Dear Mr. Relander:

One of the bookstores in Yakima gave me your name as an appraiser and collector of books. I have an accumulation of 200-300 old books which I must dispose of before leaving Ellensburg for Virginia. Would you be interested in seeing them? Some are so unusual that I need assistance in appraising their value before I offer them for sale.

I am enclosing a partial list so that you may have an idea of what they are. Please excuse the type of list. My daughter began the typing, but was unable to complete it. Since I am a hunt-and-peck performer on a typewriter, it would take considerable time and effort for me to finish the list, and because I am anxious to be leaving here the middle of December, I'd like to start as soon as possible <sup>on</sup> the disposition of this collection. I'd appreciate it if you'd return the list, and am enclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

Should you be interested in seeing these books, I can either make an appointment to have you look them over here at my apartment, or I can pack them in my car and take them to Yakima at a time convenient for you.

I shall appreciate any help and advice you can offer me, and shall, of course, expect to pay the regular charges for such services.

Thank you very much.

Sincerely,

Frances H. M. Adams
