

General George A. Custer is shown in front of a Northern Pacific tent with some of his scouts. Custer was in command of troops detailed to guard NP survey and construction crews. The Indian kneeling beside the general has been identified as Bloody Knife, Custer's favorite scout. He was killed with Custer and his entire command at the infamous battle of the Little Big Horn on June 25, 1876.