of these things were good and retained them.

Many other churches are now beginning to take them back too.

There are four things which the Episcopal church considers essential, and these are the threefold order of the ministry, the ancient creeds, the sacraments of baptism and the Lord's Supper, and Holy Scripture as the rule of faith. About such minor things as architecture, form of worship, music, and vestment we have our preference, and willingly leave to others their preference also, but the four things just mentioned are vital to the true church. We believe that these things were ordained by its founder to be essential notes of his church, and that there is a departure from his will and order when ever any one of them is absent. We hold the church to be a sacred and divine institution, the body of Christ, as St. Paul calls it. It was meant to undergo a process of development, and adapt itself to the needs of human society, but nothing can be grafted upon it which is contrary to Christ's spirit and teaching. If at any time it is found that such things have been taken on, they must be thrown off, and the church must revert to its normal type. It was also intended that it should meet with perplexities, and sure that there would be internal troubles, but it was also meant that these difficulties should be settled within the church. Consequently no body of disciples has any right to secede from the church, even when there are grave evils within it. They must remain and assert their liberty, and help rid the church of its evil, otherwise they rend the body of Christ, and open the way for other secessions, while the evil remains with none to combat it. It would have been far better if this policy had been pursued everywhere and especially during the stormy time known as the Reformation. Erasmus, who is said to have laid the egg which Luther hatched, wished this to be done; but Luther and his violent partisans hatched the egg too soon, and it proved to be a game cock. The religious wars of the 16th century, Christendom split into innumerable petty divisions, and to this day the persistence of violence, jealousies and abuses that might have been cured, are the results. It is always better to work out problems inside an organization than to go outside and found a rival society. We think that this must especially be done in the churches. Therefore we emphasize the sacred nature of the church. We call it the Holy Catholic church, and the body of Christ, which no man or body of men may rend, or lightly disturb its peace or orderly development. It must be neither petrified nor broken up into fragments. We believe that the Episcopal church is the church of the future as it is of the past, and we hold fast to its ministry, creeds, sacraments, sacred writings and its rich body of devotional literature, as a legacy committed to us to hold in trust for the future. In other words we retain much which other bodies of Christian brethren have. We think, carelessly and needlessly, thrown away; we believe that sometime they will come back and claim it again. It belongs to them exactly as much as it does to us, for it is the product of the religious spirit of the ages.

ROCKWOOD CREAMERY CO.

Is Selling Milk Cows to the Farmers in Sunnyside.

The Rockwood Creamery Company is doing much to open a great industry in the Yakima valley by selling the farmers of this locality a high grade of milk cows. Eight carloads of cows have already been disposed of and the manager of the company, D. M. Shanks, has contracts at the present time to supply 500, which will be delivered as soon as they can be purchased and shipped in. The object of this is of course to get the people of that section interested in the dairy business and to supply them with the best stock, which will not only be of great benefit to the country, but also to the creamery company.

"We are building skimming stations at different points in Sunnyside," said Mr. Shanks "and so far the venture promises well. We sell the cows to the farmers on the installment plan, so they are enabled to get the best stock at a small outlay of money. Later we will sell separators to the people so that they may separate their own milk. This would result in a saving to them in two ways. The skimmed milk would be kept at home, and the hauling between the farm and the creamery or skimming station would be reduced to a minimum. It is also a saving to us as it would not be necessary for us to handle the skimmed milk. This product, which is waste as far as we are concerned, is of great value to the farmers in feeding hogs, chickens and pigs. The separators will also be sold on the installment plan.

"From the skimming station the cream is brought to our creamery in this city, where it is made into butter and shipped to the south, Alaska and Spokane. We have two creameries in this valley, one here and one up the Ahtanum. The output of the two is between 1600 and 1700 pounds daily. If the demand warrants it the probabilities are we will put in a creamery at Sunnyside."

QUIETT & AYRES,

BOOK AND HEART.

For many a year he grubbed among
The stalls where antique tomes lie piled,
And then alone when, for a song,
He sought some prize, he ever smiled.
Starting at titles, oft his eyes
Slanted aloft with eager looks,
As if he stood in paradise
'Neath trees of knowledge hung with books.
So long the reflex dull of calf,
Morocco, vellum, lift his face;
That it is leather now by half,
And Time's deep tooling we can trace.
Volumes grew human in his care,
While he their form and semblance took,
Till men stood on the shelving there
And in the armchair lolled a book.
But books and men will fray and fade
As Care's rude finger turns the page,
Or in some sunless chamber laid
They warp and mildew into age.
The living leaves grow sour and wan,
The back knows many an ache and crook,
Till into limbo's flung the bone
And to the grave is borne the book.
Who knows, you pile of ragged leaves
May, when some critic finds it there,
Be gathered up like golden sheaves
And garbed in beauty past compare.
E'en so, if aught of worth be find
Between its margins broad and white,
Some heavenly Grotto yet may bind
The bookman's soul in covers bright!

ABOUT A MINX.

How She Shocked the People of Lindenthorpe.

Miss Betty Mayne had been back in Lindenthorpe for a week, and for a week Lindenthorpe had been shocked. Miss Mayne felt hurt. When she returned, she had been homesick for the sea and the seaboard folks, left behind when her aunt carried her up to town years before, and friendliness was in her heart toward them. Instead of receiving the same, she had been met with envy and jealousy and all uncharitableness. Partly it was her fault, partly theirs. They only remembered her as the limp and scapergoat of the village, who played on the rocks all day long with bare feet, and they resented her grown up, fashionability. She could not help realizing that she was better dressed, knew more of the world and was in many ways a hundred years ahead of Lindenthorpe. Then, again, Mr. Silas Attenborough, who always did the right thing, and whose actions, accordingly, were viewed with an indulgent eye, had seemed in danger of doing the wrong thing. "Moonstruck," Miss Griggs declared him to be. And the minx was not even flattered.
It was on Sunday that the shock of shocks occurred. To begin with, several minutes after service had begun Miss Betty Mayne walked in—almost strolled in—as cool as a cucumber, and clad in the most outrageously fine dress, and stood in the entrance (instead of modestly finding herself a seat), poking away at the stones with a green parasol until Mr. Attenborough, who was churchwarden—the youngest churchwarden Lindenthorpe had ever had—rose in his Sunday best to show her to a place.
People were more disgusted than surprised when Miss Mayne, after fanning herself ostentatiously for some time, rose and stalked out of the church by the front door. Such behavior was to be expected from a minx. It was what followed that left Lindenthorpe resigned to anything short of an earthquake. Miss Mayne wandered down toward the beach in a pensive mood and took a seat on a bit of sandstone. She was a pretty sight in blue and gold, whatever Miss Griggs' opinion might be. A churchwarden is at liberty to differ from a Sunday school mistress on a question like this, and Mr. Silas Attenborough as he walked from church down to the sea and saw the minx on the rock differed in toto from Miss Griggs. He felt a desire to rebuke the minx for her conduct in church that morning, but was it wise to venture to the rocks? He was in his Sunday clothes and not very sure of foot among slippery weeds. Nevertheless, his sense of duty being strong, Mr. Attenborough crossed the Rubicon and at length reached the sandstone rock. The minx nodded to him. "I saw you in church this morning," she said.
"I see you," said Mr. Attenborough gravely.
"It was very funny," she went on. "The very first thing I noticed was a chalk mark on your coat from leaning against the pillars, and I do believe you've got it on still."
This was hardly the conversation Mr. Attenborough had pictured to himself, and he rubbed chalk away before replying.
"It seemed you left church before t' sermon?"
"Dreadfully ventilated, isn't it?" she said, nodding. "I really wonder people don't get suffocated sometimes."
"It were a powerful sermon."
"Short ones always are, I think. Or did you come after me before it was finished?"
"Come after"—Mr. Attenborough was taken aback. He had hurried certainly, but he hardly expected the minx to notice that.
"Coom after a t' sermon was finished?" He recovered himself indignantly. "I shouldn't think of it. But—" "You didn't expect to see me here?"
Since the minx sat on a rock in full view of the shore, Mr. Attenborough evaded what seemed a fruitless question.
"It's agreeable by t' sea here afore dinner," he remarked.
"The same as ever," she said—"all Lindenthorpe's the same as ever—the sea, and the village, and the folks. They might have slept and never waked since the day I left, seven years ago. Oh!"—she roused herself to sudden animation—"but I'd like to sock them!"
"Shock 'em!" said Mr. Attenborough, aghast.
"Shock you all, because I detest people who can be shocked, and if I knew for certain that I detested Lindenthorpe I'd be content to leave it and never see it again." She sank back against the rock.
"Would yew now?" said Mr. Attenborough, astonished.
She nodded. "It's quite true," she said.
"I don't think I'm easy to shock," he said guardedly.
"You?" She shook with laughter. "You? Why, you were shocked in church this morning. You'd be shocked if I were to push you into that pool. You're shocked now at hearing me suggest such a thing."
"T' church is different," remarked he, hastily edging from the pool. "But out of t' church I'm not easy to shock."
"You think so?"
"Solemn trewth," said Mr. Attenborough decidedly.
"Perhaps you're right," she said. "But"—she pointed a finger toward the shore—"is that Miss Griggs over there?"
He followed the direction of her finger and saw that most of the congregation were assembled in groups about the shore.
"Tis, indeed!" he groaned. "An Miss Griffin an t' whole Sunday school watching us. I think that we shud be getting back."
"Don't let me keep you," she said. "It is not keeping me. 'Tis only"—He looked about him for an excuse. "Zip me! T' sea!"
"What do you mean?"
"T' sea!" said Mr. Attenborough. "Tis coom up!"
She sprang to her feet in great indignation.
"This comes of your talking. Why couldn't you keep your eyes open—what is to be done?"
"Could yew wade?" suggested Mr. Attenborough apologetically. He knew nothing of the rocks and what depths cut him off from the shore. Only he remembered that in old days the imp of the village knew every inch—
"Wade? In my best things?" Her scornful tone made him feel more at fault than ever.
"Praps they'll send us a boat," he said.
"After we're drowned?"
"Praps I could—take yew over to t' shore?"
"See how deep it is first," she said imperiously.
He let himself down gingerly and the water closed over the knees of his best trousers.
"Think yew would loike to be carried?" he asked dolefully, stretching out his arms for her to hurry. But she kept him there while she struggled to hide her laughter, and then said threateningly:
"If you drop me, I shall never forgive you!"
"And if I don't drop yew?" said he.
"Lindenthorpe never will."
"Coom!" he said. And at that she let him take her in his arms. The folk of Lindenthorpe on the beach were taking much interest in the proceedings. "The minx!" said Miss George. "Did you ever?" The churchwarden was splashing through pools of water, regardless of his appearance, and only careful to protect the affected burden in his arms. Most of Lindenthorpe was assembled on the shingle when he reached the uninvaded sand. Miss Betty Mayne made no motion of descent.
"Shall I set yew down here?" he asked.
"No," she said. "It's damp; I should wet my shoes. Carry me right up to the shingle!"
He breathed hard, not because of her weight, which was nothing, but because of the publicity of the thing.
"Whom be I carrying?" he asked.
"Be I carrying ma sweetheart?"
"If you will," she said, stormed by his unexpected boldness. He put her down in the middle of the assembled folk, some of whom feigned to be watching the sea. Miss Griggs happened to be the nearest, and she shook her head archly at the churchwarden.
"I'm shocked," she said. "We're all shocked, Mr. Attenborough."
"Are yew?" said he. "I'm—I'm sweet-rted."—King.

He Fights the Crows.

The king bird, a most active and pugnacious bird, may be found in fields and along the roadsides. He is commonly perched on a post or low bough on the lookout for insects. His sudden dart into the air or down to the ground, followed by a return to the post of observation, is extremely characteristic. Sometimes one may even hear the click of the bill which announces the fate of the unhappy insect. He is with us from May until September.

The king bird owes his name to the fact that he is the one small bird who ventures to attack the marauding crow, and that he always comes off victorious. Rising above his foe, he drops upon his back, attacking him with beak and claws until the unlucky intruder makes off in ludicrous consternation. The nest is usually placed at a moderate height on the horizontal bough of a tree in the orchard or by the wayside. Eggs are laid early in June. The note is a sharp twitter, often somewhat resembling that of the swallow.—Denver Republican.

TO A YOUNGER SISTER.

Perhaps some busy bee may hum
From whom these airy verses come,
Or yet, perchance, a conscience true
May whisper who "talks back" to you!
Ah, let that voice a story tell
Of one who loved you long and well,
Who saw your childhood's tender green
Burst in the bud of sweet sixteen,
And upward reach until it stood
The perfect flower of womanhood!
Then may the lilies of the vale
Blow home to you on every gale,
And Cupid sweet, fair roses strow
Where'er your gentle footsteps go!
When sailing over Life's great deep,
May Love your every voyage keep
And bring you safe through storm and strife
Back to this loyal heart of mine.

A Three Corned Swindle

BY M. QUAD.

COPYRIGHT, 1900, BY C. B. LEWIS.

It wasn't what a conservative old lawyer would call a straight case. I had been sent to London to look up a sharper and make him disgorge for the benefit of the heirs of another sharper. The wife of one John Saunders, an Englishman who had died in Buffalo several years previously, had put her claims in the hands of a New York lawyer. This Saunders had been mixed up in a big swindle before leaving England. Something like £20,000 had been reaped from it, but his partner in the transaction had gobbled on to most of it and had also managed to pull his neck out of the noose, while Saunders had been hunted out of the country. It was the claim of one swindler against another—no more, no less. The leverage we had consisted of a number of papers to which both names were attached. The name of the living partner was Smallwood, and it was understood that he had set up as a money lender. These papers criminated Smallwood in a sense, but in case he was defiant we could not push the case against him.

After some little trouble I found Smallwood and his den. He was a burly, big man, with a loud voice and a domineering way. In assisting to per-

SAT DOWN BESIDE ME AND FELT MY PULSE. I penetrated that swindle he had had a narrow escape, and he realized that in a way he was still under the surveillance of the police, but I put him down as a man not to be easily frightened. I found I was right in this. When I had stated my errand, he laughed in my face and called me a fool. Between ourselves he did not deny the swindle. On the contrary, he boasted of the slick way in which it had been worked. He had furnished the brains, and John Saunders was the cat's paw. He had secured £19,000 of the money and escaped the law, while his partner had fled to a foreign land with the remnant and died among strangers.

"My dear sir," he said as he smiled and rocked to and fro, "you were a dolt to come on any such errand. You have papers, but I would not give you the price of a dinner for them. I am solid, and you can't disturb me. Go to Scotland Yard, go to the attorney, do what you will, and I shall only laugh at you."

Neither Scotland Yard nor the attorneys could help me in the case. While it couldn't be called blackmail, it was an attempt to squeeze money out of a swindler. The one interview satisfied me that my mission was a failure, and I bade Mr. Smallwood good day with as much courtesy as I could assume. It was about lunchtime when I left his office, and I dropped into a modest restaurant for a light meal. I had scarcely got seated when a stranger who had a seedy-gentle look about him asked permission to take the opposite side of the table, saying he had some information to give me. When we had begun on our meal, he said:

"I saw you leave old Smallwood's office and followed you. Has he done you a bad turn?"

I did not give my case away in replying, but gave him to understand that the money lender had refused to do the square thing by me.

"He's a cur, a cheat, a swindler and all that's mean and contemptible!" continued the stranger, with a good deal of feeling. "He has cheated and wronged me, and I can get no satisfaction. Today, however, I learned of an incident in his past life that will give me a good hold on him. I must go to Liverpool to complete my information. If you will go along and become responsible for expenses, I will share the information with you."

For awhile I was chary of the man, thinking he might be in the pay of Smallwood, but I finally decided that I could lose nothing by trusting him. Smallwood had once lived in Liverpool under another name and had been guilty of a crime for which he had to flee to Brazil and remain for several years. This man, who gave the name of Duff, proposed to go down and look up the matter and put the police on the scent. He was going to do this out of revenge, but in my case I had no revenge to gratify. I thought it might be a good thing to hold over Smallwood as a bluff, however, and I promised to reward Duff if anything came of it. In the course of a couple of hours I returned to the money lender's office. He greeted me affably and laughingly said: "I have heard that you Yankees are a persistent race, but in this case you are simply wasting your shoe leather. I suppose you have come to make a new offer?"

"I have come about that Liverpool affair," I replied, and I went on and stated the nature of his crime and the same he used to sail under.

The shot told. The man grew nervous and pale faced, and when I had concluded he said:

"How you secured your information I do not know, but I will frankly admit that it is partly correct. I have little fear that the police would meddle with me at this late date, but I do not care to have the affair stirred up. I am willing to make a fair financial arrangement with Saunders' widow."

That was a matter to be talked over at another meeting. I was a bit surprised that Smallwood should give in so quickly, but concluded that the Liverpool affair was rather serious and that like a man of sense he preferred to part with a couple of thousand sooner than have it resurrected. He had rooms over his office, and I was to sup with him on the next evening but one at 8 o'clock, and the matter of restitution would be arranged. I went to the place appointed by Duff to meet him, but he was not there. I had given him my address, but he did not call on me. As a matter of fact, I never saw him again. After he had played his part he vanished.

When I made my third call on Smallwood, I was cordially received, and while waiting for supper to be served we came to an understanding. He was to give me $10,000 for Saunders' widow, and I was to give him a receipt in full. He grew sociable and jolly as the affair was concluded, and my glass was no sooner empty than he pressed me to drink again. Of a sudden things began to whirl, and then came a blank. When I recovered consciousness, it was morning, and I was lying on a cot bed in a strange room. My head buzzed and racked, my throat was as dry as paper, and as I rolled out of bed and attempted to stand my knees gave way and I fell down. A strange man came to me and talked, and I was given something to drink, but it was late in the afternoon before my brain was clear enough to understand things. As I sat up on the edge of the bed and wondered what had happened and where I was a quiet spoken man who had the look of a doctor entered and sat down beside me and felt my pulse and said:

"You will do now if you keep quiet. Let me say for your encouragement that cases just as bad as yours have been cured in three months. The great key is to avoid excitement. Where is the first place, where am I?" I asked.

"In Dr. Colwell's private lunatic asylum," he replied.

"Who brought me here?"
"Your friends. The loss of your money in that Peruvian speculation unbalanced your mind. You will be well cared for here, and if you aid me as you should your detention will not last over three months."

"I see how it is," I said as I looked him straight in the eye. "I am indebted to Smallwood for this. He drugged me and had me brought here that he might have time to fix up his affairs and skip. I demand my liberty this instant!"

"Come, come," he replied in a coaxing way as he patted me on the shoulder. "I know no one named Smallwood. Your friends in Beacon street brought you here, and Dr. Henry made out the papers. All was perfectly regular. Let us have no excitement. Dinner will be ready in half an hour. Meanwhile think it over."

In that half hour I figured it out. Smallwood had drugged and abducted me. It might or might not be a private insane asylum, but the man had surely been bribed to hold me fast for a time. If I raised a row, it would be the worse for me. If I remained passive, I would be set at liberty as soon as the money lender left the country. I decided to make the best of things, and when the doctor returned I was very quiet. The two of us ate supper together in a small room and were waited upon by an old woman. He called me Mr. Perrine, and, according to his talk, I was a member of a mercantile firm in London. Next morning I was taken to walk in a narrow garden surrounded by high walls. I got sight of no other person, nor could I make out what sort of place I was in. During the day I had the use of a sitting room off my bedroom. It looked out on the rear yard, and the windows were barred. I was given plenty of reading matter, and the doctor played chess with me, and taken altogether the time did not pass unpleasantly. In the three weeks I was in the house I saw only the doctor and the old woman. At 9 o'clock one evening I was told that my cure was complete and ten minutes later was being driven away from the building in a closed carriage. After an hour's ride I was set down in a street in White-chapel, and had I been backed by all the police of London I could not have found the house where I had been held captive. Smallwood had been gone a week—gone no one knew where. While I do not believe there was anything in the Liverpool story told me by Duff, the money lender was more afraid of me than he need have been and had played me a pretty little trick to give himself time to settle up his affairs and move on. I did not go to the police officially, but I did tell the story to a detective on the quiet. How they would have regarded it at Scotland Yard may be judged from what the officer said to me. At the end of the story he winked and grinned and observed:

"What a race of natural born liars you Yankees are!"

THE OLD OAK TREE.

The sweetest thing of earth to me
Is the south wind in the old oak tree.
It moves the branches to and fro;
The shadows dance on the grass below.
The leaves move lightly in the air;
Their rustle seems a whispered prayer.
Deep in the tangled grass I lie,
Seeing but glimpses of the sky.
So thick the green leaves are above,
So light, so soft the breezes move.
I wonder not that men have stood
Before some giant of the wood
And made it of their prayers a shrine,
Deeming it held a soul divine.

THE WINDOWS OPPOSITE

BY CHARLES B. LEWIS.

I had been knocked down by a cab on the streets of Paris and taken to a hospital. I was hurt about the head and shoulders, and, though I had no broken bones to mend, I was so badly bruised that the surgeon told me I wouldn't get out for a month. Hard though I was in a financial sense, I had enough money in my pocket to get me into a pay ward, and they gave me one of the 14 cots on the third floor front. It was summer, and I was close to the seventh window, counting from the left.

The routine of a hospital for an injured man is a monotonous one. After the first three or four days they put me on full diet and gave me books to read, but I could not leave my bed, and it was against the rules to converse with the other patients. It was read, sleep, think and plan, with one visit a day from the surgeon. I could not see the street from my window as I sat propped up on my cot. The only sight to greet my vision was a quaint old house opposite. The structure was two stories high, and I could see the upper halves of four windows. The house looked to have been built 100 years ago and was in a sad state of neglect and untenanted. I don't know why I should have been interested in that house except that a sick man will turn to the veriest trifle to make a diversion. I saw by the state of the windows that the house was tenanted, and yet I had the curiosity to question the nurse about it.

"That house has been empty for many years," she replied, "and as it is in law it will probably fall down before the heirs come into possession. You cannot see that far down, but the lower doors and windows are boarded up to keep tramps out. I have often wondered if the place has not a ghost." I fell into the habit of watching those four windows as closely as if I had been employed as a watchman. It seemed that if I waited long enough I should see a face at one of them. When evening came, there was an electric light somewhere which struck the front of the old house, and I would watch those windows until the nurse enjoined me to turn away and go to sleep. It got so at last that I felt certain of making a discovery, and one evening, when I had been in the hospital nine or ten days, the face I had looked for appeared at one of the middle windows. It was that of a man.

The window was 150 feet from me, but by the assistance of the electric light I made out the face very clearly. It came into view gradually, as if the man slowly advanced across the room, and it remained at the paneless sash for a full minute. It was the face of an evil man. It was dark and bearded, and the eyes traveled up and down and across the street as if looking for danger. Whoever the man was he was no tramp, nor had he a lawful right in that house. As he left the window I called to the nurse and told her of his presence, but she laughed and replied:

"Ah, but we are not to concern ourselves about what goes on over there. If it is some prowler who has broken in, the police must take care of him."

I now had something to occupy my full attention, and I gave up everything to watch the windows opposite. Nothing appeared next day, but at about half past 8 o'clock in the evening I saw the same face again. There was more boldness in the way the man approached the window, and he seemed to feel himself more secure as he surveyed the street. If he were not a fugitive in hiding, why should he be taking peeps at the neighborhood? A vagabond, having entered to obtain shelter for the night, would keep clear of the windows. On this second night the man seemed to be looking intently at the sidewalk running in front of the hospital, and by and by he started and turned away as if he had received some signal. When the nurse came, I told her of the incident. She was as much amused as before.

"You certainly have a mind for mysteries," she laughed, "but if you become too interested you will develop a fever and have a pullback. When you are able to leave us, you can tell the police about the man, who will probably turn out to be a shadow."

I gave the windows but little attention in the daytime after that. The face appeared on the third evening at the same hour, and I felt so sure that a confederate made signals from the sidewalk that I took a convalescent into my confidence. He was an old soldier who was being treated for an old wound and was allowed the run of the place. I told him of the face and the confederate, and he was interested at once. It was arranged that he should be in front of the hospital at half past 8 and watch for the confederate, and luck attended him. He saw a well dressed but evil looking man make signals to the man at the window. The signals were made with a folded newspaper and would not have been noticed by any one not on the watch for them.

"Now, then," said the old soldier as he returned and reported, "we have a mystery on hand. Luck has thrown it in our way that we may make a few goldpieces. Let us work it out together and share the reward."

None of us in the ward had seen a newspaper for a week. They were not interested, but none of the patients seemed to care for outside news. Next morning the soldier went out and purchased the journals for the previous five or six days, and as we looked them over we struck a sensation. A boy 10 years old, the son of a rich iron founder, had been kidnapped and spirited away, and it was stated that the whole police force of Paris was on the quiver. The kidnapping had taken place three days before I saw the face at the window, and I was arguing that our mystery could have nothing to do with it when the soldier said:

"It is at least 12 miles from here where the lad was picked up. He was probably hidden somewhere else for a day or two, but the scent got so hot that he was moved. Don't you fear that he is not in the old house opposite at this very moment?"

"Then we should inform the police?"
"Pooh! We must wait for a reward to be announced. Never slap luck in the face."

On the fourth night and fifth night the face appeared at the window at the usual hour, and the same man made the usual signals. As the police were yet at fault, those signals must have meant that things were all right for the kidnappers. It was now eight days since the boy was taken, and as no trace could be had of him it was believed that he had been killed or taken out of the country. The papers gave it to the police pretty hot, and it was intimated that the father was ready to pay almost any sum to have his child restored.

"Now we are coming nearer to it," said the old veteran. "What the kidnappers have been waiting for is the reward, but we must be ahead of them. You have some money, but I have none. You must give me enough to take me across Paris to the father."

It had come to be understood in our corridor that we had some scheme, but we refused to answer any questions. The soldier started off one morning, and before noon he was holding an interview with the father of the abducted boy. The distracted man was willing to give his last franc, but the soldier stopped at 20,000. He got a promise in writing that he should be paid that sum when the boy was delivered up, and then he went to the police to find if there was a reward for any particularly desperate character. There was. It was believed in police circles that the kidnappers were two escaped convicts, and there was a reward of 10,000 francs on the head of either. When it had been agreed to give him half the reward, the veteran gave our mystery away and then caught the confederate on the street after he had signaled his "All right." Half an hour later they surrounded the old house, broke their way in and not only found the other convict, but found the kidnapped boy a prisoner in one of the rooms. The lad had been fairly well treated, but had been closely guarded every hour since he had come into the man's hands. He had seen only that one man and had been told that he would be set at liberty when his father had paid 250,000 francs as a reward.

The old soldier divided fairly with me, and we were not only enriched by the double reward, but were the means of returning to custody two as desperate criminals as ever broke bars. It was considered an incomprehensible thing around the hospital, and doctor, nurse and fellow patients were never tired of saying:

"How strange! You lie in your bed and look at the windows of an old house across the way, and, lo, there come 15,000 francs rolling in to you!"

Man and Beast.

Nothing can be so terrible to an animal as a human being. There are times when the brute seems to recognize instinctively that man belongs to a higher order of creation and is stricken with a feeling akin to awe in his presence.

In a small African village, some years ago, there was a scare about some leopards which were said to have killed a number of goats. Accordingly two white men, accompanied by several natives, set off to hunt them. Presently they found a place in the long grass where it was evident that one of the brutes had recently lain, for the ground was still warm.

The natives formed a ring round it, and the hunters got their guns ready. After a little while the leopard emerged from the long grass and was fired at and wounded, but not fatally. With a great bound he sprang on one of the white men and brought him to the ground. Holding his victim, he turned and growled savagely at the others.

The natives gave a wild yell of fear, and then like a shot the leopard sprang away. He had not been frightened by the guns, but the yell terrified him.—Youth's Companion.

CREAMERY AND EVAPORATOR

Stock Company Will Operate Both at Yakima City.

A stock company, the trustees of which are O. W. Stoner, N. C. He left Tuesday afternoon for the sound and Portland where he will purchase the necessary machinery.

Mr. Horton said before leaving, "The concern will have a capital stock of about $5000. The details as to the formation of the company have not been entirely determined. Mr. Stoner will have the management of the evaporating and drying part of the establishment."

Mr. Thomas, who is the secretary of the company, is a young man who came to Yakima from Tacoma last fall. He has means and has had considerable business experience.

Fred Ornes says that the following alleged joke is original with himself. A young lady finishes a rapturous symphony on the piano. The young gentleman by her side exclaims in apparently ecstasy of delight that parts of the selection are simply grand. The young lady nods her head in approval and says, "Yes, what parts?" and he answers, "The rests."

F. W. Kayser of the Wenas returned home Wednesday. He has been spending the winter in the east and California. Mr. Kayser is one of the old timers in Yakima county. He came here in 1875. Punishment to Fit the Crime.

A writer in the latest number of the American Journal of Sociology believes he has at last discovered the proper punishment to fit the crime of murder. He says killing the criminal does no good to society, while life imprisonment merely lays an extra burden on the community. He urges that every condemned murderer should be turned over to the doctors to be experimented upon until he dies. The writer makes a long and serious argument on behalf of this idea. He shows how many hundreds of thousands of people are dying annually of disease which might be cured if the scientists had a human experiment station where they could try all sorts of proposed remedies. It does not answer the purpose to try new medicines upon animals, and the idea of being experimented upon is not popular among patients. Here is the opportunity, says the writer, for making the condemned murderer repay a part of the debt he owes society. Let him be experimented upon with new serums and poisons until he dies. The originator of this sociological reform urges that it would be as great a deterrent from crime as hanging, and perhaps he is right on that point, but the public is not likely to take kindly to the proposed human experiment station. Though the author says nothing about vivisection, his plan touches too closely upon the constitutional provision against cruel and unusual punishment.

Hadley and the Emperor.

Discussing at the Old South Church in Boston Sunday night did Dr. Arthur Twining Hadley, president of the Yale University, emit this singular prophecy.

"We shall have an Emperor in Washington within 25 years unless we can create a public sentiment which, regardless of legislation, will regulate the trusts." Such is the soothsaying attributed to Dr. Hadley, attributed incorrectly, we prefer to believe; and we so prefer for these reasons:

First—Social ostracism, the punishment and remedy proposed by Dr. Hadley some time ago for the wicked men who make trusts, has not been tried sufficiently, if it has been tried at all. Surely Dr. Hadley cannot have lost faith so soon in his prescription.

Second—"We shall have an Emperor in 25 years" is a sentence so confident, so exact and so severely mathematical that it must have come or should have come from another distinguished New Haven prophet and moralist, Lieutenant Totten.

Third—According to the history and traditions of Yale for 200 years, no president of that institution has been limp or judgment or loose of tongue, or subject to stoppage of the intellect and fits of hysteria.

We shall hate to believe that the present president of Yale has voluntarily gone into a padded cell with John Jacob Lentz and Gamaliel Bradford.—New York Sun.

Pig Iron and Business.

The monthly record of pig iron production in the current Iron Age shows that the total weekly capacity of the furnaces in blast on March 1 was 292,899 tons, an output that has been surpassed only five times in the history of the iron trade. On December 1, 1899, the weekly production for the first time exceeded 290,000 tons, and reached its highest point on February 1, 1900, when the weekly output was 298,014 tons, or only about 500 tons more than on March 1, 1901. The number of furnaces that are producing this enormous quantity of pig iron is indicative of an important change that is taking place in the iron trade. Under the stimulus of the high prices of a year ago a number of old furnaces were put in blast that could not have been made to pay on an ordinary market. They were of small capacity comparatively, as is shown in the fact that the capacity of the 293 furnaces in blast March 1, 1901 was only 262,643 tons per week, whereas the 292,899 tons of March 1, 1901 were produced by only 248 furnaces. That a smaller number of furnaces are producing a larger tonnage even than a year ago is the result of the completion of many new furnaces of the latest type and of the greatest efficiency. This means that the 292,000 tons of pig iron per week was produced at a lower cost per ton this year than they were last year, so far as furnace cost is concerned, and cheaper pig iron means in the long run cheaper everything else, as well as broader foreign markets.

INDIAN PREACHER

TALKED WITH THE PRESIDENT

Rev. Thos. Pearne returned yesterday morning from Washington, D. C., where he was sent by the Yakima Indians to ask the Great Father to pay for the reservation lands recently awarded to them as a part of their reservation near Mount Adams.

Mr. Pearne is a Yakima Indian, and an old man. He had never before been in the east.

"My people told me," he said to the REPUBLIC yesterday, "that when I went to those great cities, the white men would ill-treat me and rob me. They did not, but everywhere I went they made me their friend. They were interested in me, and did all they could for me."

"In Washington I saw many of the senators, and talked with them. They said they would help us. I called on President McKinley and talked with him for ten minutes. He said he was glad to see me, and told me to tell my people he was their friend. The president is a great man, but the vice president, Mr. Roosevelt, is one of the finest men I ever saw. I talked with him, too. He has lived in the west, and has known many Indians. He is a great man."

"I saw the inauguration ceremonies on March 4. Thousands and hundreds of thousands of people were in the capital. Nothing was ever seen like it before."

"At the Indian department I was not so well treated as I was by the president and the senators, but they will send a commission out this summer to treat with us. I told them that the Indians had a treaty with the Great Father, and that we would hold Uncle Sam to do as he had promised. I think our people will get justice from the government."

A. S. Johnson of Tacoma came over from the sound yesterday. Mr. Johnson was the proprietor of a paint store in this city two or three years ago. He is still in the paint business.

RAILROAD LEGISLATION.

The legislature which has just adjourned failed, as did all of its predecessors, to pass any railroad legislation. This failure was not due to the fact that the railroads corrupted the members of the legislature, but to other facts which the REPUBLIC has often mentioned.

The first of these is that west of the mountains, where two-thirds of the people live and from whence two-thirds of the members come, there is no demand for railroad legislation. Such a demand arises not merely because rates are excessive but because the charges for transportation are so great that the people feel that the railroads take too large a portion of the proceeds of their products. At many points west of the mountains local rates are much higher, considering distances, than they are here, but these points are so close to the market and terminal points that the cost of transportation is comparatively insignificant. Many other points have the benefit of water competition. Under these circumstances it is practically impossible to convince a member from the west side that there is any pressing necessity for railroad legislation. His constituents do not demand it. They do ask for other things, and he is usually satisfied to help the railroads defeat legislation against their interests. The roads will help him to get what his people want.

The other important fact which confronts every man who tries to get a bill reducing rates or regulating railroads through a Washington legislature is that the people living east of the mountains, and who need such legislation, are always demanding it, are themselves divided. The people of Yakima county pay the highest local rates in the state, yet no reformer of rates has ever thought it worth while to consider their interests. The Palouse wheat farmer, whose product is carried cheaper than ours, must have a rate, but he is perfectly willing to get it at our expense. Naturally, we object, and our representatives will always vote against his bill. In this last legislature some of the most influential opponents of the proposed rate reductions were the mill owners of Central and Eastern Washington. In order to get a wheat rate the Palouse farmer would have sacrificed the milling in transit privilege which the millers enjoy. That would have meant practically the destruction of the milling industry, and so the millers lent their influence to defeat the legislation he wanted.

That is about the way attempts to pass railroad laws in our state legislature have begun and ended, and in our opinion there is little hope for the relief Yakima county people desire. Fortunately for us, the prices of our products have been so high in recent years that our farmers have prospered in spite of the high transportation charges they have paid. It is also fortunate, we think, that they have recognized the difficulties in the way of legislation, and instead of making the senseless clamor against railroads that has been an important feature of politics in many of the Eastern Washington counties, they have sought concessions in a sane manner, have secured many, and will secure others. The Northern Pacific railroad company, while it has not been unduly generous to the people of the Yakima valley, has often done them a good turn, and in many ways it now manifests a disposition to deal with them as with friends. We lay this to the fact that our people, even when they had most cause to complain, have shown a desire to be rational and fair.

THE CHARGE WILL NOT LIE.

The appropriations by this legislature amount to $2,850,505. Two years ago the total amount appropriated was $1,809,000. This is an increase of $950,000 and yet the charge of extravagance made by the democratic newspapers against the legislature was economical, and almost parsimonious with the state's money.

An analysis of the various appropriations will convince any candid democrat of the truth of this statement.

The sum of $100,000 was appropriated for deficiencies created by the democratic state administration in the last two years. Allowing for this there is a difference of only $750,000, instead of $950,000. The sum of $350,000 was appropriated for a capitol building. This appropriation is from the state capital fund, and it will not be paid by the taxpayers, but from the proceeds of the lands which the general government gave to the state as a capital grant. Deducting this, the difference is approximately $400,000.

No appropriations for new buildings for the institutions have been made for several years. The time has come when the capacity of almost all of them must be enlarged. The greatly increased population of the state made this a duty which the legislature could not escape.

About $250,000 was set aside for new buildings.

The administration demanded $100,000 more to conduct the various institutions than was given two years ago. This sum was granted only upon the showing that the number of the inmates of the asylums, penitentiary and reform school has grown so that it is absolutely necessary. Indeed, it represents much less than was asked for. Almost every estimate of the board of control was cut down.

An appropriation of $25,000 was made for the Pan-American exposition, and one of $20,000 for interest on state capital warrants.

The increased appropriations are mostly for the schools. No new offices were created by the legislature, and no salaries were materially increased. The amount of money set aside for the conduct of the state's establishment for the next two years is practically the same as for the last two years, leaving necessary improvements out of consideration.

PRESIDENT McKinley will leave Washington for the coast on the 28th of April. He will be accompanied by all the members of his cabinet except Attorney General Griggs. He will visit San Francisco, and then come northward, arriving in Seattle on the 16th of May. He will be in Tacoma on the 17th, and on the evening of that day will start east over the Northern Pacific. It was hoped that Mr. McKinley and party might be induced to make a stop at North Yakima, but unless the itinerary is changed they will pass through here in the night. The secretary of the Commercial club last Saturday wired to Congressmen Jones asking him to invite the president to visit this place, and it is hoped the invitation may be accepted.

REPUBLIC subscribers pay promptly as a rule, and the publisher does not feel the necessity of asking them through the columns of the paper to come forward and liquidate. There are a few, however—a very few—who are in arrears two or three years. He wishes to remind these that time flies rapidly, and almost before they know it their bills must have grown to a good size. If paid yearly, the paper costs but a trifle, and short settlements make the best friends. Every patron can figure out for himself the amount he owes at any time. The date on the address tag opposite his name is the date to which he has paid. The paper costs $1.50 per year, or 12½ cents a month.

WITH two new men on the commission who will work there is a good chance that the next state fair will be better than any held heretofore. A. J. Spawen will be a valuable addition to the board. It is understood that the governor wants to appoint a republican also, and an intimation has been given that he would like to have one recommended. There is no great display of eagerness on the part of the republicans to do this. They are willing to help make the fair a success, and have already contributed something to that end by securing a larger appropriation than has been made before; but they think that if the democratic governor wants republican help in this emergency he ought to be unhampered in choosing it.

ANGELO VANCE FAWCETT of Tacoma, who was once elected mayor of that town by the democrats, who was their candidate at the last election, and who was Rogers' strongest opponent in the last state convention, has announced he will act with the republican party hereafter. He attended the republican primaries at Tacoma last Monday. Mr. Fawcett says he is tired of the democratic policy which is un-American and hostile to the business of the country. The conversion of Mr. Fawcett makes it seem possible that the case of Col. J. D. Medill of North Yakima is not so hopeless as has been supposed.

THE talk that Gov. Rogers threw the Hon. H. J. Snively down in order to secure the passage of the board of control bill seems to be unwarranted. It is true that Snively will not be on the new board, but the governor still consults him, and, in fact, sends for him for that purpose before making important moves. We imagine that the governor will take good care not to throw Mr. Snively down. He owes Mr. Snively too much and doubtless has too much respect for his political sagacity. Mr. Snively is the brains of the Rogers administration now, as he has been for four years.

WE HEAR that the Hon. Nelson Rich has sworn a mighty oath that he will vote the democratic ticket hereafter. So mote it be. The alacrity with which he threw down his friends and the zeal he displayed in his work for the enemy this winter create a strong presumption that he won't experience a new sensation when he does it.

A DISPATCH from Rome says that about 150,000 firearms, ancient and modern, are now being destroyed by fire at the vatican. In this manner the pope signals his abandonment of all projects for regaining temporal power by force.

ERNEST LISTER and Henry Drum will be the democratic members of the new board of control, which will have charge of the state institutions. Lister is as good a man for the place as could be found. He has been secretary of the board of audit and control for four years, and thoroughly understands the duties of the new position. Drum is a wrecked bank president, who was probably appointed by the governor because he is chairman of the state central committee.

THE London Times is in disgrace. Parliament is all worked up, and there was talk for a while of expelling a reporter from the press gallery. The offense of the Times is that it printed the news.

THE REPUBLIC doesn't often give advice, but if it might be allowed to make a suggestion appropriate to the season it would say to every man or woman in the valley who has a home: "Plant trees."

THE governor has made H. J. Snively one of eleven commissioners to take charge of the state's exhibit at the Pan-American exhibition.

THE legislature cost the people of the state $64,000. The anti-slot machine law alone is worth more than that.

THE prospects are good that another winter season will see the business streets of town macadamized.

A Hop Skit.

This is the church with turret and steeple. Wherein assemble all sorts of people. To reach their suppers and have sins forgiven, To reach their suppers the place they call heaven.

This is the hop-house with rustic and gable; Erected with a view to making men able. To drink and carouse and swig steins of beer, Oblivious of sin and of hell, not a fear.

This is the brewery all gray and old. Conspicuous to gather from the uppper his gold; The best house of mammon, so long unrepressed. That sinners have flourished like those who are blest.

This is the hop yard with its poles and its twine. And this is the preacher who never drinks wine. And this is the man who never drinks beer, Though he raises the hops to make other men leer.

And this is the weather all rainy and cold. That the hop house and makes the hops mould; And this is the prayer that the hop-raiser utters, As the deacon in church the contribution box passed.

Ask for your prayers in behalf of my guild. To the end that my coffers may early be filled; That you pray that this rain now descending in torrents, Be stopped for my sake if the moral law warrants.

And this is the answer the man of God gave, I can pray for the sinner but not for the slave. From the manifold blessings that are showered on the world, There is none for the hop-man; he's left in the cold.

This is the church member with hops in the rain. Who lost his year's crop by the Reverend's disdain. And this is the box which by passing around, Keeps minister and prelate above the cold ground.

All empty this box, its corners are dust. The hop raiser comes not, his heart is all rust. And the penitent preacher is sitting in gloom, In his scantily furnished and ill-lighted room.

The moral is this: It has often been told, Though you toil not, nor spin not, you never get gold. For even the cloth has requirements white. And wealth if he gets it brings the preacher delight.

CAPITALISTS ARE COMING

Easterners Who Are Figuring on the Railroad to Sunnyside.

Word was received here this week that the capitalists who are interested in the project to build a railroad to the Sunnyside started from Syracuse, N. Y., last Sunday for Washington. They will go first to Seattle, and will visit the Yakima valley soon after they reach the state.

The time for their coming here is not yet definitely fixed, but it will be sometime during the month of March, as previously stated in the REPUBLIC.

A reporter last week talked with the Seattle representative of these men concerning the project. He said that his clients are prepared to talk business, and to carry out the plans which have been outlined, if they find conditions satisfactory.

How to Make a Lawn.

"Tell the people who want handsome lawns in Yakima to plant bluegrass," said a man who knows the REPUBLIC yesterday. "Clover is not satisfactory. Nearly everybody uses water from the ditches, and it carries seeds of all kinds. The weeds, particularly dandelions, have an easy time with clover. They crowd it out, and presently monopolize the lawn. Bluegrass is harder to start than clover. It takes a good deal of water, and a good deal of care for a year or two, but it makes a tougher sod, and the weeds won't make much headway in it."

The reporter thought this was a snap, and when he got back to the office called George Graham up to put him next. Mr. Graham is a man whose lawn holds the championship belt for dandelions. In reply to the suggestion sent over the phone, Mr. Graham said several things which the reporter will not attempt to quote, as he is not a Latin scholar, and then he asserted:

"Nothing will kill dandelions. You can dig 'em out with a spade, and run 'em through a sausage mill, and next morning when you get up at sunrise to greet over your victory, you'll find 'em doing business at the old stand, and winking their hideous yellow eyes at you. I planted a bluegrass lawn, and the dandelions took it. I have put more hard work and conscientious cussing on that lawn than on anything I ever owned, and it's a total failure. Tell your bluegrass friend to come again."

O. B. Laird has returned from Centralia and will again take up his residence at the old town. Mr. Laird was cashier for the Northern Pacific at Centralia, and was well satisfied with his position. There was too much rain on the other side for him, however, and he is glad to be back here again. He will farm this summer.

At a meeting of Sunday school workers, at North Yakima, March 16th, it was decided to have a county Sunday school convention, to be held in the Baptist church, North Yakima, March 26 and 27. Rev. W. C. Merritt, secretary State Sunday School Association, will be present. This will be a mass convention, and it is important in the interest of Sunday school work throughout the county that there should be a good attendance of Sunday school workers.

She says Electric Bitters are just splendid for female troubles; that they are a grand tonic and invigorator for weak, run down women. No other medicine can take its place in our family." Try them. The contributions for the memorial fountain to Company E received by Lieutenant Lemon in the I. H. Dills clothing store amount to $31.50. The sum collected from the boxes in the other stores is $1 62, a total $33 12. The question has been asked if it is not the intention to have the fountain erected in Seattle, but of course such a thing has never entered the minds of the members of the Red Cross society as it is to be a memorial to Company E and belongs at home.

"I would cough nearly all night long," writes Mrs. Chas. Applegate, of the Alexandria, Ind., "and could hardly get any sleep. MEMORIAL TO COMPANY E

John F. Johnston Has Designed a Fountain to be Placed in a Public Square.

The design of the memorial fountain to the fallen heroes of Company E, was finished this week by John F. Johnston, who is associated with H. A. Smull in the Central Washington Marble and Granite Works. The monument is to be 24 feet, 6 inches high and will be made of Washington granite. Mr. Johnston estimates the cost at between $4000 and $5000.

On the pedestal will be carved the names of the men who fell or died in the service and above the inscriptions will be the military crest of the company, crossed rifles with the letter E. The pedestal will be surmounted by the figure of a soldier holding a sword in his right hand and supporting a flag with his left. The design places the emblem of the Red Cross society in a conspicuous position. Near the base of the monument is carved a canteen, out of which water issues and flows into a stone receptacle in the shape of a drum.

The design or plan of the Memorial fountain drawn with pen and ink by Mr. Johnston is a work of art in itself. It is about two feet in height and is an excellent representation of a complete fountain. As an exceptionally fine specimen of penmanship it is remarkable, and at the distance of a few feet the picture presents the appearance of a street engraving. Each straight line and curve is carefully and accurately drawn. The shading also assists greatly in bringing out the salient features of the design.

Lieut. W. L. Lemon, who has charge of the memorial fountain subscription books said, "We are much pleased with the design as presented and we shall use every effort to have it become a reality. The contributions have been coming in well but later they will come much faster. Everything possible will be done to interest the people all over the county in the matter as the fountain will not belong alone to the people of North Yakima. Later on we will give entertainments and use many other devices to raise the necessary funds, and I am confident that we shall meet with success."

Deputy Sheriff Sindall returned Tuesday from Walla Walla, where he had gone to take E. B. Mindenhall to the penitentiary. Mr. Sindall says that the prospects are fine for an immense crop of wheat this year as there has been plenty of rain and the season has advanced steadily and has had no set-backs in the way of cold weather. He says too that a day or two before he was there one of the convicts in the penitentiary escaped but was captured again in a few hours. The man was the last one in the last squad of men leaving the jail mill at dusk. He slipped behind an open gate, climbed over the wall, crawled along a fence for a distance and secreted himself in a hen house. The guards reported one man missing and a search was immediately begun. Two young bloodhounds which they are training were put on the trail and followed the scent but that line of search was not carried out. The convict secured laborer's clothes, went to an opium joint in China town, and later went to the fire engine house where he asked for an old hat, which led to his arrest.

A Good Cough Medicine for Children.

"I have no hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says F. P. Moran, a well known and popular baker, of Petersburg, Pa. "We have given it to our children when troubled with bad coughs, also whooping cough, and it has always given perfect satisfaction. It was recommended to me by a druggist as the best cough medicine for children as it contained no opium or other harmful drugs." Sold by Quitt and Ayres.
