

PROPOSED HIGH LINE CANAL.

Yakima Development Co. Organized to Float the Big Proposition of Messrs.
Judson & Nares—Enthusiastic Meeting Held to Forward the Proposition.

As was mentioned in the DEMOCRAT last week a large proposition is on foot having for its object the reclamation of all the desert lands left in the Kittitas and Yakima valleys.

On Friday of last week articles of incorporation of the Yakima Development company were filed with the county auditor. The capital stock of this new corporation is placed at $300,000. The principal place of business is to be at North Yakima.

A public meeting was called hastily Friday afternoon and assembled that evening at the Commercial Club with a good attendance of business men. The meeting was called to order by President Cornet who called on Edward Whitson to explain the object of the gathering. That gentleman made a brief address in which he stated that Mr. Judson, Mr. Nares and himself were associated together for the purpose of demonstrating the practicability of constructing a high line canal through Kittitas and Yakima counties which would have a sufficient capacity to irrigate four or five hundred thousand acres of land situated between the Yakima and Columbia rivers. This would necessarily mean the construction of huge reservoirs in the Cascade mountains and altogether would mean an outlay of that would approximate three million dollars. Nothing would be done however, towards building the big canal until it was thoroughly demonstrated that the plan is practicable. This could not be ascertained until surveys had been made, which would require a number of months.

Mr. L. A. Nares of Fresno, Cal., was next called upon for a speech. Mr. Nares has the reputation of being a very thorough irrigation expert, having constructed several successful canals in Central California. Mr. Nares in his speech covered the ground very thoroughly and made a splendid impression on all who heard him. He said in effect that the object and purpose of the newly organized development company was to exploit the situation, determine the most feasible route, the probable cost of the proposed canal, the cost of building the reservoirs, etc. If, after these things had been determined the scheme was found practicable a new company would be organized to construct the canal, and said the speaker, "we know where to get the money to do it with." He and his associates, he said, had been given an option on all the railway lands in the two counties susceptible of irrigation from the proposed canal. This option we never would have got, continued the speaker, only for the fact that we were able to show the N. P. board of directors that we are able to command the vast amount of money necessary to complete such a gigantic enterprise. Mr. Nares said that they came here asking nothing of the people of Yakima but their good will. Your negative support, said he, is all that we want.

Mr. Judson next addressed the meeting, going over much the same ground covered by the preceding speaker. Mr. Judson said that he was interested in 38,000 acres of land in the Moxee and therefore the question of getting water on that land was a most vital one to him. He spoke highly of the Yakima country, of its magnificent climate, its rich soil and the prosperity that he found here. He was in a position at St. Paul to direct homeseekers this way and proposed to do it in the future. After the conclusion of Mr. Judson's address short talks were made by Edward Whitson, Ira P. Englehart, Dr. G. A. E. Lee, and others in which the proposition of building the high line canal was warmly endorsed. Both Mr. Nares and Mr. Judson left here the following day. Mr. Nares went direct to Los Angeles to hold a conference with Mr. Newell, chief engineer of the U. S. irrigation bureau, the object of Mr. Nares being to secure the co-operation of Mr. Newell in the preliminary work. Mr. Nares expects to return here in about three weeks at which time he hopes to be ready to put a corps of engineers at work. A great deal of enthusiasm has been manifested over the proposed canal in this city and there is certainly reason why there should be. If the high line canal should be built on the line talked of the result would be to make about 150,000 acres of sage brush land tributary to this city blossom as the rose.

Buckwheat can be Grown Here.

That buckwheat can be successfully grown here has been demonstrated by J. M. Stout of the west side, an old resident here. Monday he brought into this office a sample of that grain five feet high that was well loaded with buckwheat. Mr. Stout has experimented with that cereal considerably and has learned that the proper time to plant it is in the spring of the year, instead of after harvest as was the custom in the eastern states. He has raised 40 bushels to the acre.

Tobacco is another crop that he has made a success of raising and curing here contrary to the general belief. A sample that he sent to the Page Co. of Richmond, Va., was reported by that firm as "silk wrapper, worth 75 cents per pound."

Large Trees Uprooted.

Recent windstorms, owing to the damp condition of the ground, have blown down many large pines through the mountains, taking them out by the roots. Pleasure seekers are cautioned to be careful where the pitch their tents while out fishing or hunting.

THE RESERVATION CANAL.

Work to Commence Soon—Sealed Proposals from Contractors to be Opened August 11.

Engineer W. H. Redman informs the DEMOCRAT that the dirt will be flying by perhaps the middle of next month on the new reservation canal. Supt. Lynch having received instructions from the department to call for sealed proposals from contractors to dig the first 4 1/2 miles of the main canal including the head works in Union Gap. The bids are to be opened Aug. 11.

In addition to the 4 1/2 miles of main canal which it is estimated can be built for the $30,000 set aside for this purpose by the secretary of the interior to be spent this year, about 12 miles of lateral will be constructed or as much of it as can be finished this season. The work on the lateral ditch will be done by Supt. Lynch with Indian labor, the secretary not seeming to realize what any western man could tell him, that he has chosen the slowest and most expensive method possible to get this part of the work done.

Special Agent Code says that there is no other irrigation project anywhere in the west that will at all compare with the proposition on the reservation for cheapness and easy work, that is to say in comparison to the amount of land of land that can be covered. Mr. Redman with the figures at hand, estimates that with the expenditure of $75,000, that a ditch can be built nearly as large as the Sunnyside canal, that will cover 50,000 acres of as fine land as "lays out of doors." This, of course, refers to the main canal.

This work, which will doubtless be in progress within a few weeks will give employment to several hundred men and teams.

Mysterious Death.

Jay Nichols, of Ellensburg, was found dead in bed in a room of the White House, one of the many houses in the tenderloin district, Sunday morning, the cause of death being in doubt, whether it was murder or suicide. Investigation by Sheriff Grant indicates that the man was murdered, but the deceased by his own words the evening before his death, prevents an action for murder against any person, unless it should be a case of "rogues falling out."

At one of the saloons Nichols pulled a gun and told those standing about him that he was going to kill himself at 12 o'clock, and at 12:10 Sunday Morning he was a corpse with a bullet through his head. A peculiar and suspicious feature is that there were no powder marks on his face or about the wound. When the body was found the revolver was in his pocket with one loaded shell, an empty shell and three empty chambers in the cylinder. On a bureau near the bed were three loaded shells and two empty ones. Before going to the White House every chamber of the gun held a load. The condition of the shells, no powder marks on the face, the revolver in the pocket and other incidents lead to the belief that there was foul play.

Sheriff Grant arrested all the inmates of the White House, the men of whom will be prosecuted under the new law prohibiting a man from living with a prostitute, and the women will be fined and ordered out of town.

The murdered man's wife came down from Ellensburg and had the remains interred in Tahoma cemetery.

State Fair Ground Improvements

There is "something doing" at the fair grounds. A force of men are at work improving the grove by placing benches through it, trimming the underbrush and otherwise putting it in shape for a first class picnic grounds. Hitching posts will be set around the edge of the grove and in the future no horses will be allowed among the trees.

A needed and an appreciated change will be the placing of a tank and pump at the well from which a pipe will lead to hydrants in different parts of the grounds.

Excursion rates have been secured on nearly every rail road in the state.

The Yakima Central

Some have supposed that Mr. McNaught had given up his railway scheme but we are able to announce on authority that the engineer who has been expected so long is now on his way from New York and Mr. McNaught will join him: here next week when the whole scheme will be gone over and the matter of the railroad definitely decided. It behooves our people to show these gentlemen every attention. Now is an opportunity to show up the country.

The most complete establishment of its kind in the northwest is the cold storage plant recently erected for Moran & Siegel by John Sinnok, of Tacoma, at a cost of about $3000.

The establishment is located on the flat at the east end of D street. The building is 52 by 60 on the ground floor, the height of the main building being 20 feet, and contains rooms for storage, slaughtering, making sausage, rendering lard, smoking meats, salting hides and the engine room. The entire plant is equipped with the most modern machinery to be secured.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF NORTH YAKIMA.

DEMOCRATS cannot fail to note the friendliness manifested by the republican organs generally for Grover Cleveland and the alacrity with which they rush to the defence of the "Sage of Princeton" on every occasion when his last administration is criticized from a democratic standpoint. For instance, Bryan's great speech delivered at Chicago last week, wherein he stated that the greatest stumbling block to democratic success in 1896 and 1900 did not consist of any particular plank in the platform of those years but in the odiferous record bequeathed to the party by the last democratic administration. And despite the fact that the Democratic National convention of 1896, by an overwhelming vote denounced and repudiated the democracy personified by Cleveland, yet there was no disguising the fact that the party as a whole was forced to shoulder the responsibility for Cleveland's mistakes as well as his undemocratic financial policy—a policy that led the country over a disastrous road as most of us well remember. Without the burden of Cleveland's sins of omission and commission to answer for the democratic party probably would have won its fight in 1896.

No sooner had this opinion been expressed by Bryan than nearly every republican editorial hack writer in the country began to bitterly assail and denounce him in the most vituperative and insulting language at the same time holding up the ex president as a sort of Saint, in great contrast to the way in which they treated him when he was president.

Intelligent readers will not be deceived by such horseplay. The republican editors instead of aiding Cleveland and the reorganizers to again secure the control of the democratic party are instead injuring the chances of the monopoly element. When Bryan made the statements imputed to him he simply told the truth and in the most forcible way and no amount of abuse and vilification on the part of the hack writers can change or obscure that fact.

These wise men who assume to instruct the public ought to devote a little time to the study of the election returns for the year 1894. The overwhelming republican majority in every northern state that year ought to convince any thinking man of the public dissatisfaction with the Cleveland administration. And that was two years before the democratic party in national convention denounced the acts of that administration as being not only undemocratic, but un-American.

Mrs. JAMES G. BLAINE, widow of the Plumed Knight of Maine, as Col. Ingersoll called him, died last week at the old family home in Augusta, aged 76 years. Mrs. Blaine was a strong minded, ambitious woman who exercised no little influence in politics as well as in history. Her disappointment over her husband's defeat in 1884 is said to have embittered her life. Blaine's refusal to run in 1888 is said to have been due to the opposition of his wife. The situation was different in 1892. In that year President Harrison refused to promote Col. Coppinger, a son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Blaine to the rank of brigadier general over the heads of numerous officers who had claims of seniority. For this reason Mrs. Blaine quarreled with Harrison and then to the surprise of the country it was announced that Mr. Blaine, ill and broken down as he was, was a candidate for the republican nomination against Harrison. The result is history. Blaine met with ignominious defeat which marked his retirement from politics and probably hastened his death.

Mrs. Blaine was a good woman, intensely loyal to her family and friends. But that she exercised an evil influence on and to a great extent blighted the political career of her brilliant husband can hardly be questioned.

Leo XIII, now lying dead in the Vatican, will occupy a prominent place in history. He was one of the world's greatest men. He was adapted both by nature and by training to fill the lofty position that he occupied for a quarter of a century. He was a statesman and a shrewd diplomat as well as a prelate. He was at the same time very much of a philosopher and very liberal in his views, much more so in fact than any of his predecessors. Withal, he was as democratic in manner as any pope could be expected to be. It was not alone the greatness of the man but the human qualities that he possessed that endeared him to men of all creeds and of all nations.

The hot sweltering weather of dog days are now here and those who can are finding a cool place to go. Some seek shady retreats in the mountains where they may commune with nature and angle for the elusive trout, while others go to the ocean beach to refresh themselves in the arms of old Neptune and listen to the sad sea waves.

It is announced that Senator Ed. Hamilton of Tacoma will make a contest for Cushman's seat in congress. Congressman Cushman as well as Gov. McBride seems to be marked for slaughter by the railroad push. "Cush," however, will doubtless make Hamilton feel that he has been to a fight before he surrenders.

Mrs. HARRIET LANE JOHNSON, niece of President James Buchanan, who died recently, directed in her will that the sum of $100,000 from her estate be used for the erection of a monument to perpetuate the memory of her distinguished uncle. The monument is to be erected at the birth place of Buchanan, Mercersburg, Pa.

The proposition of the newly incorporated Yakima Development company to irrigate some four or five hundred thousand acres of desert land in the Kittitas and Yakima valleys is by all odds the greatest project in the irrigation line that the people of central Washington have yet had to consider.

As may be seen by reference to our news columns of this and last week, the matter of investigating the feasibility and probable expense of the construction of a high line canal designed to redeem the immense acreage of now barren lands between the Yakima and Columbia rivers is now in progress. It is, of course, entirely premature to announce at this time that the canal will be built. Reports of this character have been sent out to the daily press from here, but the facts in the case do not at this time warrant such a confident statement. It would be good if it were true, but unfortunately it is not and the circulation of such a report is apt to breed mischief.

The promoters of this scheme are perfectly frank as to their intentions. They do not say positively at this time that they intend to construct the big ditch. What they do say is that they are investigating the feasibility and probable cost of such an undertaking as well as the amount of water that can be secured and the aggregate amount of land that can be covered. These necessary facts cannot, of course, be known until after complete surveys have been made in addition to an investigation of existing rights in the river, a labor that will require a number of months to ascertain. If the information thus gathered is satisfactory these gentlemen say that they will then be ready to do business.

The great benefits to be derived by North Yakima and this entire section through the construction of the high line canal can well be imagined. It is to be hoped that the proposition will be found to be practicable and will go through to completion. Anything that our people can do to facilitate the matter ought to be done and done promptly.

RADIUM is proving to be a useful as well as an ornamental mineral. Experiments conducted recently by Dr. Davidson, a leading physician of New York, have demonstrated the fact that radium rays would cure cancer without leaving a scar.

The great power hidden in a speck of radium is a puzzle to the scientific world. So powerful are the rays of light thrown off by this new substance that it is said that a person shut up in a room where there is but a very small particle of the newly discovered substance would soon be utterly blinded by it. A very small amount of it carefully wrapped and placed in a vest pocket burned the skin of the man who carried it. In the experiment mentioned above success was attained by radium after the X rays had utterly failed.

SAM PILES, the eloquent railroad attorney of Seattle, announced last Saturday that he would be a candidate for U. S. Senator, to succeed Addison G. Foster. Well, of course, and why not? Sam has as good a right to run as any of them if he is a corporation lawyer. Humphries for governor, Piles for senator and many more to be heard from. King county, as usual bids fair to be cursed with a multiplicity of candidates.

A MONTANA man killed his brother, eloped with the widow, was convicted of murder, made his escape, and at latest accounts was being chased by a mob of hostile intent. True love may not run smoothly, but it sometimes runs fast.—Tacoma Ledger.

Yet another son has come to bless and smooth old age for Grover Cleveland. Fortunate man! This is better than being president.

Bryan Castigates Reorganizers.
Hon. Wm. J. Bryan was orator of the day at a democratic picnic given last Saturday in one of the parks at Chicago. In his great speech Mr. Bryan said in part:

"Surely, if there ever was a time when the preaching of the democratic doctrine ought to be opportune, now is the time. The character of our party is to be determined by the manner in which it meets an opportunity, and also by the ideal that dominates it. Will our party hesitate or take counsel of its fears? Will it abandon its championship of the people's interests in the hope of conciliating relentless foes, of purchasing a few offices with campaign contributions, of carrying with them an obligation to be made good out of the pockets of the people?"

"The democratic party must appeal to the democratic sentiment of the country and this country is far wider than any party. Wherever the question has been submitted in such a way that it could be acted upon independently, there has always been an overwhelming majority in favor of that which was democratic, and our party can appeal successfully to this democratic spirit if we but convince the people of our earnestness and our fidelity to those principles."

"We are handicapped just now by the fact that the last democratic administration that we had was more subservient to corporation dictation than any republican administration that had preceded it, and the record of that administration has been a millstone about the party's neck ever since. The influence exerted by Wall Street over the administration's policy, the use of patronage to reward those who betrayed their constituents and the employment of the most reprehensible of republican methods, made the administration a stench in the nostrils of the people and kept in the republican party many who were disgusted at that party's course."

"The odium which Mr. Cleveland's second administration brought upon the party, which elected him, did more to defeat the party than any one plank of the Chicago platform, or even than all the planks that were most severely criticized. But for the repudiation of the administration it would have been impossible to make any campaign at all, and even the repudiation, thorough and complete as it was, could not completely disinfest the party."

"The greatest menace that the party has to meet to day is not the probability but the possibility of the party's return to the position that it occupied from 1892 to 1896. This danger is not so imminent as the corporation controlled papers make it appear, but insofar as it threatens, it paralyzes the energies of the party and nullifies its promises. Such a return would indicate a degravation of the party's ideals and a perversion of its purposes.

"If the democratic party will stand erect, face the future with confidence, defend the rights of the people and protect their interests wherever attacked—whether the attack comes from the financiers, the monopolists, the tariff barons or from the imperialists—it can look with confidence for a revolution of sentiment that will give us a victory worth having, and this victory, when it comes, will not end as the victory of 1892 did, in the demoralization of the party, but in the building up of a democratic organization which will deal aggressively with all the evils of government and find its bulwark in the affections and confidence of the masses."

HE "NAMED NAMES."

A Correspondent Who Violated the German Journalistic Code.

The American newspaper thinks it essential to make clear the source of important statements. An interview with a nameless statesman whose identity cannot even be guessed from the context is put down in American newspaper parlance as "a fake." But the opposite method is the method in the continental countries of Europe. There it is an unpardonable offense to name your informant.

This knowledge I purchased at rather an inconvenient price when I had been but three months in Berlin as correspondent of the American Associated Press. It was in the early autumn of 1894. Bismarck's successor in the unsafe chair of the imperial chancellery, General Count Caprivi, had resigned early in the evening after a stormy meeting with the kaiser. At 10 o'clock that night Caprivi accorded me an interview. He did not request that his name be withheld. In my ignorance I quoted him in my cablegram that night. His talk to me had been brief, but to the point. He had told me of the causes that had led to his loss of favor with the kaiser and to his retirement.

But I had unwittingly violated one of the first principles in the code of German journalistic ethics. And I reaped a whirlwind of abuse for it. "That news is bogus—must be bogus, you know," said the German newspapers and their correspondents, "for, don't you see, he has quoted Caprivi." For years the reputation thus earned made my work doubly hard. Whenever I happened into one of the departments a whisper ran round, "That is the man who names names!" I never quite got over this during my long stay in Berlin.—Wolf von Schierbrand in World's Work.

THE BABY OYSTER.

Its Habits In Its Home on the Floor of the Deep.

The oyster is most interesting during babyhood, says Charles Frederick Stansbury in Outing. Its manner of making a set suggests the sublime confidence of childhood. It prefers to adhere to odd objects, and its childish taste in this direction often encompasses its destruction. If an old boot, a waterlogged box, a brick, a lump of coal or piece of discarded and fractured crockery lies upon the bed of the ocean where a set is in progress, the young oysters or eggs will cluster thick and fast upon it, showing a very decided preference as against the surrounding natural anchorage. I have even seen a pair of corsets that could never again hope to imprison the waist of lovely woman entirely covered with a set of young oysters. Thus does Nature pay her tribute to Art.

A favorite foundation for life adopted by sensible young oysters is upon the shells of their ancestors long since defunct, and for this reason many planters strew the bottom of their holdings with such "clutch" in the hope that the wandering ova will stop and there adopt a local habitation.

Lying thus upon the floor of the deep, the young oyster begins to grow, and in doing so invariably points his little "bill" heavenward, an attitude that he maintains throughout life if undisturbed. As he grows older his shell is often used by the flora of the sea as an anchorage, and thus he is apt to be found enveloped in the foliage of the curious oyster sponge, coraline, red and green sea lettuce and other quaint species of algae and sea grasses. The dogwinkle, too, and his cousin, the periwinkle, are very fond of attaching their eggs to the shell of the oyster, each one by a delicate stem, causing it to appear like some curious sea flower.

The Soldier's Last March.

Why is it that the most solemn service ever devised by man, the stately hush of the vast cathedral, the imposing robes, the stained glass windows, the pealing organ, all fade into insignificance beside that soul stirring, simple act—the trumpeting out of "taps" over the body of a dead soldier? No man who has ever heard it, either on the field of battle, at the quiet army post or in the haven of these weak and shattered units of the Grand Army of the Republic, ever forgets it. For the bugle notes seem to take into their own all embracing cadence the tears, the memories, the shattered hopes and the long farewell.—John R. Rathorn in Scribner's.

Saw His Finish.

"Are you preparing to die?" asked the elderly female of the condemned prisoner.
"No, ma'am, I ain't," replied the victim of circumstances. "But the feller in the next cell can stand a lot of talk. You might call on him."—Chicago News.

A Swift Repentance

I was cashier of Scott's state bank, and Mr. Scott and the public had every confidence in me. Nevertheless I determined to avail myself of my opportunities to rifle the safe and skip out.

Between the 4th and 11th of September I arranged the details for my flight and concluded to work them out on the night of the 13th. On that evening at half past 5 the night watchman notified me that his wife had died. I excused him from watching that night.

At 7 o'clock I went to the bank, pulled down the shades, lighted the gas and in the course of twenty minutes had packed every dollar in the vaults into a satchel provided for the purpose. This satchel I placed on a chair outside the railing and had sat down for a smoke when there was a rap at the door. I knew it was one of our force, but hardly expected to see the president himself.

"I expected it was you," he said as he entered; "always the last to go. You are working too hard and must take a rest. At a meeting of the board today it was decided to give you a month's leave and a gift of $500 cash."

I don't remember what I said in reply, but I do remember that something like horror seized upon me at the idea of my own baseness. Right here within reach of his hand was the money I intended to flee with, and yet he was lavish in his praise of my integrity. He remained only a brief time, and soon after his departure I went outside to walk about and plan a little. I hadn't given up the idea of robbery and flight, but a still, small voice was whispering to me when a hand was laid on my arm, and I turned to confront the leading merchant of the town.

"Look here," he said as we walked along arm in arm, "I've always done business with Gleason because I found everything all right, but I'm going to begin with you tomorrow. Gleason is as good as gold himself, but I don't fancy his new cashier. He's a high roller, I hear, and some day he may turn up missing with all the boodle he can carry. No fear of that in your case."

And I had $107,000 all packed up and was only waiting for train time to become a robber.

"Everybody is speaking in your praise," he continued, "and you deserve all that is said. Just keep a level head and you'll find the road to honor and wealth."

When he left me, I had to lean against a dead wall for support. The sound of his footsteps was still in my ears when I suddenly felt that I was saved. There had been a terrible struggle of conscience, but right had triumphed at last. I was pulling myself together to return to the bank when a woman accosted me by name and said:

"How lucky I happened to see you. I was on my way down to Black's to see if he wouldn't take charge of this package till tomorrow. It's money I got only two hours ago—$2,000."

"Come in here, and I'll give you a receipt."

"Never mind that. We all know you and trust you."

Her parting words gave me a shiver. How little they knew me. I had one more trial to undergo. Almost at the door of the bank I met two business men of high standing who were holding an animated conversation.

"Heard the news?" queried one as I came up.

"What is it?"

"You remember the clerk in my brother's office in Philadelphia who skipped out two years ago with $30,000? Well, he's been overhauled. He went to Peru, no doubt expecting to have grand times. It seems that everybody soon knew he was a thief, and he was an object of contempt. He wandered about, always a marked man, and at last was so overcome with shame and degradation that he asked to be arrested and sent back. He was despised, insulted and plundered, and he did not have one hour's solid comfort out of his funds. He will go to prison for ten or fifteen years, and he might as well die then. Say, isn't it a curious thing that men will so destroy themselves?"

"Take your own case," added the other as he placed a hand on my shoulder. "You are young, but respected, trusted and honored and on the sure road to wealth. You might crib $100,000 from the bank and get away, but would that compensate you for the sacrifice? No. Even a million wouldn't. I tell you, the man who has got to outlive himself to enjoy his plunder must see days when he would almost give his life to be set back in the position he once held."

I passed on into the bank and carefully locked the door behind me. My knees were so weak that I had to rest for a good twenty minutes. Even my hair was sopping wet with perspiration.

When I felt strong enough, I carried the satchel to the vault, opened the doors and replaced the money, and it was not until the iron doors were locked again that I felt sure I had won.

There would be no watchman that night. I had planned it so. I took off my coat, kicked off my shoes and made myself comfortable in an armchair. I did not feel sleepy, but when the day porter came at 7 in the morning to relieve the watchman I was sound asleep. It had got to the ears of the officers that I had sacrificed my night because of the death of the watchman's wife, and the president feelingly said:

"Bless the dear boy! He's a man out of a million."

Am I still cashier? Well, never mind about that. I am still regarded as an honest man, and I doubt if you could make any of my business friends believe that I had ever been tempted for an instant.

THE RELIEF AND AID COMMITTEEMAN

(Original.)

In the rooms of the relief and aid committee to distribute funds contributed to sufferers by the great Chicago fire of 1871 Edward Tucker, a committeeman, sat writing.

"Can you tell me how to secure aid?" Tucker looked up into the kindly, patient face of an old woman who wore a faded, threadbare dress that many years before must have been costly.

"Have you been burned out, madam?" he asked.

"Well, no, not exactly, but we are somewhat straitened in our circumstances. My husband was a banker. He died many years ago and left us without anything to live on, and" (confidentially) "I wasn't brought up right. My father had been rich. I couldn't take hold for myself."

"What was your husband's name?" "Plumber—Ralph B. Plumber of Plumber & Chubb, bankers."

"You knew him?" "Yes. That is many years ago. He was a great deal older than I and rich. I was a poor boy then. Give me your address, Mrs. Plumber."

She gave him an address which Tucker noted, and the old lady withdrew. Tucker took a checkbook from his desk and wrote a check. Then stepping to a man who sat at another desk he said:

"Exchange check for that, please, payable to Mrs. Ralph B. Plumber."

The check was duly made out, and Tucker went to his room to prepare for dinner, which he usually took at his club. As he entered he sighed. No one was ever in the room but himself and a servant. It was a dreary place, though it was handsomely furnished. Tucker sat down and brooded for awhile, as he had brooded many a time before, on the fact that with all his means for the procurement of a home he had no home. Why was he not married? There were a dozen women among the wealthy people with whom he moved who had angled for him. Perhaps it was because they angled that he did not care to marry them. Presently he arose languidly and made his toilet. He dined alone at his club and after dinner set out to find Mrs. Plumber.

He was admitted by a girl of twenty-two or twenty-three years of age, bearing the same impress of refinement as her mother. She resembled her father, especially as Tucker had known him when he was perhaps ten years older than the daughter was now.

"Your mother called this morning at the relief and aid committee's room, and I have called to examine the case," said Tucker in a kindly tone. He was introduced into the living room, where Mrs. Plumber received him with astonishment, and he sat down on a chair with holes in the seat almost large enough to let him through. He asked Mrs. Plumber about her resources; then, apparently satisfied that it was a proper case for the committee to relieve, took out its check for $500. Mrs. Plumber, to whom he handed it, was too dazed at receiving a check at all to notice the amount and turned it over to her daughter. Margaret Plumber glanced at it and handed it back to Tucker, with the remark that there must be some mistake. It was some time before he could convince the two of the extreme liberality of the committee in their case.

Tucker called often; every time bringing a check signed by the cashier of the relief and aid society till the abode of the Plumbers was painted and furnished and their wardrobes renewed.

He took Margaret Plumber out to amusements and to drive and spent many an evening with her at her home. One evening he brought a check from the relief and aid society which Margaret declined. "There is no further occasion," she said, "for this assistance. I have been studying shorthand and my typewriting and have finished my studies and secured a situation. Now I wish, Mr. Tucker, that you would give me some hint as to how I may show you my appreciation of your kindly interest which has resulted in these checks."

"There is but one way and that would be asking too much."

"Name it, and I promise you it shall be done."

"If not repugnant to you."

"Nothing I can do for you would be repugnant to me."

"You will not think me selfish?"

"I am sure you could never be selfish. Come, tell me what is this return?"

"Marry me."

The girl looked at him as though she did not understand.

"Marry you?"

"No, never mind. I'm too old—and prosaic. I've not been brought up in the refined way you have. I had to scratch when very young. And, now I'm on my shortcomings, I may as well confess that the relief and aid money you have received did not come from the committee at all. It is merely a return of money loaned me by your father when I was sixteen years old and a clerk in his bank. He advanced me $500 to start with in business. I returned the amount, but think of the money it enabled me to make! I consider you and your mother entitled to half my fortune. No; for me to aspire to the hand of Mr. Plumber's daughter is absurd."

For the moment he was again the office boy, Margaret Plumber the banker's daughter. Margaret continued to stare at him as he proceeded, then the whole meaning of it all seemed to break upon her, and she threw herself into his arms.

An African Lion.

One day when elephant hunting in the Basileka territory, accompanied by 250 men, I was astonished suddenly to behold a majestic lion slowly and steadily advancing toward us with a dignified step and undaunted bearing. Lashing his tail from side to side and growling haughtily, he fixed his terrible eyes upon us and displayed a store of ivory well calculated to inspire terror among the timid natives.

A headlong flight of the 250 men was the immediate result, and in the confusion of the moment four couples of my dogs were allowed to escape. These instantly faced the lion, who, finding by his bold bearing he had put his enemies to flight, now became solicitous for the safety of his little family, with which the lioness was retreating in the background.

Facing about, he followed them with an independent step, growling fiercely at the dogs, which trotted along on either side of him.

As my natives had all deserted me, I considered it unwise to interfere with his departure and, calling back my dogs, saw the last of this king of the forest without regret.—"Five Years' Hunting In Africa."

The End of the World.

Here are six views on the end of the world that have been given out by eminent scientists during recent years:

The land surface is diminishing; the human race will be finally drowned.

Ice is accumulating at the north pole; some day the earth will fall out of balance and man will be utterly annihilated by the rush of moving objects.

The earth is gradually approaching the sun; the last man will therefore finally be roasted alive.

Water is slowly growing scarcer; in the ages to come all human beings and animals will perish for the want of a drop of moisture to cool their parched tongues.

With the beginning of the year 3000 A. D. man will commence to retrograde and will finally come to be a creature no larger than a plant louse.

The sun is burning up; as she cools the earth's glacial zones will enlarge, and the last remnant of humanity will be frozen in a heap.

Boys' Cleverness With Flowers.

"If the public schools ever add to the curriculum the making of bouquets as a fine art, the boys will take much higher honors than the girls," lamented a perplexed teacher. "I used to wonder why it was that all the employees in a florist's establishment were men. Having no other explanation to fall back on, I concluded that the preference was due to their superior physical strength, but I know now that it is because they have better taste in the arrangement of flowers. With all her supposed inherent talent in the matter of home adornment there isn't one girl in a thousand who can make a lot of flowers up into a decent bouquet without coaching, while, on the other hand, the boy who cannot put them together in artistic style is rare."—New York Press.

Volcanic Functions.

Terrific as are the forces of volcanic action, they have served and do yet serve their ordained purpose in the magnificent scheme of cosmic development. Volcanoes form a natural vent for the pent up internal forces resulting from the slow cooling and consolidation of the earth's mass. They act as the safety valves of the world, without which the crust of the earth would in all probability burst with explosive force and with a resulting cataclysm appalling to contemplate. Volcanoes tend, in fact, to maintain the normal stable equilibrium between the interior and the outer surface of the world.—Engineering.

Treasures of the Kremlin.

All the czars of Russia have been crowned in the Kremlin, in Moscow, and in the treasury there are the thrones of all the emperors of the past and the historic jewels and the choicest plate now owned by the Russian crown. There is $120,000,000 worth of gold and silver and precious stones in that treasury, and there are basins of gold there which are as big as a baby's bathtub and two card tables of solid silver which are worth a king's ransom.

LOBSTERS.

To avoid buying lobsters which have been cooked and laid on ice until all their firmness and sweetness have been sacrificed lay the creature on its back, and straighten out the tail. If when the tail is released it springs back into its normal curled position, it may be considered fresh. But if it stays back and seems limp and flabby it is unfit for use.

A Costly Lick.

"My wife found a pocket chip in my pocket, and I told her it was a dyspepsia tablet."

"That was clever."

"Far from it! She swallowed the chip, and the doctor's bills cost me more than the jackpot."—Philadelphia Record.

The Snob.

There is little satisfaction in being a snob. Yes, a satisfaction, to be sure, a lonely, selfish, melancholy pleasure enjoyed by men and women who draw the social line—even in the cemetery. But the worms! What is their opinion?—Schoolmaster.

Fresh Air.

Accustom yourself to plenty of fresh air and you will in time become impervious to drafts and sudden changes of atmosphere. Never sleep in an unventilated room. Fresh air is life.

Any man who disregards the regulations for the prevention of lead poisoning in the mines of New South Wales is liable to a fine not exceeding $100.

You are busy fooling others; others are busy fooling you. It's all a waste of time. A straightforward course would be better for everybody.—Atchison Globe.

CITY COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Petitions for Saloon Licenses Turned Down—Routine Business Transacted

The regular meeting of the city council was held Monday evening with Mayor Shaw and all of the members of the council present except Keck.

The application of T. Mallette for a renewal of his saloon license on North Front street was read and on motion granted.

The application of Bert Fletcher for a license to conduct a saloon at the corner of Selah and West Yakima avenues was read and on motion of Harrison was laid over for two weeks.

The application of Ole Sandberg for a license to operate a saloon in the stone building situated on lot 27, block 31, S. First Street was read. A remonstrance signed by a majority of lot owners in block 31 and 11 were read. On motion of Fisher the license was refused.

A petition was read from numerous property owners asking that South First street from the center of block 13 to Race street be graded, was granted. Likewise a petition for a board sidewalk on the west side of the same street from Walnut street to Maple, a distance of three blocks.

An ordinance was read and passed providing for the creation of a cemetery sinking fund. The ordinance appears in this paper. An ordinance was also passed creating an improvement district for the building of a sidewalk on S. Fourth street.

Reports of the street and ditch committee accepting the sidewalk laid by G. H. Moulton in district No. 42 and a walk laid by A. B. Rock in district No. 44 were accepted by the council.

A resolution was passed accepting the new plat of Frank D. Black for lots 53 and 57 and the west 13 feet of lot 52 Kerr's Villa lots.

The application of Alex Miller for a building permit to erect a one story brick or stone building on the corner of Yakima avenue and Second street was referred to committee on public improvements with power to act.

The clerk was authorized to advertise for bids for the grading of South Second street from Walnut to Race, also for the construction of sidewalk on the east and west side of S. Third street.

Chairman Harrison of the street and ditch committee reported that a conference had been held with property owners on Cherry street and that an agreement had been reached on the basis of the city securing a right of way through the Reed and Lowe tracts in consideration of all the other property owners donating the right of way.

The question of a city dumping ground was again considered but without final action being taken. County Health Officer Frank was present and served notice on the council that any parties caught dumping refuse after that date on the old grounds south of town would be arrested.

No further business appearing the council adjourned.

The Perfect Liver Medicine.

Mrs. N. A. Jolly, Noble, O. T., writes: "I have used Herbine for a number of years, and can cheerfully recommend it as the most perfect liver medicine and the greatest blood purifier. It is a medicine of positive merit, and fully accomplishes all that is claimed for it." Malaria cannot find a lodgment in the system while the liver is in perfect order, for one of its functions is to prevent the absorption of fever producing poisons. Herbine is a most efficient liver regulator. 50c at Fred L. Janek's.

Neighborly Neglect.

"Every one knows the dislike of the country person to interfere with his neighbors," says the London Globe. "A good instance occurred in the midlands. Farmer Jarvis, driving to market, saw through the open door of a barn the body of a neighbor suspended from a beam and drove on, revolving the tragedy. When he reached the market town, he imparted the news with deliberate emphasis. 'Good heavens!' exclaimed the other. 'And did you cut him down?' 'No,' said the farmer, more slowly still; 'he wasn't dead yet.'"

Highway Fruit Trees.

It will not do in this country to plant fruit trees along the public highways, as is done with great success in many European countries. The great state farm of Hungary distributes 15,000 choice fruit trees without cost to townships and communities which will plant and care for them until bearing age. The characteristic American boy would never permit a fruit of any sort that can be eaten to reach the age of maturity unless a full grown bulldog was kept chained to each tree.—Farm and Ranch.

Campbell Bros. Big Shows

are coming to North Yakima one day only, Thursday, Aug. 6.

West Superior, Wis., June 25, 1903.

To Our Friends:—The Eagles, to make sure that they were getting a high class attraction for their 4th of July celebration in the shape of a circus, sent me to Fargo, N. D., for the express purpose of witnessing the performance as given by the Campbell Bros. The following is my opinion of the exhibition:

It is certainly a good show and well worth attending. Whoever pays to see the Campbell show will receive their money's worth and the right change back. There are no skin games of any description allowed with the aggregation. Everything is of a high standard and strictly first-class. The show itself was great and its every act was applauded. Campbell Bros. show is the cleanest exhibition I ever saw. You and your family can take in the slide-show and you will find nothing there to be offended at. I must not forget the menagerie with its latest attractions of rare and valuable animals. The have the largest elephant I ever saw and I think they know what they are taking about when they say it is the largest world.

Yours respectfully,
J. S. CRAIG.
