

Wapato's Public Library

Few people are yet aware that there is a public library. A room in the DeVries building is given over for this purpose and is being conducted under the auspices of the Woman's Club. Some time ago a dance was given for the benefit of the library and the proceeds are now being devoted to the purchasing of new books for that institution. 12 new volumes are already here and 20 more are on the way. A new case for their reception has also been bought. Mrs. DeVries, librarian, has succeeded in renting the new copyright books for one cent per day. The selection is very complete, there being books for all ages. An institution such as this fills a long felt need in Wapato and the general public should show their appreciation of the Woman's Club's efforts by accepting the privileges offered. The new books are of a kind that will prove interesting. The library is open every Saturday afternoon so if you have a little time that day at your disposal go up stairs and read.
