FIRE FIEND'S WORK

of $25,000-Forty Horses Burn in Their Stalls.

North Yakima was the scene of a disastrous fire early Tuesday morning that destroyed almost a block of wooden buildings, burned up 40 head of horses besides a large amount of other personal property, consuming in all property valued in the neighborhood of $25,000 divided among a number of losers.

The fire broke out in the Oregon livery barn on south First street about 1:30 a. m. and how it got started is a mystery although it is assumed that it was caused by a lighted eigarette thrown into the straw or manure pile. Powers and Perkins, two young men who worked in the Oregon barn and also slept there were the first to make the discovery of the fire. They were aroused by the pitiful neighing of the horses. They say that the lower floor of the building was then already a mass of lurid flame and they at once realized the impossibility of saving the poor frightened horses. Perkins ran out and gave the alarm and the fire bell soon the boys were badly handicapped both brought a large crowd of people to the

To make matters worse it was found impossible to secure telephone connection with the night engineer at the power house on account, as afterward learned, of two wires being crossed. It was found necessary to dispatch a special buildings threatened with destruction. messenger from Tucker's barn to instruct the engineer to increase the pressure in the water pipes thus permitting the fire department to accomplish something. At least a half hour of valuable time was thus lost, during which period people remarked, it might have been thousands of dollars worth of property went up in smoke. This circumstance has aroused the business men and property owners and an effort will doubt less be made to discover who is to blame

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

Delegates Selected to Go to the State Convention E. B. Preble Endorsed for Supreme Judge Everything Is Harmonious.

The democratic county convention according to call assembled in the superior court room at the court house at 2 o'clock Thursday afternoon, the purpose of the meeting being the election of a delegation of 19 to attend the democratic state convention to meet at Bellingham next Tuesday, August 2. The attendance at the convention was larger than anticipated, there being over 100 delegates while those absent were represented by proxies. Considering the fact that the convention had nothing to do but to select the state delegates and that there was no contest of any kind on, the interest displayed by the delegates was very strong.

Dr. C. T. Dulin of this city was elected chairman by acclamation. Mayor H. H. Wende of Sunnyside was selected to act as secretary in the same manner. On motion of H. J. Snively committees consisting of three members each were appointed by the chairman on credentials and order of business respectively. as follows: Credentials-Walter Gei zentanner, Vestal Snyder, A. G. McNeil. Order of Business-J. D. Medill, J. M. Shanks, Geo. Stephenson. A recess of 30 minutes was declared in order to give the committees time to report.

On reconvening, the reports of the committees were read and adopted unanimously. The first order of business being the election of 19 delegates to the state convention, nominations were declared in order under a call of the roll of precincts. The following named gentlemen were nominated and afterward elected by acclamation:

A. J. Splawn, Charles Schrader, Walter Geizentanner, H. E. Crosno, Geo. Stephenson, David Longmire, John D. Morrisey, J. M. Shanks, J. D. McDaniel, W. A. Cox, Vestal Snyder, C. C. Case, J. D. Medill, H. J. Snively, Geo. M. McAulay, E B. Preble, J. P. McCafferty, C. W. Grant, A. G. McNeil.

The Wires Got Crossed.

The city fire bell warned the people of a fire Friday afternoon about 1:30 o'clock and the department was out quickly. An incipient blaze at Felton's carpenter shop, corner of South First and Chestnut streets, was the cause, brought about by two live wires being crossed on the roof of the frame building. The fire was put out with a bucket of water before the department or the crowd reached the scene.

ENGLISH AS SPOKEN.

It Is In Scotland, Says a Critic, That It Is Heard at Its Best.

The query "Where is the prettiest English spoken?" is answered by a writer in the London News, and, strange to say, it is not in England, if the writer be accepted as an authoritative critic.

It was the opinion of Sir Morell Mackenzie that those who should speak English most musically were the inhabitants of Badenoch, Inverness-shire, Scotland. They had the reputation for centuries of being perfect speakers of English; but, the writer says, he must now go to the glens branching northward from the Caledonian canal to find the language spoken in its purity.

"In the beautiful glen of Moriston in particular one has noted the most exquisite speech it seems possible to imagine. There is an almost total abments, though a quaint, delicately marked rise and fall of the voice are very faintly noticeable. The language used is extraordinarily pure and free from alien words, which is attributable to the fact that the people acquire their English direct from books and that so far dialect contaminations have not penetrated the glen."

The writer has a good word to say of Celtic pronunciation of English generally: "The charm of Irish English is undeniable. It has a softness that appeals irresistibly to the ear, but unfortunately it is linked with a certain element of dialect which just places it below perfection.'

Pocket Furnaces.

Curious hand furnaces are used in China during the winter months, chiefly in the north, when the fire, in place of being in the house, as we have it, is carried about the person beneath the thickly padded cotton garments or in the hand. At times it is placed beneath the chair on which one is seated. This contrivance, resembling the charcoal pans formerly used before the days of the pit coal by the Hertfordshire straw plaiters, was first introduced to our notice when resting at a village in the Fukien province, which, before we had investigated the cause. we noted as a place remarkable for the deformity of its inhabitants, old men and women with strange swellings projecting in the most unaccountable places. Our speculations were, however, speedily set at rest and the matter satisfactorily explained by an old gentleman, who removed his greatcoat and disclosed a small copper furnace secured round his waist with a band and neatly covered with basket work. This artificial mode of heating the body is only resorted to in time of extreme cold, as on ordinary occasions the people deem their thick clothing a sufficient protection during winter.-Golden

A Quaint People.

The heart of Brittany never changes but its face is rapidly losing many of its prominent characteristics with the leveling influence of the French republic. It is only far out of the beaten track, now, or on special occasions, like fetes, that you see universally the costumes and customs of the old Armorifrom Quimper, the modernized chief town of Finistere, and you are among the Bigoudines, a people whose dress suggests the Eskimos and Chinese, whose faces are strongly Mongolian in type and who in language, customs and beliefs seem to have no relation with the rest of France. More and more the picturesque problem they present is coming to attract attention. Artists, students and tourists alike are fascinated by it.-Andre Saglio in Century.

A Stickler For Rank. It is not in this country alone that the notion of equality prevails. The London Figaro reports the following

As a magnificent steamer, the property of the Peninsular and Oriental company, was steaming into Southampton harbor a grimy coal lighter floated immediately in front of it. An officer on board the steamer, seeing this, shouted:

"Clear out of the way with that The lighter man, a native of the Emerald Isle, shouted in reply, "Are

Signs.

Irate Watchman-Look a-here! Don't you see that sign? It's big enough and black enough! It says, "No Smoking!" Agreeable Trespasser-I know it does, my friend, but, really, you must not believe in signs. Don't you see that I am smoking nevertheless?-Cincinnati Times-Star.

The Presidential Outlook. With the solid south and this Atlantic coast fringe of states the election would already be close without considering the west. These states have 231 electoral votes, or, omitting Rhode Island, 227 out of the 239 required to elect. Any little accident in any single important western state, such as Wisconsin with 13 votes, Indiana with 15 or Illinois with 27, might turn the scale. Any upheaval from the unknown depths of public sentiment might produce a tidal-wave like those that astonished the politicians in 1874, in 1882 and in 1890.

Moreover, there are still a few remnants of the Bryan spoils in the far west within reach. Nevada has not yet gone back to republicanism, Montana is the state of Senator Clark, Idaho is possible, and Colorado, with her Peabody and Bell, is a political mystery. These states have 14 electoral votes in all-more than enough to make a majority in combination with the east and south. And in addition there are the possibilities inherent in that famous senatorial candi dacy in Nebraska.

Judge Parker is strong with nearly all classes. Labor men like his decisions on the rights of unions, business men have confidence in his guardianshio of honestly acquired property, and conservative people generally approve of his leveladedness and his respect for the laws.

This i fight he waged ment remains in this country. against the powerful democratic ma knows also that the whirligig of time Considering the fact that the machine had placed him in power Folk's course not only created consternation but provoked the bitter resentment of the machine and its army of hangers-on, with the result that every effort possible was made, short of actual assassination, to thwart the fearless attorney in the discharge of his duty, but with little effect. Hard stories reflecting on the character and purpose of Folk were circulated and printed in the machine papers. Folk, however, showed that he was not only a courageous public officer but a great political general as well by the following declaration:

"I believe that that rank and file of the democratic party of Missouri is made up of honest men who sincerely desire good government and will tolerate no other if they know the facts. The facts are that they have been governed for years by a corrupt party machine which with its republican allies controls the politics of this state for the benefit of its own members. I have merely sought to do my plain duty, but without any desire on my part I have been made the issue in St. Louis county. As the people of the whole state are af view I hereby announce myself a candidate for governor. I will go before the people and tell them the truth and will abide by their judgment."

When the above statement was published it brought forth nothing but jeers and ridicule from the machine men. They would like to see him get the nomination, they said. What could be do. but one man, and little more than a kid at that, against the all powerful machine, they chuckled. But Folk courageously began his campaign. He to the efforts of William J. So much for the record.

The democratic national convention has met and by an emphatic majority vote has put forth a ticket and a platform of principles which the nominees must stand upon. That platform, due his supporters, is one of the grandest declarations of principles ever put forth by any political party. #### OUR WASHINGTON LETTER

Comment on the National Political Situation and Praise for Bryan-Senator Davis a Vigorous Campaigner in Spite of His Age.

(From our regular correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., July 23, 1904. Oyster Bay is not the summer capital, after all, although a great deal of government business is transacted there when President Roosevelt is present, All the machinery remains whirling in Washington, directed by cabinet officers and their subordinates. To tell the exact truth, things seem to move along just about the same even when the members of the cabinet are at Bar Harbor or on the distant mountains.

A suggestion was made by an audaciously enterprising member of the last congress that some seasnore resort of the north be selected for a summer cap- tlemen when he comes to express his ital and that during the heated months disgust. it share with Washington the honors and responsibilities of the seat of government. The proposition contemplated the retention of the files and archives of the government here and such occasional To Meet at Bellingham August 2visits hither as members of the cabinet might find necessary; but government should chiefly remain in the hands of bureau officers, sitting at the Washington end of telegraphic and telephonic wires. All official announcements would be dated at Washington, just as they are at present while the "administration" is furloughed at its various summer resorts. Several of the European governments have summer capitals which combine comfort and convenience, but probably such an establishment for this republic would be deemed chimerical.

Paul Morton, the new secretary of the navy, owes his office to the circumstance that he is a presidential favorite. When first tendered a cabinet portfolio he declined because he did not wish to give up his railroad career. The president, accustomed to having his way, persisted, summoned Morton to Washington, and offered him his choice of two positions. Morton preferred to be secretary of commerce and labor, but there was one reason why he could not accept it. As a railroad man he had often had and assume a position towards strikes the methods of unions would involve each county being as follows: and injure the president, so he surrend- County. ered his preference to Victor Metcalf and became secretary of the navy.

Most of the friction in the government departments at Washington arises over the question of jurisdiction. Just now the officers of the army and navy are fighting it out as to who shall have conwireless telegraphy. There three or four coast surveys that ought to be rolled into one; half a dozen bureaus of statistics when there ought to be one; and for many years there has been a contest between the general land office and the geological survey as to which should control public mineral lands, public forests, and the irrigation system. In congress the committee on public lands and the committee on arid lands are in constant turmoil, and the signal corps is now in the contest, to find out who owns the electricity. The geological survey ought to be rechristened the irrigation survey, for the work it does in geology is insignificant while the project it has laid out for itself in the arid regions is something tremen-

Since the adjournment of the St. Louis convention Col. Bryan has exhibited great judicion (if there isn't such a word, there ought to be). The sagacity he has shown is quite admirable. His sharp post-convention criticisms of candidates and platform are helping his party more than anything else he could possibly do. If he had flopped suddenly and accepted platform and candidate with effusion, his admirers would have been less likely to follow him. They are men who have minds of their own. These who think that Bryan, in lambasting and ridiculing Parker after hav- elect their delegates to the state coning given a pledge to support him, is vention be held at least seven days working for the success of the ticket, prior to August 2, 1904. find confirmation in the fact that few of his followers have bolted. now. The republican majority in the last campaign was about ten per cent of the total vote, and the issue was Prosser Best.

Bryan against McKinley, so that a change of a little more than five per cent of the last republican majority will now carry the state for the democrats. Republicans will not permit this if they can possibly help it, for they realize that to lose the state now will throw them into the minority for the next twenty years. If Parker and Davis*carry the state, the democrats will probably carry the state ticket and the legislature. There is not likely to be much change in any case in the congressional delegation.

"Uncle Jo" Cannon has lots of sense By repudiating the vice president nomination he has hitched himself to the speakership by hooks of steel. He can wield the gavel of the house as long as he wants to-unless he should be compelled to ask permission of democrats. He knew that the vice presidential nomination would start him on the road to political oblivion, eheck his public career, and turn him loose without a future. He had the grit peremptorily to decline. But now, if the democrats should carry the next house, he would require an audience exclusively of gen-

Stupidity of Men.

A group of women were talking about the stupidity of men at all times and their enormous denseness when their wives were trying to give them a hint.

"You know one day we had company unexpectedly, and we hardly had enough to go around," said one woman. "I tried to catch my husband's eye to convey to him that he was serving the meat too generously. But he would not take the hint. When he had given out the last bit, there were two plates still unfilled. What do you suppose that shameless man did? The claim of gloves by ladies as a reward when they have stolen a kiss from a sleeping man is alluded to by Gay (1688-1732):

Cleely, brisk maid, steps forth before the And kissed with smacking lips the snoring For custom says, "Whoe'er this venture

For such a kiss demands a pair of gloves."

In chapter 5 of "The Fair Maid of Perth," by Sir Walter Scott, Catherine leaves her chamber on St. Valentine's morning and finding Henry Smith asleep gives him a kiss. The glover says to him:

"Come into the booth with me, my son, and I will furnish thee with a fitting theme. Thou knowest the maiden who ventures to kiss a sleeping man wins of him a pair of gloves.'

And in the following chapter she accepts it .- Notes and Queries.

A Lost Necklace.

Quantities of ornaments are lost each year at the drawing rooms or courts at Buckingham palace, and only a very small proportion is recovered.

A very strange story is still told about a diamond necklace which was found at one of the state balls some years ago. It happened that one of Queen Victoria's ladies in waiting picked up a diamond necklace from the floor. As she stood with it in her hand a lady came quickly forward and claimed it.

The finder was very firm, however, and declared it was her duty to give it in to the lord chamberlain's office, as this was the rule with regard to any thing found in the palace. The lady protested in vain, but the oddest thing was that this necklace never was claimed and is probably still at the lord chamberlain's office.

BETTER THAN ORATORY.

the Secret of One Clever Lawyer's Unvarying Success.

One of the most common defects of recently admitted lawyer is a striving for oratorical display. A successful older practitioner endeavors, on the other hand, to give the jury a heart to beart talk. The ways of an eagle in the air, of a serpent upon a rock, of a ship in the midst of the sea and of a man with a maid are as A B C compared with the methods usually pursued by the twelve good men and true. It seems a trifle odd at first that a dozen individuals who separately are shrewd, sharp business men should collectively be guilty of the most absurd performances, but the fact must be reckoned on nevertheless.

A story is told of two farmers who were returning home, one of them from jury duty in a neighboring town. "Lawyer Smith is a great orator," said one-"a perfect Daniel Webster. My, how I hated to decide against him in the three cases he tried!"

"How about Lawyer Jones, who was on the other side?"

"Oh, shucks! Why of course he wins all his cases. I heard every one of 'em, and they were the simplest things. He just explained things to the jury. He didn't have to do any hard talking at all. You couldn't kelp but agree with him."-Success.

Galileo's Caustle Humor.

In a biography of Galileo some sto ries are told of the caustic humor of that bold investigator. Lotario Sarsi, a writer on science, having said that the Babylonians used to cook eggs by whirling them in a sling. Galileo re plied: "The cause of such an effect is very remote from that to which it is attributed, and to find the true cause I shall reason thus: If an effect does not follow with us which followed with others at another time it is because in our experiments something is wanting which was the cause of the former success, and if only one thing is wanting to us that one thing is the true cause. Now we have eggs and slings and strong men to whirl them, and yet they will not become cooked; nay, if they were hot at first they more quickly become cold, and since nothing is wanting to us but to be Babylonians it follows that being Babylonians is the true cause why the eggs became cooked and not to the friction of the air, which is what I wish to prove."

In "Gossip From Paris During the Second Empire" A. B. N. Peat, the author, tells a story of Rossini, who was much dogged by the lion hunters: "Once a Russian lady outstripped the limits even of Rossini's patience and, having watched his daily promenade during several days, sent a message to his house expressive of her desire to be received by him. The reply to this strange communication was: 'I do nothing for nothing. If the lady brings me a fine bunch of asparagus she will be welcome, and she can take a view of me at her leisure.' Then, pointing to his waist, which had attained a somewhat aldermanic rotundity, he added, 'The lady may even walk round me if she pleases, but I must have my asparagus."

Insect Traps. Brazilian birds, fly catchers, display a brilliantly colored crest easily mistaken for a flower cup. Insects, attracted by what appears to be a freshly opened blossom, furnish the birds with food. An Asiatic lizard is entirely colored like the surface of the desert plains where it lives except that at each angle of the mouth blooms a brilliant red folding of the flesh exactly resembling a little flower that grows in the sand. Insects lured by the seeming flower are incontinently disillusioned when they settle upon it.

A Trip Through Yellowstone Park

is what everyone hopes to have—some day. It is the most wonderful trip in the world. There are more than 3000 square miles of weird, marvelous, unimaginable things that can be seen nowhere else, therefore if one ever sees them one must go to the Park, in the heart of the magnificent Rockies with snow tipped peaks all around. If Old Faithful geyser, a Paint Pot, Mud Volcano, or Emerald Pool were to be found in Lincoln park, Chicago; Central park, New York; or Fairmount park, Philadelphia; the people would flock to see it or them by tens of thousands. For a very small sum, comparatively, all these and hundreds more of nature's unduplicated marvels can be seen between June 1 and September 30 of each year, and one will enjoy, to boot, the best coaching trip in the country.

The Northern Pacific folder on Yellowstone Park, just issued, is a new, right up to date. Enely illustrated dessertation on this Yellowstone Park trip. #### NOBLE TALKS IRRIGATION

Tells a Large Audience at Club Rooms Saturday Night What the Government Will or Won't Do-New State Legislation Badly Needed

There was a large turnout of citizens at the Commercial Club rooms last Saturday evening to meet T. A. Noble, chief of the national reclamation service, and to hea him discuss the question of irrigation in the State of Washington from the government's standpoint. H. B. Scudder presided and introduced the speaker, who spoke as

"At the suggestion of a few of your business men, I am before you to explain the purposes and aims of the reclamation service, the work already undertaken in the state, and the conditions under which any irrigation project could be undertaken in the Yakima valley. It has seemed to me that the people for whom this law was framed should fully understand its limitations, and the necessary conditions of its application. The law was framed for the settler. It was proposed to irrigate There is at least 400,000 acres that could about 35,000 acres in the Cowiche and be irrigated. There is an abundance of Ahtanum basins. Assuming that it water to irrigate this much land, if per second for each one hundred acres, it. It is for the people of this valley Tietan river about ten miles above its means of bringing about the ultimate junction with the Naches, three hundred and fifty cubic feet of water per second. Below this point are numerous ditches-about twenty-one in all-using more than five cubic feet of water per second, varying from one to six hundred and fifty cubic feet of water per second, taking water from the Naches and Yakima rivers, the aggregate amount being about sixteen hundred cubic feet of water per second, or more than twice the extreme low water flow of the river at Union gap. These appropriators had all acquired rights under the state law, some had completed their appropriations, others whose original plans and notices contemplated the use of additional water. How much each ing, see Dick the Tailor, over Orpheum appropriator has a legal title to under theatre.

the state law could not be determined. and probably cannot be fully ascertained without a decision of the supreme court. If we should take the opinion of each appropriator as to the amount he was entitled to, the Yakima river and its tributaries could not supply the demand during the irrigation season. If we assume that each irrigator has title to only what water he was using at the time, we would probably be estimating less than the courts would allow. The fact, however, remains that during the lowest stage of the river at Union gap, practically all the water and more is now diverted, and any additional diversion above this point would deprive some of these people from the use of water to hich they have title under the state law There remains to the government the possibility of storing in some natural basin or lake sufficient water for its use without interfering with the natural low water stage of the river.

"There are storage basins of sufficent capacity in the head waters of the Naches and Yakima rivers for this purpose. Assuming that the cost of such torage is not more than the project will stand, the government will still have doubtful title to the use of water in the river, since it will be impossible to determine what proportion of the flow s the natural flow, to which the prior appropriator has a title, and what proportion is stored, to which the subsequent appropriator would have title. This condition is aggravated by the fact that the amount of water to which all prior appropriators have acquired title, has not been determined, and there is ne state law specifying the manner in which they can be determined.

A private corporation can and does run more or less risk in expenditures for irigation purposes, but the rights

RAINING CATS AND DOGS.

Various Explanations of the Origin of This Expression.

Many explanations have been given of the origin of the expression "raining cats and dogs." One is that it is a perversion of the French "catadoupe," a waterfall-"it is raining a catadoupes," or cataracts. Another explanation is that the male blossoms of the willow tree, which are used on Palm Sunday to represent the branches of palm, were called "cats and dogs" in some parts of England, where they increase rapidly after a few warm April showers, and the belief prevailed that the rain brought them.

Others trace the sing to northern mythology, in which the cat is said to The Democrat and Cincinnatti Enhave great influence on the weather, and sailors still have a saying, "The cat has a gale of wind in her tail," when she is unusually frisky. Witches that rode upon the storms were said to assume the form of cats, and the stormy northwest wind is called "the cat's nose" in the Harz mountains even at the present day. Then the dog is a symbol of wind, which in old German pictures is figured as the head of a dog or wolf from which blasts issue. The cat therefore symbolizes a downpour of rain; the dog, strong gusts of wind, which accompany it, and so a rain "of cats and dogs" is a heavy rain with wind.

Evolution of the Bayonet. The sweynes-feather (hog's bristle), which seems to have been the original prototype of the bayonet, was a long rapier blade, fixed in a handle and carried in a sheath, which was given to a musketeer for defense after he had discharged his piece. Stuck by its handle in the muzzle of his gun, it constituted a very efficient weapon for acting against pikemen. To diminish his incumbrance the sweynes-feather and musket rest were combined, the latter forming a sheath for the former, in the reign of James I. Toward the latter part of the civil was the use of the musket rest was abandoned, and it became the practice to stick the dagger by its handle into the muzzle of the piece after discharging it.

In 1689 two rings were added by which the bayonet was placed on the muzzle without interfering with the This improvement, the inven tion of General Mackay, an English officer, was introduced into the French army by Vauban in 1703. By the Eng lish themselves it was not adopted un til after the battle of Fontenoy (1745). where the advantages its use conferred on the French were only too painfully manifest, the Duke of Cumberland's army being defeated with the loss of 15,000 men.-Pearson's Weekly.

His Own Manuscript.

George Ade, in the early days of his career, before the "Fables In Slang" had brought him fame, called, one morning in Chicago upon a Sunday editor on a mission from a theatrical man

"I have brought you this manu script"- he began, but the editor, looking up at the tall, timid youth, interrupted:

"Just throw the manuscript in the wastebasket, please," he said. very busy just now and haven't time to do it myself."

Mr. Ade obeyed calmly. He resumed "I have come from the - theater, and the manuscript I have just thrown in the wastebasket is your comic farce of 'The Erring Son,' which the man ager asks me to return to you with thanks. He suggests that you sell it to an undertaker, to be read at funerals." Then Mr. Ade smiled gently and withdrew.

"Capping" Crows.

The following account is given in Country Life of the way in which pilfering crows are dealt with by Italian agriculturists: A hole of a certain depth is dug in the ground, at the bottom of which is placed some decayed meat. A funnel shaped wedge of paper is then inserted into the hole, the upper edge of the paper being coated with birdlime. "Maitre Corbeau" sees the food, descends to grasp it, and when he has firm hold of it he rises up again. His head is, however, swathed with the paper cap, and in his mad endeavor to rid himself of it he circles up to extraordinary heights in the air, revolving constantly and at so rapid a pace that, soon overcome with giddiness, he falls to the earth dead.

The Cashew Nut.

The cashew nut serves a unique purpose as a cosmetic in the West Indies, where women desiring to remove excessive tan anoint the skin with an oil from the outer surface of the raw nut. For two weeks the patient must retire from society, for the face and hands so treated turn black. At the end of a fortnight's seclusion, however, the woman who has undergone the cashew treatment emerges, observers state, "with skin and complexion as fair as a

It is just as pronounced in Lincoln county, where all the republican papers have bolted the ticket; in Garfield county, where the only republican paper has bolted; in Adams county, and in every other county of eastern Washington.

There is good evidence that the republican revolt against corporation rule is almost as bad in western Washington. In Pierce county most of the voters who supported Mayor Campbell for reelection will resent his defeat through railroad influence by voting against the Farrell ticket. Even in King county Farrell's ticket will not poll more than four-fifths of the normal republican vote. The people of the state regardless of party are now thoroughly aroused to the dangers of lobby rule and they are determined to put an end to it next November by the overwhelming defeat of the railroad ticket.—Walla Walla States-

The Road to Tanana.

A representative of the Chicago syndicate that is furnishing the money to build the Alaska Central railroad was in Seattle last week and reported that the country through which the survey for the road runs is one of the richest on the continent. Its resources are more diversified than hose of any other section of equal extent, and he is more than pleased with the future prospects of the railroad. The latter is now in operation over a distance of several miles, and construction work is being pushed to Lake Canai. #### POISON OF THE RATTLER.

Not Nearly as Dangerous as It Is Popularly Supposed to Be. "There is a good deal more fright about the bite of a rattlesnake than there is actual danger," said a well known physician recently. "I do not mean to say that the bite of a rattler is not a very serious thing, but I do mean to say that this particular sort of snake is really not so ready or apt to 'get in his bite' as some others.

"In the first place, there is the now generally credited fact that the rattler is the most honest of snakes. He doesn't 'pick a fight.' He doesn't lay in wait for any one. He won't run away, of course, for he is a plucky reptile, but he will curl up and give you a fair warning from those rattles of his before he attempts to strike. I remember once in the west finding a rattler just ahead of my horse's fore feet. I had no weapon of any sort, so I rode on, passing within a few inches of the reptile. The snake was curled and ready for my horse in case the animal side stepped, but as we did nothing of that sort we were allowed to pass in peace.

"Again, the truth is that the poison of the rattler does not get into the wound inflicted by the fangs in the average human being. For the average human being nowadays is clothed, and the holes in the fangs through which the poison comes are rather far up toward the roof of the mouth. Consequently very often the point of the fangs may enter the skin, while the poison dribbles out harmlessly enough upon the trousers or the boot. It is then that the 'victim' gets scared, fills up on whisky-a bad thing in bona fide cases of rattlesnake bite-and believes himself marvelously cured when he wakes up next day."-Philadelphia

Little Henry's Questions. Little Henry was reading ancient history stories. "Pa," said he suddenly.

"Yes," said pa. "Fire ahead." "That's funny," said little Henry. "1 was just thinking of such things. Now, did the old Romans light their houses with Roman candles?"

"I shouldn't wonder," said pa, chuckling. "Nero, at least, indulged in a deal of fireworks. Anything good else? "Yes," replied little Henry. "Did the Laying the "Ghost." The Earl of Onslow tells a very effective story. His beautiful old place, Clandon, suddenly became possessed of a "ghost," and the servants of the place were almost terrified out of their wits by the noises they heard and the sights they saw or imagined. The reputation of the mansion became noisabroad, and at last Lord Onslow took a short cut to end the mystery. He assembled his servants and gave it out to them that he was determined to have no more of this sort of thing. For the future all members of his family would sleep with loaded revolvers by their side, and at the first suggestion of a noise they would send a buliet in its direction to investigate the cause. Clandon nowadays is quite commonplace in its immunity from the uncanny.-London Globe.

I resolved to go from door to door in the business part of the town, without Horehound Syrup and apply Ballard's reference to the kind of business. I had visited some twenty stores and manufacturing places when I struck the headquarters of the police department. True to my resolution, I went storm, especially at night, in my tent. in. The inspector was in a bad humor about something, and I considered it a mere waste of time to apply to him, but I would not go back on my resolution

"What do you want?" he asked gruffly.

"Anything. Detective work, if you have any."

"Detectives! Blunderers rather. want a good detective right now, and I can't get one. How much experience have you?"

"None." He sat for a moment thinking, then said: "My detectives are all known to the crooks. I have a mind to try you on a case because you're not known. The -th National bank was robbed last night, and the robbers are trying to get out of town with the swag. If I arrest them, they won't have the money on them, so I'm letting them run. Suppose I put you on to one of them, do you think you could make yourself out stupid enough for him to send the stuff out of town by you?"

"I can do a very hard job of trying,"

I replied. He considered awhile, then instructed me to go to a certain cheap hotel and put up as a guest from the country. Bill O'Neil, one who was suspect ed of the robbery, was there, or had been there. I was to gain his confidence in the hope that he would send me out with at least a part of what had been taken from the bank. I fixed my self up in country costame and went to the place designated. A man answering the description of Bill O'Neil was sitting in the office when I went up to register. I paid no attention to him nor he to me. I went into the diaing room, ate a good meal and on going out saw O'Neil sitting where I had left him. I bought a five cent cigar and while I was smoking it walked up to O'Neil and asked him if he knew when the next train left for Spottswood, a village twenty miles out. He answered very gruffly that he didn't, but I sat down beside him and began to talk about the price of corn, hay and other country commodities. Presently be called out to the clerk, asking him about the Spottswood train, and received a reply that it would leave in an hour. He then asked what road it was on and on being informed said to me that he was going to a station on the Health is the second blessing that we hither side of Spottswood and we would go together. "That is," he added, "if I can see a man before train When a man assumes a public trust time." He couldn't see "a man" before he should consider himself as public train time and asked me if I would take a parcel to Cottonwood. He would Everybody likes and respects self telegraph his partner to be on the look-

"Come up to my room. I've a bottle there, and I'll blow you off."

It was plain he wouldn't act where others could see. We went to the room and he gave me the bundle. While he was getting out his bottle with his back toward me I jabbed a sharp knife into the package. The blade met with no resistance and I caught sand and sawdust in my hand. I had just time to put up the knife and thrust the bundle into my pocket when O'Neil turned, and I received my liquor with a smile.

I asked for a second drink and a third and so on as long as O'Neil would give me one. I waxed merry as I drank, and I soon saw by the expression of O'Neil's face that he was quite willing I should get drunk. At last instead of taking my train I fell over on the bed in an apparent stupor. Had I not possessed a strong head I would have been all I appeared. It was now quite dark, and I was snoring lustily. O'Neil turned off the light, and I heard a key turn and a drawer open. Then he went out, locking the door on the outside. I jumped up, glanced out the window, hung outside on the sill and let myself drop twenty feet or more to an extension and then down another big drop to the street, taking position on a corner where I could see every egress. I waited half an hour and was about to give up the job when I saw a "hayseed" like myself go out through a side door. Something-I don't know what-induced me to shadow him. I tracked him to a railway station, where I directed a depot official to call a policeman while I watched my man. In a few minutes the "hayseed" was arrested. On him was found the plunder done up in a bundle similar to the one that had been given to me. O'Neil was also arrested. He told me that as mine was a new face he was uncertain whether I was a detective or not. Finally he concluded that whatever I was he would send me off with a dummy bundle. Then seeing a chance to lock me in he transferred the money to one of his gang made up to play my

It Is One Continuous, Dazzling, Awe Inspiring Performance.

If the reader of this has never been "I had been ill and had lost my po- in a mountain thunderstorm at an eleseveral gray hairs to his head. To me a thunderstorm back east held no special terrors, and frequently I have been out in such a demonstration without feeling any especial nervousness. Up here on the Rocky mountains things are different, and I confess now to live in awful, abject terror of a thunder-I suffer this terror notwithstanding the fact that so far the storms have in every instance except one gone around or beneath us without even raining enough to wet the ground. But it is the "going around and beneath" that gets on to my nerves. In the first place imagine what it is to be one and one-half miles nearer a rip roaring thunderstorm than one is at Pittsburg. There you have occasional flashes of lightning; here it is one continuous, dazzling. awe inspiring performance. The lightning strikes, too, for it is no uncommon thing during a storm to hear the rocks splintering and cracking where one especially vigorous bolt has landed.

Add to this nerve racking exhibit the most awful detonations of thunder that you can imagine and a "straight blowing" wind that sometimes makes the flaps of your tent play a ragtime melody, and you have some idea of a mountain thunderstorm. The thunder is worse than the sound of a mighty battle. It bangs up against the mountain side and reverberates and rolls off into one ear splitting concussion after another until you, lying quaking in your tent, fully believe that the next "boom" will split the mountain and valley in twain and land you in China or some other seaport town.

I lay one night and with chattering teeth counted five distinct thunderstorms come up to the edge of the plateau on which my tent stands and each time go through with an electrical performance that would give a stone man a dumb ague, and through it all not a cupful of water fell on my tent. Later on in the night, when I had about regained something like my usual majestic calm of mind, it began to rain steadily, and the thunder and lightning didn't even whisper. They had doubtless gone off down the canyou, scaring some other poor tenderfoot half out of his wits. These electrical displays are not seemingly much dreaded by the people who live in high altitudes. They comfortingly declare that a tornado or cyclone is unknown in the mountains. But sometimes these mountain storms go off through a canyon to the foothills and the plains. Then there is something doing .- Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

Wells and wife are nome a Southerner by birth, said: "It is beagain from their vacation trip to the cause we have been having plenty of Sound. They report a most pleasant rain, sir, which makes the country, sir. For the first time in years we have plenty of grass, sir." And then after rolling a fresh quid of tobacco about his mouth and expectorating freely, he continued: "But the worst thing about it, sir, is that cattle ain't worth a d-Work was begun this week on the ex- sir." The scribe condoled with the old avation for the new M. E. church. A. fellow over the poor outlook for a price for beef cattle and then left him to his own reflections. Going down through the sand hills of Nebraska and into the corn country we noticed that the corn looked yellow and sickly and in many fields seemed to be taken by weeds. "Too much rain" everybody said when questioned. The ground was so wet that the farmers were unable to get into their fields to cultivate. This condition held good all through Nebraska and northern Missou-

Coming back nearly three weeks later conditions were rather worse than better. The rain had kept coming intermittently, but was beginning to let Harvest time, however, was at hand and the ripened grain demanded attention so the farmers had to start their reapers instead of the cultivators. J. D. Medill of the Democrat returned As a result of the unfavorable condithat country this year.

Over in Kansas, we were told, there was so much moisture in the wheat fields that it was found to be impossible to use reaping machinery and that the farmers in many places had to fall back on the old fashioned cradles and cut their grain by hand.
