Librarian, Danville Public Library,
Danville, Indiana.

Dear Librarian:

It occurred to me that perhaps the Danville Library would be interested in ordering a copy of Drummers and Dreamers, written by a Hendricks County "native son."

I don't recall that you had a collection of Indiana authors, but in the event you do, I am sending the circular, which if ordered, may be returned to me, and I will see it reaches the publisher. This book will not be issued until spring, and no advance payment would be necessary. The publisher would notify you in due time.

I was born south of Danville in 1908 and was graduated from the old Towel school, obtained my early interest in Indians by finding arrowheads on the old farm.

Although he died a few years ago, another Danville man had vital connections with the Indians of this region. He was Evan Estep, who was agent of the Yakima Nation (a tribe of some 4,000 Indians) until his retirement a number of years ago. Mrs. Estep died not too long afterwards.

Sincerely
