

MODERN JONAHS --- These soldiers of the U.S. Army's 4th Infantry Division seem about to repeat the Biblical saga of the old man and the whale as they prepare to enter the yawning jaws of a C-130 "Hercules". This troop-carrier aircraft from Sewart Air Force Base, Tennessee will carry them from Gray Army Air Field, Ft. Lewis, Washington, to the Yakima Firing Center as part of "Exercise Dry Hills", a joint maneuver held to increase the effectiveness of Army-Air Force cooperation.

(OFFICIAL USAF PHOTO)

AERIAL COVER is provided by an F-100D Super Sabre from Cannon AFB, New Mexico, as a column of tanks moves to the "front" during "Exercise Dry Hills", a joint Army-Air Force exercise held at Yakima, Washington, during May. F-101 Voodoo reconnaissance airplanes from Shaw AFB, South Carolina are participating. Units from Shaw AFB, South Carolina and Sewart AFB, Tennessee, are also key members of the Tactical Air Team which is participating in the exercise.

(OFFICIAL USAF PHOTO)

TACTICAL TEAMMATES --- F-100D Super Sabre fighter-bombers from Cannon Air Force Base, New Mexico, team up with U.S. Army field forces in a show of preparedness during "Exercise Dry Hills" at the Yakima Firing Center, Washington. The training and experience gained from maneuvers such as this help keep U.S. military strength able to resist aggression the world over.

(OFFICIAL USAF PHOTO)

WHERE JEEPS FEAR TO TREAD --- This C-123 "Provider" from Sewart AFB, Tenn., is able to land and take-off from terrain over which even the mighty jeep finds rough going. The soldiers are members of the 4th Infantry Division, Ft. Lewis, Washington and are participating in "Exercise Dry Hills" near Yakima, Washington, with units of the United States Air Force's Tactical Air Command.

(OFFICIAL USAF PHOTO)

