

Dear Click: I must have missed it in the paper, cause I've just heard that your book is published. Hooray !!
I'm goin to buy a copy---hot off the press---have it autographed by the author. --- Read it---an then brag about it to my friends---tell them they must buy a copy because anybody who is anybody is now reading everything they can get heart-wring poignancy that would bring tears to glass eyes, we should hit the ten best seller list, or at any ratethe ten best celler list.

But, honest truth, I think you're pretty wonderful, with all your other worth<sup>k</sup>, to have completed the book, with all the research it means and all the rest that goes with getting a book off the press and on the market, an I'm proud as punch of you.

hold of on Northwest history.

That this book is not only factual, but so exciting and breath-taking I could not put it down until I had finished. Also that this first edition, come 'fifty years, will be worth many times what he paid for it.

Now to get down to brass tacks, why don't you an me collaborate on a book. With your information an my mis-information---an your clean reportorial style an my

I shall point to your name on the book and say, "I know that man--- in fact we're intimate friends!"

It must have been a rough voyage-- but you've had a happy landing!
With heartiest congratulations,
