Dear Librarian:

Enclosed is a circular concerning a book it appeared to me you might wish to order.

This contains three chapters dealing with the Rev. James H. Wilbur, a Methodist missionary, who came from New York to the Northwest in 1849 and as you may know, is rated as one of the great missionaries of the Northwest, although he was later an Indian Agent.

In case you wish to order this book, a circular is enclosed for your use and it should be returned to me. The book will not be issued until the spring, but advance orders of this type, which require no advance payment, enable the publisher to ascertain the number to publish, and give me a "pin point" idea of advances.

In event you know of another source that would be interested, I am enclosing additional circulars, but library discounts, such as you are entitled to, could not be given in individual cases.

Sincerely
