RUSSIANS ARE ACTIVE

Kuropatkin's Army Operating along a Line Forty to Fifty Miles Long.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 10.—General Curopatkin is in the field personally dicting the forward movement of the army, which it is understood is divided into two strong columns moving on each side of the railroad, their flanks being assisted by no less than 150 squadrons of Cossacks.

The Russians are operating along a front of between forty and fifty miles, extending from Kaoutou Pass to Bentsiaputze on the east and across the Hun river to the left bank of the Liao river on the west. They are taking every precaution against possible counter attacks throwing up intrenchments as they advance southward.

Field Marshal Oyama, however, has not yet shown a disposition to strongly hold his outer positions. The evacuation of Bentsiaputze left the flank of the Japanese position at the Yentai mines unprotected and news of the abandonment of the mines is therefore hourly exceedingly strong and have an equally good defense north and south. The Japanese retired from Bentsiaputze almost without a struggle, fearing that Gen. Mistchenko's Cossacks would surround the position and cut them off.

Bentsiaputze is of the highest importance commanding the roads from Mukden and Fushun to Liao Yang and Bensihu. Private advices from Mukden just received indicate that the artillery is already at work.

An engagement is reported to have ocurred yesterday on the Russian right flank, 14 miles southwest of Mukden. Such news of the Russian movements as may be given out without compromising the advance is likely to be telegraphed by General Kuropatkin each ev ening after the day's work in the field

The Know-It-All's Meet.

The National Know-It-All party met n the halls of the Portia club at the residence of Miss Lombard on Saturday at 3:56 p. m., to nominate candi ates for resident and vice president. Each state sent its delegates, some with instructions as to enoice of people, others uninstructed. After the election of a permanent chairman and secretary the adoption of a strenuous platform was in order; and while the reporter was unable to obtain an explicit account of each and every plank, it was learned that among other things of national interest (such as the adoption of woman's suffrage), a very strong and broad plank was inserted urging the abolition of that bane of civilization, the afternoon tea.

Nominations being in order, the pokesman of the Ohio delegation preented the name of Lillian Cole Bethel, which was followed shortly afterward by the nomination of Dr. Mary Walker y a delegate from Pennsylvania; and he Illinois spokesman proudly proclaimed the name of Mrs. Potter Palmer s choice of her state. The balloting was done with dispatch and much feelng, and while each delegate was very sure that her choice was the correct one, yet when it was announced that Lillian Cole-Bethel was the choice of the majority all animosities were laid aside and the delegates were seemingly satisfied. The hour being late, it was found necessary to postpone the nomination for vice president to some more convenient time. Although the "Know-It-Alls" are seemingly late in getting out their candidate, the Democrat feels assured hat victory will perch upon their standard, and wishes the new party the sucess that the ladies always attain.

The Portia club held a short session also on Saturday afternoon.

MIKADO WARNS JAPS

Tells Them to Be Patient and Prepare for Long War.

TOKYO, Oct. 10.-The emperor today ssued a brief rescript warning the Japanese people to exercise patience and steadfastness in pursuance of the war. His text is as follows:

"Since the outbreak of the war the army and navy have demonstrated their bravery and loyalty while both officials and people have acted in unison in support of our cause.

"Success so far has attended our cause but its ultimate accomplishment being yet very far distant it is necessary to be patient and steadfast in pursuance of our action, and to thus aim at the final accomplishment of our purpose."

Prisoners were arraigned before Judge Rudkin Monday morning and at the conlusion of the session all criminal cases were continued until November 28th, at which time a jury will be called.

W. H. Turner was arraigned on a charge of larceny from the person. He plead not guilty. Frank Smith, Pearl Howard and Charles Wilson were given a day to enter their plea. They are charged with holding up and robbing an Indian. J. Funnemark was arraigned for obtaining money under false pretenses. H. J. Snively, his attorney demurred to the complaint. The lawyers submitted briefs which will be passed upon by the judge. In the following cases which came up the demurrers were overruled in each instance: King Dykeman vs. D. A. Hanna; M. Don't Look So Bad.

The situation at the present time looks good to the Democrats nationally. The campaign managers seem to feel confident that Parker will win out in New York and there is apparently a good deal of reason for optimism in the Empire state. Mr. Roosevelt, as a matter of fact, lacks the popularity in his own state that he apparently enjoys in other states. When he ran for governor of New York in 1898, when he was fresh from the Cuban war, he carried the state by only 18,000. Two years earlier Black for governor carried the state by over 200,000 and two years later Odell won out by 110,000. There is, therefore, good reason to question Mr. Roosevelt's popularity in New York.

Among the other doubtful states of the east the Democrats feel sanguine of winning, is West Virginia and New Jersey, with an equal chance of carrying Rhode Island and Connecticut. In the central states Democratic hope is centered in Indiana and Wisconsin. It is very probable that the former state will be won as the Democrats now have a and under the leadership of Chairman Taggart, who knows the state like a book and is himself a remarkably able of it. and cunning politician, the prospect for success looks good. In Wisconsin, where the Republican party is split into bit-

The Yakima Daily Democrat are daily becoming more bitter at the national administration on account of Roosevelt's sympathy for the Spooner

In the west the Democrats are making a hard fight for Montana, Colorado and Nevada, representing a total of 11 electoral votes. The chances of securing all three of these states is most excellent. In these states the miners are thoroughly organized and the great majority of them are opposed to Roosevelt manifested at different times to union labor and because of his failure to interfere in the Colorado troubles. On the other hand the union miners are well satisfied with Judge Parker's record. On North Yakima, Wash. Tuesday, Oct. 11, 1904 the bench Judge Parker decided that eight hours should constitute a fair day's labor and this and other decisions will bring him a good deal of support from the labor unions.

> The assumption that Mr. Roosevelt is sure to win is pure buncombe. It is idle to deny the fact that his chances at this time seem the best to win since it will be necessary for him to capture but one or two of the doubtful states, but the assertion that Teddy has a leadpipe cinch on the result is balderdash. Like Blaine in 1884, he may go to the polls serenely confident only to meet his Waterloo.

The Irrigation Question.

The irrigation problem in the Yakima valley is one that ought to engage the serious attention of every land owner. It is a question that will not down. It must be settled and it must be settled right before this section can develop to anything like its full capacity.

This question is going to be settled in some way by the next legislature, whether the people of this county want anything done about it or not. Public sentiment throughout eastern Washington demands intervention in this matter by the United States government.

Under existing conditions this seems the only sensible solution of the problem. It is idle to say that the government cannot build reservoirs and ditches just as well and for that matter a great deal better than private individuals or corporations can. The government is willing to do this work and turn it over to the people at actual cost, and that is something that no corporation will do.

The general government, however, will not expend a cent of money in this state in the creation of new irrigation enterprises until a new law that will enable it to operate in safety has passed the legislature and is signed by the governor. Realizing this fact it is a dead sure thing that the next legislature of this state will wrestle with this irrigation question and that some sort of a law will be passed.

The Democratic party of this county is emphatically on record in favor of the general government taking up the irrigation work in this state and so declared in the platform adopted by the last county convention. The Democratic legislative candidates are emphaticalprinciple so far as lies in their power. passage of such a law by the next legislature as will enable the federal government to build reservoirs and canals in this state and to operate the same.

It must be remembered though that there are large vested interests in this county, the property of our own people, which in all fairness, must be protected. Our pioneer land owners nearly all have water rights in the Yakima river or its tributaries that must be protected. These people have inalienable rights that must be considered. Any legislation that would infringe or unduly encroach on the rights of these people would be rank injustice and would not be tolerated until the courts finally adjudicated the

It will thus be seen that this irrigation problem is a hard nut to crack without doing somebody grave injustice. It is a question of which our people should do some hard thinking for it is a proposition that seriously affects their interests and the interests of their children and their children's children.

A Plea for the Suicide.

The world should judge gently the who will end his own existence on earth certainly cannot be in possession of his man. right mind.

A resident of this city blew out his brains two days ago because of financial trouble, or imagined trouble. He probably had brooded over his difficulties to such an extent that he saw ruin staring him in the face, with the small savings of years swept away. His mind was so constituted that it could not resist deep disappointments and reverses, hence, it gave way.

Under such conditions a rationally constituted man would have made the best of the situation. He would have tried to forget his ill luck and would go to work promptly to make good his loss. If a philosopher such an occurrence would not worry him much, as ne would consider that the use of money had merely passed on to others who were more capable of making a wise use

Doolittle a Hard Hitter.

There has been a great deal of solicitude displayed by my friends concerning my course during this campaign. As an American and a self-respecting citizen, I saw here an opportunity to do the proper thing, and while I still have the old love for the party and the affection I still entertain for it, it warms my heart to its core, nevertheless, here, with on account of the opposition that he has the people on one side and the railway corporations on the other, I felt that I had the courage to go before the citizens of my own state, who would believe what I told them and what I said when we reasoned together during this campaign, even though it was at some little cost to myself.

Now, my friends, I see that some people think that it is to their interests to go about over the state and say that Senator Turner is only using the governorship as a stepping stone to the United States senate again. The only imbition that man has, and I am authorized to say it now, is to be elected governor of the state of Washington, and to serve it to the end of his term, and when he is elected and enters upon that service, and when he has completed it, we will have abundant reason to be as proud of that service as any state in the American Union as to be of the service of its governor.-Speech of Ex-Congressman Doolittle at Tacoma.

Turner on the Issues.

Men may differ about the Philippine question, about the tariff question and about other questions of national importance, but if they be honest men and patriotic men they must agree that our state snall not be debauched by corporate dictation, and that it shall have an honest government, administered for all the people of the state.

The railroads are enabled to tax communities at will for services rendered them. They can exalt one interest and depress another. They can build up one community and destroy another. They can promote one man's interests and ruin another's. They can tell the farmer what profit he shall reap from his wheat, the miner what gain he shall derive from his ore, the miller whether he shall turn the wheels of his mill, and with what remuneration, and the wholesale merchant in some particular city or town whether he shall deal with contiguous territory or whether that right shall be given to the merchant of some more favored locality.-From Hon. Geo. Turner's speech in Tacoma.

The Post-Intelligencer has received everal inquiries from country precincts compelled to register before they will be entitled to vote in the coming elec-

Rural Free Delivery.

THE WORK OF THE LOBBY.

How the Farrell Convention at Tacoma Throttled the Republican Party-Some Inside History of the Republican State Convention.

The relative importance in the convention of the delegates and the steering committee is set forth by the Post-Intelligencer in its convention story of May 10. The P.-I. says:

Described by the P.-I.

"The course of the average delegate is an interesting study. He comes in with his delegation swollen with pride and chesty over the honor that has been done him. He has upon him a large importance. He goes into caucus (Notethat is in some instances he does), with his delegation and assists in the formation of a steering committee. Then he takes to swelling the hotel lobby crowd and wisely talking of what is going to be done. Presently he discovers that the delegation of which he is a member has been set down as pledged to this or that candidate of whom he has no knowledge.

"He investigates, not believing it true. Then he discovers that his steering committee has pledged the entire delegation, he wants to know about it and makes inquiries, then it is borne upon him that the individual delegate in a big and important convention like this cuts mighty little ice, woile all interest centers in the steering committee.

Takes His Medicine.

"The average delegate accepts the knowledge in a becoming spirit, feels relieved of a load of responsibility, and settles down to enjoy himself, while the steering committee, which he has assisted to elect (sometimes), loses meals and sleep and temper in its many vain struggles. This is why the rotundas of hotels are packed while the upstairs halls and rooms where the actual business is done presents a much less animated appearance."

This is how the "representatives of the Republicans o tfhe state" selected a state ticket for the members of the jparty to vote for at the coming election. In the first place the county coavention is packed by the nired retainers of the railroad lobby. In the second place the county convention is not permitted to select the delegation to the state convention for fear it will select men who have ideas of their own above railroad lobby politics. In the third place a steering committee is selected to tell the "select" delegates what to as to whether voters in the country are do and when to do it. And in the fourth place, a railroad boss is sent for to keep the steering committee in line and prevent it from disobeying the railroad

Parry Did What They Told Him.

Another picture of the helplessness of the individual delegate in "a big and important convention like this" is that within its borders. If there are any such iness men and prominent politicians of precincts, it is the duty of the county | Seattle, who was a delegate to the convention. In most places Mr. Parry is recognized as a man of force and influence, but at the Tacoma convention he floated over the scene like the proverbial No registration is required in country white cap. It is related that after he had been there for two days and had tried in vain to ascertain what was being done he called a newspaper man to one side and said:

"Do you want to know what I am going to do in that convention tomorrow?" "Yes," replied the newspaper man.

"Well," continued Mr. Parry, "I'll tell you. I am going to go into that convention tomorrow and do just exactly what they tell me to do."

Mr. Parry's course in the convention became, sooner or later that of nineteentwentieths of the delegates. They did what they were told to do. They took their orders from their respective steering committees, which, in many cases they did not participate in selecting, while the steering committees took their

Committees Were "Argued With" Even the steering committees were not permitted to do what they desired or what they thought best for their party and their constituents. Proof of this is contained in the P.-I.'s story quo ted above, which goes on to say:

"Tonight, while the steering commit the seclusion of the upstairs rooms, a band was stationed on the beautiful east sweep of moonlit seascape and dis- inclined to be angry. coursed for several hours."

Here is the real milk in the cocoanut, an intimation fro mthe Post-Intelligencer itself of the lofty source of the ororing to regain their lost markets and ders given to the convention. Fuller amplification of this shameful chapter in the political history of the Republiies. They can not do this so long as can party and of the state, is contained chosen with the distinct determination they are liable to a delay of from three in a story published in the Seattle Times that it would be used first of all and which attaches to the action of the Tastrong organization in the Hoosier state lies in the spending of it and that lost hours to twenty-four in getting mail. and the Spokane Spokesman-Review of To send each day to the postoffice means September 4, 1904, and never since pub- defeat the renomination of Governor Mcgreat loss of time, yet most of them do licly denied by any of the parties to the Bride and the railroad commission. it rather than risk the loss of orders, or conference described. While Mr. Piles had ostensibly ppointed the Seattle and King county elegation, Mr. Farrell had really done o, and Mr. Piles was afraid to make a leal with the commission forces without onsulting Mr. Farrell. All of the members of the Stattle and King county steering committee, save Charlie Sullivan, who was on the committee as Mr Farrell's personal representative, and all the holdover senators from Seattle and King county advised Mr. Piles to close the deal without delay and not to send for Mr. Farrell.

"Charley" Chamberlin Butts In.

"Mr. Piles was insistent, however, and hen C. P. Chamberlin, another representative of the Great Northern, intimated his belief that Mr. Farrell would not come to Tacoma, Mr. Piles who was sick and irritable, retorted: 'Well you'd better get him here, or this thing may be settled in a way he won't like."

"This was about 3 o'clock in the afternoon of the day before the conven tion met. Mr. Chamberlin became alarmed at Mr. Piles attitude and hastily telephoned Mr. Farrell to come to Tacoma, urging that there was danger of the convention adopting a railroad commission plank. Mr. Farrell was at his ranch at Renton at the time, but he reached Seattle in time to have his special car attached to the regular 6 o'clock train for Tacoma. In that car

"On his arrival at Tacoma about three o'clock he hastily summoned his most trusted lieutenants, and the famous conference was held in Farrell's private weight, should come from one or more ear in the Northern Pacific yards in Tacoma, just below the Tacoma hotel where a seething mass of delegates thought they were having a hand in shaping the results of the convention.

Who Attended the Conference? "The leading figures at the conference

"J. D. Farrell, a lifelong Democrat, and assistant to President James J. Hill of the Great Northern Railway company and the Northern Securities company. "B. S. Grosseup of Tacoma, division counsel for the Northern Pacific Railway company, and for many years past the hief legislative lobbyist of that corpo-

"B. D. Crocker of Tacoma, United Sates collector of internal revenue for he district of Washington and Alaska "J. T. McChesney of Everett, leader of the Snohomish county delegation and a man exceedingly close to the Great freat Northern in a business way. and did he attain them through the ac-

"Samuel Hill of Seattle, son-in-law of President James J. Hill.

"A few smaller political fry were there, but they sat in the background while the six men enumerated talked the matter over and reached a conclusion. Mr. Farrell Was Angry.

"Mr. Chamberlin, over the telephone, as explained to Mr. Farrell the nature of the situation and the fact that the tees were temporized and arguel within King county steering committee was inclined to accept the railroad commission men's offer. Mr. Farrell opened porch of the Tacoma hotel with its the conference. He was irritable and

"'What's the trouble here?' he demanded. I am d-d tired of this in the reported conference are all men backing and filling. It's got to end. I of standing in the business world, men am going to clear it up.'

"Mr. Farrell's manner was extremely positive. He then went on to say that the King county delegation had been prior to every other consideration, to "The question of who should be nomiisfied with the nomination of Mr. Crocktween railroad leaders in the private er. Mr. Grosscup spoke up and said that with the railroad faction would make him a weak candidate.

Mr. Crocker Gives Warning. "Then Mr. Crocker took a hand him-

"He asked Mr. Farrell if the latter was going to consent to the adoption of a railroad commission plank. Mr. Farrell replied most emphatically in the negative. Then Mr. Crocker replied that he would not consider being a candidate. "'You make a mistake, though,' he eplied, 'in not taking a commission plank, regardless of whom you nomi-

"Mr. Farrell merely replied that a ommission plank was out of the question. Subsequently he did consent to the adoption of a milk-and-water plank declaring for the creation of a tax commission.

Mead Is Agreed Upon.

"After that phase of the matter had een disposed of, Mr. Farrell turned to Mr. Grosscup, who was present, representing one of the merger lines, while Mr. Farrell represented the other, and oad commission forces 'aad offered to asked, 'Whom do you want for govern-

"'I want Mead,' replied Mr. Grosscup. He is the most available of all the candidates.

"Mr. Grosscup went on to point out that Mr. Mead's identification with the railroad interests was least open and least understood of that of any of the andidates mentioned and would be less open to attack than that of any of the others. The matter was discussed at ome length and finally it was the unanmous opinion of all present that Mr. Mead was the man to be named.

Slate is Made Up.

"The conference broke up with the unlerstanding thatt he steering commit tees of King and Pierce counties should be gotten together in conference. That was done, and, upon hearing the result of the Farrell conference these committees agreed within 15 minutes to head the railroad slate with Mead. Within two hours a complete slate of state officers had been made up. The other nominees on it were candidates who had brought their counties into the antiommission combination with the undertanding that they would be given places n the ticket.

"The next day the slate was taken into convention and ratified without a break or hitch."

Has Not Been Denied.

This story was published in the two eading newspapers of Washington more han a month ago and it has not been publicly denied by any of the men named as having participated in the onference. It recites the date, places and circumstances of the conference and the names of several men who participated. If it is false, in whole or in part, it is but a simple matter for those interested in exposing that falsehood to secure a denial from those implicated. Denials from parties not participating, or having no actual personal knowledge of the facts and circumstances, count for nothing. Any denial, to carry any of the parties named as participants, and should cover these points:

Points to Be Covered.

1. Did J. D. Farrel go to Tacoma on May 10 to confer with certain persons regarding matters to come before the convention of May 11?

2. Was there a conference in Mr. Farrell's private car, or elsewhere in Tacoma, on the evening of May 10 in which Mr. Farrell and any or all of the above named gentlemen participated?

3. If so who were present? 4. Were the proceedings of that conference substantially as above recited, or were they not?

5. Was the purpose of the conference to decide whether Gov. McBride or some other candidate should be nominated for governor, or wnether a commission plank should be adopted?

onference and what mooted questions touching the convention did it decide or discuss? 7. What were Mr. Farrell's purposes or desires in attending the conference,

6. If not what was the purpose of the tion of the convention? Denial Must Be Complete.

Any denial which comes from any person other than those named in the story is worthless. Any denial by any of these gentlemen participating in the conference which does not cover all the above points in full is equally worthless and completely inadequate. Nothing short of the full, complete and absolute truth concerning the conference, coming directly from the men who participated will or shall be accepted by the people of the state.

The gentlemen named as participating of established reputations for integrity, uprightness and personal honor. Their word, if given without reservation or equivocation, would carry much weight towards the removal of the stigma coma convention. The supporters of the ticket nominated in that convention owe it to the voters of the state to publish the facts fully and accurately. Will the? nated for governor was then taken up. do it, or will they continue their effort. Mr. Farrell said that he would be sat- to deceive and hoodwink the people of

A Political Catechism.

- Do the people of the state of Washington favor the creation of a rail road commission
- A large majority of them do. On what evidence is that conclusion based?
- On the fact that two years ago both the great political parties of the state thought it advisable to place planks in their platforms declaring in favor of the creation of a commission.
- Q. Which party won two years age? The republican party.
- Did the republicans control the legislature?
- A. They had a large majority in both the senate and house.
- Q. Did they pass a railroad commis sion bill?
- They did not, but defeated it. Have both parties declared in fav or of a commission this year in their state platforms?
- A. The democrats have, the republicans have not.
- Q. Did the question come up in the republican convention?
- A. It did, and the proposed commis- sion plank was defeated. Why was it defeated?
- Because the railroad lobby controlled a majority of the delegates.
- Q. Does the republican candidate for governor favor a railroad commission? A. Everything indicates that he is op posed to it. He has never said that ne favors it and the delegation to the state convention from Whatcom county, which was selected by him, voted against
- the commission plank. Q. Has he at any time stated his at titude on the question?
- A. He has said that he would sign a commission bill if the legislature should
- Q. Has he said that he would recommend the passage of such a bill?
- He has not.
- Did the democratic state convention declare in favor of the commission policy?
- A. It did in the most emphatic language by a unanimous vote.
- Q. Does the democratic candidate for governor favor a railroad commission?
- Q. Has he at any time stated his attitude on the question?
- A. Ever since Washington was admitted to statehood he has been arguing for the creation of a commission. Q. Has he said that, if elected gov- ernor, he would recommend the passage of a commission bill? A. He has repeatedly declared that
- he would not only recommend it, but would use his influence to secure its passage. Q. Do the people of Whitman county
- want a commission bill passed? A. Nine-tenths of them do.
- Will they then vote for a governor who favors it, or for one who opposes
- A. That question will be answered on the 8th day of next November .- Colfax Commoner.

In the Hands of Railroads.

An idea of the sort of aid Mr. Mead would give to the commission cause, if elected governor, may be gathered from the action of the people of his own town and county in their recent convention. the prominent men in the Whatcom delegation at the Farrell convention in Tacoma were also prominent in the recent Whatcom county conventions. The men who supported Mead's candidacy for congress and later agreed to the deal by which he received the nomination for governor were delegates to the Whatcom convention, and they had an opportunity to show just how they stand on the railroad commission question.

They are against a commission. They were against it at Tacoma, they are against it now and they would be against it in event of Mead's election, when their advice, coming from the men who made him, would obviously carry great weight. In the Whatcom convention they would not even allow a commission resolution to be read. They would not even permit a minority to vote upon it. They were as ruthless in suppressing an expression on this issue as was the Tacoma convention, that followed instructions issued from Farrell's

The men who took this extreme anticommission stand are the men who brought forward Mr. Mead. They are the men who, presumably, would make up his private council, if he were elected governor. Whatever influence they might exert through the executive would be against any commission legislation. Mr. Mead probably recognizes what he owes to his Whatcom county backers, and it is easy to see that a man of his evasive and shuffling characteristics would yield to the pressure of those who were responsible for his political preferment. He has behind him as friends and advisers some of the most uncompromising anti-commission men in the state. It is because of this that he has refused to express himself positively on the commission issue. He is in the hands of the railroad people; he owes everything to them; and he will never do anything that they do not wish him to do .-Spokesman-Review.

INGENIOUS JUSTICE SCONES CONCENTED C

[Original.]

"Mary Easton, stand up." A girl of twenty arose, and the judge asked:

"Have you anything to say why sentence should not be passed upon

"Only that I am innocent."

Then Judge Lester proceeded to sentence her for two years to the state prison for receiving stolen goods, the articles being a few old pieces of silver of no very great value. The girl had never offended before, and witnesses testified to her good character, but she could not or would not explain how the silver came into her possession. There was nothing for her but conviction and nothing for the judge but to pass sentence. As she stood before him there was the serene look of a martyr on her face, and the judge said mentally, "The assurance of criminals and the appearances they can assume are marvelous.'

The girl was led away, and the judge left his office. Lighting a cigar, he strolled home. On the way he stopped at Sandiver's, his jeweler, to get his watch, that had been left for repairs, and while looking over the wares remembered that the anniversary of his marriage would come off in about a week. He had decided on a brooch for a present on the occasion, and went over to where these articles were displayed. While looking over them a young man at his side divided with him the attention of the salesman. The judge left the store without making a selection.

The next evening while sitting in his library before dinner there was a ring at the doorbell, and a note came in from Sandiver announcing that the day before he had got in a new lot of brooches and begging that the judge would examine some that he had sent by the bearer.

The judge read the note several Surely Sandiver was anxious times. to sell his goods; he had never sent samples to his house before. Competition seemed to be driving the drummers of reputable firms into people's homes. However, he had a little time before dinner and would look at the brooches. The salesman was brought in and produced articles that the judge had seen in Sandiver's cases the day before, besides new ones. One of those he had seen and fancied was offered at a third of the value put on it when he had first seen it.

"You are mistaken in the price of this," said the judge. "It is worth more money."

"Perhaps I am," replied the salesman, "but it is a rule of our house never to go back on a price once giv-

The judge took the brooch and held it under the gaslight. There were jewels in it that sparkled beautifully. "I will take this one," he said, "but, mind, if you are mistaken in the price and will notify me within a few days we will call the sale off." "The price is correct," said the salesman-"that is, to you-and the sale will stand so far as we are concerned.' The brooch was left and the salesman departed.

A few days later, during a recess of the court, an inspector of police stepped up to the judge and asked him if jewelry to sell.

"Yes," replied the judge, "and I bought a brooch."

"Then, your honor," replied the inspector, smiling, "you are a receiver of stolen goods. The man was an impostor.'

"Impossible! He presented a note written on Sandiver's letter head and brought jewels that I had seen in Sandiver's cases."

"Please speak lower, judge," said the "This is a very embarrassinspector. ing case. The man has 'done' the police department, Sandiver and you. He came to me and offered to work for nothing till he had proved his skill. I didn't employ him, but he stayed about headquarters long enough to steal some of our letter heads. Un one of these he forged a letter introducing him to Sandiver, stating that he was on the track of some of their stolen goods and if they would mark some brooches and permit him to take them out for sale he was quite sure he could recover a large amount of their property. The singular part of it is that he returned all the articles except the one sold you.' "Captain," said the judge, "you are right in not letting the world know of this trick. Come to my house after 5 o'clock, and we will talk it over." When the inspector called he carried with him a letter he had received, which he handed to the judge to read: Captain—Judge Lester recently sen-tenced a girl, Mary Easton, to whom I am engaged to be married, to state prison for receiving stolen goods. I determined to show the judge that he could readily be induced to commit the same crime, if it be a crime. On the day he sentenced Mary Easton I followed him to Sandiver's, saw him examine brooches and then laid my scheme. The honest intent of my act is established by the fact that I immediately returned through a confederate all the jewels except the one sold to Judge Lester, and the money for that is at your service. Yours truly, CHESTER HASKELL,

After reading the note the judge looked up with a singular expression. "Captain," he said, "notify the attorney who defended Mary Easton that if he will draw up an application to the governor for a pardon I will sign it. The inspector left the judge to muse over the many defects of justice.

"Mary," said her lover the evening after her liberation, "for heaven's sake give up protecting that scapegrace brother of ours. I could never get you off this way again."

the Secret of One Clever Lawyer's Unvarying Success.

One of the most common defects of a recently admitted lawyer is a strivman purporting to be from San- ing for oratorical display. A successdiver's had called on him with some ful older practitioner endeavors, on the other hand, to give the jury a heart to beart talk. The ways of an eagle in the air, of a serpent upon a rock, of a ship in the midst of the sea and of a man with a maid are as A B C compared with the methods usually pursued by the twelve good men and true. It seems a trifle odd at first that a dozen individuals who separately are shrewd, sharp business men should collectively be guilty of the most absurd performances, but the fact must be reckoned on nevertheless.

A story is told of two farmers who were returning home, one of them from jury duty in a neighboring town. "Lawyer Smith is a great orator," said one-"a perfect Daniel Webster. My, how I hated to decide against him in the three cases he tried!"

"How about Lawyer Jones, who was on the other side?"

"Oh, shucks! Why of course he wins all his cases. I heard every one of 'em, and they were the simplest things. He just explained things to the jury. He didn't have to do any hard talking at all. You couldn't help but agree with him."-Success.

Galileo's Caustic Humer.

In a biography of Galileo some stories are told of the caustic humor of that bold investigator. Lotario Sarsi, a writer on science, having said that the Babylonians used to cook eggs by whirling them in a sling, Galileo replied: "The cause of such an effect is very remote from that to which it is attributed, and to find the true cause I shall reason thus: If an effect does not follow with us which followed with others at another time it is because in our experiments something is wanting which was the cause of the formet success, and if only one thing is wanting to us that one thing is the true cause. Now we have eggs and slings and strong men to whirl them, and yet they will not become cooked; nay, if they were hot at first they more quickly become cold, and since nothing is wanting to us but to be Babylonians it follows that being Babylonians is the true cause why the eggs became cooked and not to the friction of the air, which is what I wish to prove."

A Tiger's Charge.

A writer in the Bombay Gazette describes the rare experience of seeing the charge of a famous man eating tiger which ended harmlessly. "A camel with a slipping load had," the writer says, "been halted not far from his lair, when with a 'wrouff' (once heard never to be forgotten) the tiger charged for the man leading the camel. The tiger, I have no doubt, would have carried off the camel man, but when he saw the long, and to him unfamiliar, neck of a camel coming between him and his intended victim I dare say he thought things were not quite as he had calculated. Anyway, he paused, casually surveyed the whole party and, with tail erect, calmly walked back into the jungle. The camel man was either so frightened or the whole thing from beginning to end had occupied so short a time (less than a minute, I should judge) that he did not stir from the place where he was when the tiger first made his attack."
