Dear Ray:

I am sending you a copy of The Yakima Frontier Museum insert from the Yakima Herald-Republic. I wish to call your attention to the story marked on page where the UP's Armand Taylor was president of the Yakima group which went to work with others here to secure the noteworthy W. L. Gannon collection for the non-profit, public service Frontier Museum. As you know, Mr. Taylor is now at Seattle.

It is also noted that the Union Pacific is preparing for its centennial in 1969.

I am sending this to you so in your conversation with George J. Skorney, director of public relations, you can see that the Frontier Museum's application for Union Pacific "foundation" help gets into the proper channel in you office at Portland, and if too late this year, can be properly re-referred.

I have mentioned here that there is a possibility the Union Pacific historical museum car will be floating around next year. You will recall I showed you the Northern Pacific siding close by the museum.

Glad you had the chance to look the museum over when you were here. If any one directly interested in the foundation would want to see it on some visit to Yakima, let me know so some executive of the Frontier Museum could show him the display and answer any questions to his satisfaction.

Best regards to you and George,

Sincerely,
